It was a long, dreary day that followed and Bunny Lady had just about given up hopes of ever seeing Billy Bunny, when she heard her name called and there stood Billy Bunny his face all smiles. At his side fluttered a queer little fellow.

Bunny Rabbit heard the commition and came out of the burrow. He stopped short and glared at Billy Rabbit.

"Bunny Rabbit, meet my friend, Big-Eared Bat," said Billy Bunny, a happy smile on his face. "Big-Eared Bat has the largest ears of any animal in the world for the size of his body. Look him over and see for yourself."

Big-Eared Bat was quite a little fellow, much smaller than Brown Bat, but his great long ears were half as long as his body and head put together. He was a happy little fellow and hopped around and made everybody laugh, even Bunny Rabbit himself.

"You win, Billy Bunny," laughed Bunny Rabbit shaking Billy Bunny's paw. "Big-Eared Bat has me bested. My daughter is yours," and right then and there he sent word and invited in all their friends to the wedding. Billy Bunny and Bunny Lady were married, and made a burrow under the old stone wall near the mill-pond and there they have lived happily ever since.

SMALL ENVELOPES ARE INCONVENIENT

Cannot Be Passed Properly Through Cancelling Machines.

During the holiday seasons many people transmit their Christmas and New Year's greetings by means of small cards enclosed in visiting card envelopes or diminutive envelopes of a similar nature.

Small envelopes cannot be satisfactorily passed through the electric postmarking machine. The cancellation mark covers too great a portion of the surface obliterating in many instances a part of the address. This necessitates picking out the small envelopes from the other letters and detailing employees, who might be more profitably engaged, to stamp them by hand.

The small size of the envelopes renders the sortation and the making up of bundles more difficult and hampers the work of the office at a time when it is most desirable to handle the mails as expeditiously as possible.

The public can assist the Post Office by refraining from using envelopes smaller than 3 inches by 4 inches.

NOTE OF OPTIMISM SOUNDED AT MEETING BANK OF MONTREAL

Sir Vincent Meredith, President, Stated That in the Light of Present Day Conditions, He Looked Forward With the Utmost Confidence to Canada's Future.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, General Manager, Points Out That Bank Had Never Been in a Better or Strong er Position to Undertake New Business—Bountiful Crop Has Helped Situation in Canada.

The annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Montreal, held at the head office, marked the close of a successful year. The annual statement showed total assets of $755,147,876, and liquid assets of $450,459,068, equal to 66% of total liabilities to the public.

Sir Vincent Meredith, President, in his address to shareholders, reviewed conditions in Canada and touched on the more important trade developments in the outside financial centres where the Bank is represented. Sir Vincent struck an optimistic note regarding the outlook in Canada, but stressed the urgent necessity for the Government to deal with the problem of the losses being sustained by the National Railways and to get taxation down to the level existing in the neighboring country.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, General Manager, referred to a number of the outstanding features of the Bank's statement, and stated that the Bank had never been in a better or stronger position to undertake new business. He expressed the belief that people must wake up to the fact that public debt is a burden on the individual back and the bigger it gets the more money it takes out of the individual pocket. Sir Frederick also pointed out that there were indications of renewed financing between Canada and London.

President's Address.

In interviewing the business of the past year, our Balance Sheet indicates the general trend of events. Our deposits, as compared with two years ago, show a large increase, while our loans during the same period are considerably reduced.

Our profits are in consequence somewhat adversely affected, but we are left in an unusually strong position to meet any calls which increased activity in trade may make upon us. Notwithstanding these conditions, our dividend and bonus have been earned and taxes paid, and we have a balance to carry forward.

The abnormally high yields on prewar and war investments have dwindled as capital has accumulated, and the necessity of finding profitable investment has no doubt been largely responsible for the advance in the prices of stock exchange securities.

There is no question but that the trend of business is slowly but surely upward. As an evidence of this, car loadings are the largest on record, while wholesale and retail business shows a fair degree of increased activity. Textile industries are well employed, and there is more demand in the leather and allied trades. Improvement is also shown in other lines of business, although profits are curtailed in the grocery trade. There is little improvement in the lumber market in Eastern Canada, but western shipments by way of the Panama Canal have substantially increased.

Agriculture is our leading industry and on its profitable outcome the prosperity of the country largely depends. While unfavourable weather conditions restricted harvesting to some extent, the crop that was garnered this year is a very large one and, at present prices, will prove profitable to the farmer. The marketing of the crop will bring at least $500,000,000 of new money into Canada and will undoubtedly effect a liquidation in farmers' liabilities. This new money will flow into all channels of trade and be reflected in improved business conditions generally throughout the country.

Need For Public Economy.

The pressing necessity of restricting, so far as may be legitimately possible, all national expenditures is generally recognized, but unless it is followed by appropriate action which results in reduction in taxes, we cannot regard it as other than an ineffective gesture. If our expenditures should be so controlled that within a reasonable time Canadian taxes should not exceed those imposed in the United States, it would provide an important stimulus to industry and also an effective aid to immigration and colonization, the need for which is apparent. When I urge as strongly as I can that this measure of prudence and economy should be exercised, I do not do so with any feeling that lack of confidence in the country itself is warranted. In fact, I am more convinced than ever that the country actually and potentially, possesses such wealth and opportunity that its future cannot be denied, and I deprecate most strongly expressions of opinion based upon local conditions and individual business which are perverted into pessimism as to the country's future when no real foundation for such a sentiment exists.

General Manager Reviews Situation.

In his review of the situation, Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor said in part:—

As you know, the good name we possess was never better than it is to-day. It is an asset which we value as we do our material resources and which it is our duty as well as our determination to preserve.

We have gone through another year of business depression and this is reflected to the disadvantage of banking profits. Fortunately our great earning power continues, though obviously our profits would have been larger had the industrial situation permitted us to put out more money to the trade and commerce of Canada rather than to loan on call in London and New York, or to buy high-class investments with a lesser yield.

As to the future, my special message to our shareholders at distant points and abroad is that for several reasons, including a bountiful harvest, there has come about a better and more hopeful feeling throughout Canada. In consequence, there is ground for thinking that we have passed through the worst of our bad times and that we can look for better general conditions, in which, naturally, our Bank must share, especially as we have never been in a better or stronger position to undertake new business.

Advertise in The Examiner

that he was living in the wilds of Canada and yet have a city at his beck and call.

Had a Chance One Time.

Jack declared that one time people living in that district had a chance to share the burden of citizenship with their northern neighbours but turned down the proposition. The siren appeal of sidewalks, sewers and schools failed to impinge on the consciousness of township folk and they preferred to pay the lower rate and perform the three days of statute labor demanded

Conditions in the year under review were neither so good nor so bad as extremists on either side have stated. As to the outlook, it is true that, taking the national railways into account, we are not balancing our national budget. This must not continue. We must sometime and somehow contrive to live within our means and begin to pay off our debts. With good management of our affairs we should be well able to do this, and we will do it as soon as our people wake up to the fact that public debt is a burden on the individual back and that the bigger it gets the more money it takes out of the individual pocket.

Tremendous Natural Advantages.

Before the war, conditions of living in the United States and Canada were much alike, and we had grown accustomed to that order of things, but the war put us behind and put the United States ahead, so comparison at present is futile.

This same condition of prosperity in the United States has also resulted in far too many of our people crossing the border. True, Canada is not the only country whose citizens are attracted by the prosperity of the United States, but, speaking for ourselves, there has been a cause for emigration that is more disturbing than the fact itself. Living next door, we naturally stand in closest comparison and are more exposed than any other country to a drain on our population from the fact that at the moment we are carrying a heavy burden of debt, while our neighbours overflow with wealth. Against this, however, we have more than they to offer to the desirable settler who wishes to go on the land. Land hunger is a human instinct. We have good and cheap land in plenty, and eventually the tide of immigration will turn in our direction.

We have a fertile soil, vast mineral resources, inexhaustible fisheries, mighty forests, unequalled water power, transportation galore, and an industrious people—in fact, all that goes to make a great and strong nation—but prudent management of our affairs is fundamental. Without that all our manifold advantages mean nothing.

We should ever keep before us the fact that Canada has immense potentialities, and that the mistakes of the past are reparable. Also, we have a splendid manhood east and west, with a loyal love of country and a unanimous determination to preserve our political independence.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

An amendment called for adherence to the policy of constituency autonomy and the right of any local association to nominate candidates for the Legislature or the House of Commons.

H. T. M'FADDEN VICE-PRESIDENT CENTRAL LEAGUE

W. L. Kennedy of Kingston, Is President—Annual Meeting Yesterday.

OSHAWA MAY QUIT.

Club Lost $1,400 Last Season—League Has Surplus.

EBLLEVILLE, December 10. — The second annual meeting of the Central Ontario Baseball League was held yesterday at the Library building at the Canadian National Station, Belleville, with the President, C. M. Anderson, of Oshawa, in the chair.

All clubs excepting Oshawa were represented, and from the feeling expressed by Mr. Anderson, it was thought unlikely that Oshawa would be represented in the C.O.B.L. this year.

J. Daley and W. L. Kennedy represented Kingston; H. T. McFadden and "Shiner" Johnson represented Peterboro, while Alderman-elect M. P. Duff and Walter Gero looked after the interests of the Belleville Club. Secretary Newton Thompson was also on hand.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and adopted and the league for the first time in many years showed a gratifying balance. The statement showed $235.06 in the treasury.

Considerable attention was paid at the meeting to the recent fiasco over the Provincial finals. Mr. Kennedy of Kingston said that Kingston held that not sufficient notice was given in going into the finals, and that the O.B.A.A. was asking the impossible

The Johnston Cup was presented to Manager "Joe" Daly of Kingston for the C.O.B.L. champions by President C. M. Anderson. For the Oshawa club, it was pointed out that they lost $1400 in the season's games but 50 interested men of the Motor City came forward and wiped off the debt and the club is now free of incumbrances Still the officers of the old club have resigned and no one is left to carry on. The club is still affiliated with the C.O.B.L. and it was asked that nothing be done in the way of taking in a club in the place of Oshawa until it was learned what Oshawa's intentions would be.

Officers elected are as follows:

President, W. L. Kennedy, Kingston: 1st Vice-President, H. T. McFadden, Peterboro; second Vice-President, N. P. North, Belleville; third Vice-President not elected; Secretary-Treasurer, Newton H. Thompson, Belleville, re-elected.

HORSES REQUIRE CALK PROTECTION

Inspector Reid Indignant Because of Drivers' Carelessness in City.

Having observed that horses were making but little progress in learning to skate on the city streets, The Examiner visited the Police Station to find out why people owning and operating those animals preferred to do so at the risk of losing them rather than expend a nominal sum for sharp calked shoes.

Inspector Reid said that he had remonstrated with a farmer yesterday whose horses were slipping dangerously on the icy pavement. The Inspector told him to take the animals to a blacksmith shop, but the farmer wanted to know if it wouldn't be all right to wait till he went home. While they were talking one of the horses slipped and fell but was able to get up again under its own power. Needless to say, after that graphic display the man took his horses with all possible speed to the nearest smithy for new gear. At this time the farm horses are hauling heavy loads of wood and hay, and it is distressing that the farmers have not sufficient interest in their own welfare and that of their beasts to protect them against broken legs.

The Inspector pointed out that a human being walking along the street without rubbers could make progress only with great difficulty, and he is not dragging a heavy load. The horse, if pulling a sleigh, is forced to expend more effort, as besides the weight of the load there is the anxiety caused by uncertain footing. Firms which use horses within the city should look at the matter from the standpoint of efficiency as more work may be done by a properly equipped horse.

The Inspector agreed that motor accidents might be caused at this time by the sudden seizing of brakes, which would tend to cause a skid even if the car was equipped with chains.

WILL ENTER CONTEST.

Alderman Nagle Phelan Will Be Candidate For Some Office.

In the course of an interview with Nagle Phalen, he intimated to The Examiner his intention of contending either the mayoralty seat or appearing again in search of Aldermanic honors. He said that his term as a member of the City Council expired at the end of this year, but that he purposed joining the field of aspirants in some capacity which he had not as yet definitely selected.

Moderate Move Up, But Volume of Trade Small

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press)—Stock price worked moderately higher today as speculative interest was heightened by favorable trade developments and another flood increased and extra dividends. Trading, however, was on a reduced scale with complete absence of the recent violent fluctuations in high priced motors and specialties. The revival of interest in railroad shares followed the establishment of Southern Railway on a $7 annual dividend basis, a three per cent extra by the Mobile and Ohio and prospects for favorable action by other companies, including the Baltimore and Ohio. Southern Railway duplicated the year's high price of 117 5-8.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 10 (Canadian Press) — Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation on Nov. 30th, made public today, totalled 4,581,780 tons, an increase of 472,597 tons compared with the end of the preceding month.

Profit-Taking Sales Caused Wheat Price Drop

CHICAGO, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press) — Heavy sales turned wheat prices downward today after an early advance that resulted from reports of increasing crop damage in Argentine. Selling on the advance was largely in the nature of profit taking. Houses that of late had been aggressive buyers changed their market position. Opening 1-8 off to 3-4 up new style December 178 and May 173 1-4 to 173 3-4, was followed by a general up turn to 180 December and 174 5-8 May, but then by an irregular descent to 174 1-4 for December and 168 3-4 for May.

Oats started a shade to 3-8c higher, May 46 1-2 to 46 5-8 and later underwent a material sag.

Prices Of Mines Drop Back Volume Of Trade Decreases

TORONTO, Dec. 10. (Canadian Press).—With a substantial decrease in the volume of trading, recessions set in on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning. Gonsolidated West Dome Lake, the active leader, was sold down a point and three-eighths at 16 7-8, and McKinley Darragh lost 2¼ at 21. Goldale dropped 1¼ at 31¾. Premier sold down two, Vickers two, Keeley eight and Castle Tretheway five.

Prices Generally Firm Brazilian Was the Leader

TORONTO, Dec. 10. (Canadian Press)—Brazilian, British Columbia Fishing and Consolidated Smelters were the outstanding stocks on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Both Brazilian and Smelters were sold substantially higher, but British Columbia Fishing, though firm, moved very little. Brazilian was sold up to 80¼ and closed at that high, a gain of two and a half points. Smelters advanced to 150, and likewise closed the morning at the high, which represented a gain of four and a half points. B.C. Fishing advanced a quarter to 64. The strength of the banks was a feature, Imperial selling one and five-eighths higher at 209½. Commerce advanced a point at 225. Duluth Superior also gained a point at 32.

After the business was finished, a Christmas Responsive Service was led by Nina Andrus, the president.

A dainty lunch was provided by the committee, Miss Mary Wood being convenor. Miss Ileen Rose gave a very pleasing piano solo, and Mrs. D. Foster presented her sister, Mrs. Freeman, with a Life Membership in the Circle.

This meeting marked the close of a spirited and very successful "copper" contest. A merry half hour was spent in counting the coppers, resulting in nearly thirty dollars. Those on the "1920" side were the winners, though the "1921's" did splendid work, especially Miss May Ritchie and Miss Mabel Robinson.

Final arrangements were also made for the coming bazaar, to be held in Taylor's Store on Saturday, 12th December.

CITY OFFICIALS VISITED HYDRO

NO AGREEMENT.

Yesterday a deputation from Peterborough, consisting of His Worship Mayor Turner, S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk; and Aldermen Jones, Denne, Crowe and Phelan, appeared before the Toronto Hydro officials, for the purpose of obtaining some pronouncement with regard to the operation of the radial lines and a decrease in the gas rates. During the course of the conference the City Council representatives intimated that the people of Peterborough were not likely to consider favorably any proposition which involved the taking over of the street railway system. On the other hand, the Hydro representatives stated that they had no desire for maintaining such an expensive memorial to the cause of public ownership as was at present operating in this city.

The deputation maintained that if the radial system could be proven to operate on a margin of profit there might be some incentive for investment.

His Worship the Mayor said he had nothing definite to divulge on the gas controversy, but that he hoped to be better informed before the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, which takes place tomorrow night.

PETES SQUEEZED CLOSE VICTORY FROM KITCHENER IN S.P.A. SERIES WINNING IN OVERTIME BY 2 TO 1

Splendid Work of Dwyer and McLeod Helped Petes to Victory.

DEFENSES GOOD.

Kitchener Veterans and Youngsters Teamed Up Effectively.

(By F. D. C.)

The Peterborough Senior O.H.A. team is still in the running for the S.P.A. honours by reason of a 2 to 1 overtime victory over Kitchener at the Toronto Arena last night, but it was a tighter squeeze than four on the front seat of a flivver.

Kitchener gave the cup holders the warmest kind of an argument and the Petes were all out to nose them out by an eyelash after ten minutes overtime.

The Dutchmen scored the only goal of the first period, held the Petes without a score until the last minute of the second session, more than held their own in a scoreless last period and, although beaten out in the overtime, were dangerous until the final bell.

With a combination of experienced veterans and fast juniors, a well planned defensive system, and the ability to shoot hard and accurately, the Green Shirts proved real opposition for the Petes, and to be frank, might quite as easily have been winners as the blue and white crew.

The two veteran defence players, George Karges and Ike Masters, and the equally seasoned pivot man, George Hiller, may have lost some of their speed but the Petes found these old birds had not forgotten how to play hockey. Karges and Masters worked well together on the defence and both rushed effectively. Karges has always been noted for his clever stickhandling and he still knows how to do it. Up in front Hiller flanked by two fast young players, Hamel and Hinsberger, engineered a number of smart plays and was always dangerous. Hinsberger's terrific shooting was a feature, the left winger rocking Dwyer on more than one occasion. Klem, the youngster in the nets, turned in a great game. He threw himself in the way of many dangerous shots and although he was not called upon to handle as many as Dwyer, his work in the second period kept the Petes from taking the lead.

Petes Improving.

The Petes have not yet hit their last year's stride, although their playing in the second period showed that they are on their way. They have now reached the semi-final stage of the sportmen's competition and on Monday night will battle with the winner of tonight's Parkdale-Preston fixture for the right to meet Port Arthur, the Allan Cup holders, in the final game, a week from tomorrow night.

The Peterboro heroes last night were Joe Dwyer and Bert McLeod. The goaler turned in a great card against as hard a shooting crew as the Petes have encountered. Nearly every man on the Kitchener line up packed a real shot and Dwyer had to move fast to handle their drives. McLeod's good checking and rushing made him stand out. Parker, handicapped by a sore leg, did not have as much success as usual in his rushes, but checked effectively. On the forward line there was no particular star, honours being about even in the attacking division.

A small crowd saw a real hockey game, marked by a very even battle and with a lot of action and clever playing by two evenly matched and well balanced outfits. The Petes had more speed than the losers but the latter's passing was better and their marksmanship was much more accurate.

The Two Teams.

Referee—M. J. Rodden.

It was fast hockey in the opening period, and Kitchener soon gave warning that it was to be a real battle by staging a number of passing runs that gave the Petes lots of trouble. The good stick-handling of Karges, Hiller and Masters combined with close checking by the whole Green shirt squad featured the early stages, and the Petes found difficulty in shaking off the opposition. Although the S.P.A. winners were dangerous on a number of raids into Kitchener territory, The Westerners tested Dwyer with some bullet drives from outside the defence, but found beating him from there an impossible task. Meanwhile the Petes were having no better luck against Klem. The period was about half over when White drew the first penalty of the game for holding. Almost immediately after Collins was chased for tripping. With White back and Collins still in the penalty box, Kitchener got their first and only goal. A clever rush by Roth was mainly responsible for the counter. Roth worked inside after some pretty stick-handling, and although Dwyer blocked his first shot and also nailed a rebound the rubber bounced out in front of the net, and Gross batted it in.

Play was even for the balance of the period, although a second penalty to Collins did not help the Petes much. The nearest they came to tieing up the score was in the last minute of the first session, when Bailey worked inside, only to have Klem flop to his knees and save the situation.

Petes' Best Period

The second was the Petes' best period, although the Green shirts held them scoreless until the last minute of the stanza. The Petes showed a world of speed and determination throughout the period and only splendid work by the younster in the Kitchener net kept the S.P.A. champs from setting up a safe lead. They set a rapid pace and steamed in with attack after attack, but Klem was always in the way. Several fine rushes by McLeod looked like scores until Klem did his stuff. McLeod, Rose and Bogardis combined beautifully, but the shot was blocked and a similar fate befell two or three other close in attacks.

The Petes had a big edge at this stage, but the minutes were rapidly passing and still the Green shirts held their slender lead. The break came with the period almost over when Karges was benched for mixing it with Bailey, and White followed for dumping Ranger, leaving Kitchener two men short. The Westerners held the Petes out until Karges came back, but they were still a man short, when the score was tied. A rush by Ranger and Collins took Ranger's pass, and although Klem stopped the first drive Collins went in fast and swept the rebound into the net just before the bell rang.

Blank in the Third.

The third period was scoreless. Kitchener had a little better of the argument. The checking was very close in the early stages of the period and for ten minutes the teams did not have half a dozen real shots on the net. Then Kitchener staged a series of dangerous attacks and only great work by Joe Dwyer saved the situation. The Green shirts were stinging the rubber in with plenty behind it, but the veteran could not be beat. Spread-eagling once to kick out a bullet drive from Hinsberger that had "winning goal" marked all over it. It was a wonderful save and so was another equally, clever stop of a shot from the always dangerous Hiller in the last minute of the regular period.

The Pets, of course, were not letting Kitchener do all the attacking, staging a number of plays that gave the Kitchener supporters lots to worry about, but Klem failed the Petes' marksmen and the period ended with the score firmly knotted.

The Overtime.

After the usual rest, Referee Rodden sent the teams off in the overtime stuff. Three minutes after the start, the Petes bagged the million dollar marker when, from a face-off at one side of the Kitchener net, Collins passed the rubber back to Bailey, who drove the winning counter past Klem.

Kitchener were not through yet, not by any means. The Petes dropped a six man defence back, but the Green shirts threw their whole team on the attack and for seven minutes the Dutchment tried desperately to crash through for the tieing counter. Their chances were materially increased when Bert McLeod drew a penalty, and when Hiller pulled off a fast play by circling the net, the game looked to be tied up. His quick shot was deflected wide of the net, and Kitchener's last chance was gone: the Petes holding them safe for the balance of the ten minute overtime period.

2 O.H.A. TEAMS FOR LAKEFIELD

Intermediates and Juniors Will Be Organized For Group.

MANAGER CHOSEN.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 10—A meeting was held in the Veterans' rooms on Monday evening to discuss the O.H.A. situation. Dr. M. P. Kennedy occupied the chair and Mr. A. M. Fitzgerald acted as secretary. Dr. Kennedy in a brief address reviewed last season's activities and a general discussion followed.

It was moved and seconded that an intermediate team picked from the District League be entered in the O.H.A., and that a junior team composed of a combined Grove and village team be entered in the O. H.A. Mr. John Sabatino was appointed manager of the Junior team and Dr. M. P. Kennedy, manager of the Intermediates.

There is plenty of good material for a couple of first class teams and judging from the enthusiasm displayed at the meeting this will be a banner season.

The District League has been a great benefit to the village and the community and has done much to make the Lakefield rink a centre for winter sports not only for the village but the entire district.

SENATORS ENGAGE NEW YORK TO-NIGHT

Fourth Home Game in a Row For Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press)—What is expected to be one of the professional hockey classics of the 1925-26 season is booked here tonight when Tex Rickard's New York Americans meet the Senators in a scheduled N.H.L. fixture. This will be Ottawa's fourth home game in as many starts and it will be a great chance for the locals to increase their lead as league leaders by hanging up another victory.

New York will be at full strength and are just now going great guns, as their 6 to 2 victory over the Canadiens in Montreal Tuesday night testifies.

The Gothamites are all well known locally. The former members of the Hamilton Tigers with the New York club are all big favorites here while "Crutchy" Morrison and the famous "Bullet Joe" Simpson performed here with Edmonton two years ago. Earl Campbell is an Ottawa boy who played here for two season after coming from Edmonton.

"King" Clancy will be back in his usual position on the defence against against the Madisons and it is expected that the Senators will be at their very best for the contest.

Hockey's mystery man is still active. "Bud" Fisher, Grimsby's star goalie, received a wire offering him $4,000 a season.

NEW YORK'S BIG HOCKEY ARENA MAY SELL OUT FOR FIRST GAME

VISITED MONTREAL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10. (Canadian Press).—The fears that professional hockey might not "catch on" in New York, first expressed when Tex Rickard and his interests were allotted a franchise to operate a metropolitan team in the National Hockey League, are fast being undermined. Reports from officials of the new Madison Square Garden that a sell out is more than probable for the first home game of the New York Americans here on December 15 is taken as a certain indication that hockey is to become a popular winter sport. Then the fact that a large delegation of local newspapermen was sufficiently interested to journey to Montreal Tuesday night to witness their team in action is another sign that Canada's national game is "going over" in the United States.

The New York sport scribes in their accounts of the Americans' 6 to 2 victory over the Canadiens seem well satisfied with the showing of their team and also with the game in general. In the words of Frank Wallace, of the 'Sun,' the game developed "sixty minutes of football on skates to basketball tempo and tactics." Wallace says the match was fast, daring and thrilling, and continues: "Men charged through broken ice fields like Red Grange, took flying leaps like greyhounds over a series of barrels, spilled without regard for any portion of their anatomies, including the ears, and then got up to try it all over again."

Runyon's Remarks.

Damon Runyon, the sport expert of the New York American, thought things were serious for a time during the match. "The political, social and spiritual relations between Canada and the United States," he said, "were slightly strained when our Mr. Billy Burch and their (Canadiens). Mr. Billy Boucher dropped their curved clubs and took to smacking at one another with old-fashioned right-handers."

Mr. Runyon thought the game furnished plenty of excitement and remarked on the way Referee LaFlamme "kept chasing the players on both sides into what they call the penalty pen for elbowing and tripping." He also remarked on the fact that there was no undue demonstration when the former Hamilton, Ont., team stepped on the ice in their new star-spangled uniforms. The American's correspondent labelled Vernon Forbes, New York's goalie, as the star of the evening, "all leathered up in a sort of armor like a stage dummy."

CAMBRIDGE AND OXFORD IN TIE

Annual Soccer Match at Chelsea Before 5,000 Crowd.

SCORE TWO ALL.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Oxford and Cambridge played a drawn game in their annual soccer match at Chelsea yesterday. The score was two all.

Oxford—Harlow, Stephenson, N. Ashton, Boddington, German, Harwood, Barber, Scicluna, J. Smith. Chadder, Fisher.

Cambridge — Russell, De Roven, R. Smith, Herman, Whemell, Sanders, Robins, Morris, Robinson, Lowe, Piper.

The game was played in sunshiney weather though the pitch was heavy from Tuesday's thaw. Five thousand and two hundred spectators attended.

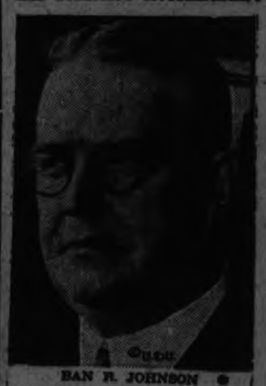
At the outset Harlow saved Robinson's fine shot from Piper's centre. Another Cantab raid resulted in a corner but Whewell shot over. At the other end Russell cleverly dealt with shots by Chadder, Barber and Fisher. After twenty-four minutes of play Whewell secured just outside the centre circle, and running a few yards scored with a terrific shot. Oxford then attacked, Russell saving from Barber finely. Soon afterwards Fisher took Ashton's long pass, centred accurately for Chadder to score with a fast shot at close quarters. Russell saved from Scicluna and Smith. Then, following good work by the Oxonians' left wing, Fisher, with a curling shot, almost caught the Cantab's custodian napping. The latter fell full length on the ground and turned the ball round the post. Even play followed to the interval.

Piper Scored.

Seven minutes after resumption Piper scored, the ball rebounding off the Oxford goalkeeper into the net. A minute later Scicluna equalized in a scramble in the goal mouth. From then on until the end there was plenty of go-ahead football, both goals having a number of wonderful escapes. Ten minutes from the finish Fisher beat Russell in a race for the ball, but instead of lobbing the ball over the goalie's head the Oxford centre sent it yards high. In the last five minutes both sides gained corners, but a strong defence prevailed.

The New York Yankees entertained a party of fifteen prominent New York newspaper men and cartoonists at their game in Montreal on Tuesday night. Manager Leo Dandurand, of Canadiens, entertained them at luncheon.

HIS SALARY INCREASED.



BAN B. JOHNSON

BAN JOHNSON'S SALARY RAISED

LONGER CONTRACT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press) — Ban Johnson, who a year ago was stripped of much of his powers and threatened with being deposed from the presidency of the American League for attacking the rule of Commissioner Landis, has staged a modern "return from Elba."

This seemed apparent to baseball observers last night after the same American League club owners who a year ago disciplined their chief had voted to add five years to Johnson's term of office, extending his contract from 1920 to 1935, and giving him an increase of $10,000 in salary which boosts his annual figure to $40,000.

Johnson's old contract, under which he received $30,000 a year, was torn up by the magnates, who approved by unanimous vote a new one embodying the additional term in office and increased salary.

The American League owners took issue with the action of the National League men on Tuesday in approving the use of resin by pitchers and favoring the playing of inter-sectional games on holidays.

American Leaguers frowned on both ideas, opposing any modification of the present pitcher's rules expressing their opinion that the present plan of sectional opponents meeting on holiday dates is satisfactory.

The American League took another important step when it voted to close its 1926 season on September 26, a week earlier than this year, to enable an earlier start for the world's series. The opening is slated for April 13 and the schedule details will be mapped out at a meeting in Washington, D.C., in February.

Disagree On Schedule

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 — Failure of the National League to agree on a tentative schedule which would assure closing the season prior to October 3, one week later than the American, yesterday contributed a new problem for discussion at the joint meeting of the two circuits today.

Athough President John A. Heydler held out hope that the schedule committee might find it possible to complete the campaign on September 20, he indicated that geographical and anti-Sunday baseball conditions faced by the older circuit pointed strongly to an October closing date.

HARRIS' WINTER JOB.

$7,000 For Managing Florida Team.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10—Stanley (Bucky) Harris, manager of the Washington club, American League champions, announced Wednesday he had signed a contract for $7,000 to manage a team in the Florida Winter League representing Coral Gables.

Coveleskie Best Pitcher By a Fractional Margin

CHICAGO, Dec. 10—Stanley Covelskie, of the Washington Senators and not Herb Pennock of the Yankees was the most effective pitcher in the American League in the 1925 season, it was announced last night at league headquarters.

Official averages recently published gave the New York southpaw the honor, but a rechecking showed that Coveleskie is credited with the lowest percentage of earned runs, the margin being by one one-hundredth of an earned run per game.

Corrected figures give Pennock an earned run per game percentage of 2.85 plus, while the Washington star allowed but 2.84 earned runs per game.

MARMORA TEAM WILL BE STRONG

Prospects Are Good For Capturing Hastings League League Trophy.

A GOOD RINK.

MARMORA, Dec. 10.—There is much enthusiasm among local hockey fans over the resurrecting of the Marmora team. In many a season during the last decade, a gallant team has done duty for the marble village. Prospects are good for a formidable team this season. There are many good players available, so that the career of the team will be watched with interest. It is understood that a meeting will be called in the immediate future to organize and elect officers. Messrs. A. T. Neal and Clifford Jones represented Marmora at the meeting of the new Hastings County League held in Madoc on Tuesday, Dec. 8th. The officers of the new League are as follows:

President — Mr. Tom Beatty, Tweed.

1st Vice-President—Mr. W. Nugent, Madoc.

2nd Vice-President — Mr. A. T. Neal, Marmora.

Secretary-Treasurer — Mr. Earl Luery, Stirling.

Executive to be composed of the manager of each of the four teams. A double schedule of games has been arranged, to conclude with one between those old rivals, Stirling and Marmora, at the latter rink on February 15. First and second teams in the League standing on the completion of the schedule will play off for the championship. Marmora has a very capable rink manager in the person of Mr. John Finnegan, and a thoroughly successful season for team and management is therefore anticipated.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 10.—At a meeting of hockey enthusiasts held in the Public Library last night, the boys decided to pass up the Junior O.H.A. on account of the expensive trips, and to place a team in the Trent Valley League, the winner of which enters the play-down for Intermediate O.H.A. honors. Norman Heavn was appointed manager; Jack Cowell, secretary-treasurer, and D. R. O'Hara will be asked to perform the duties of coach. There is no dearth of material, fourteen players having signified their intention of trying for a place on the team, most of them eligible for Junior hockey. The boys believe their youth, speed and aggressiveness will offset any advantage the older teams of the T.V. H.L. may have in experience.

With a town team in the Trent Valley League and a High School team in the Intercollegiate, Campbellford fans are assured of some first-class hockey games this coming winter.

In the forward swing the body does not go in ahead of the clubhead, nor does it follow after. There is a common assertion that the body follows the clubhead through when the swing is correctly made. This is what it appears to do, but the fact is, body and clubhead go absolutely together. Trying to correct the forward-lunging body by holding it back too much creates a second fault as bad as the first one, though a good rule is to lean toward the practice of holding the body back. If you will take a club to the top of the back swing then determine to hold your body to that fixed position while you swing forward, you will quickly see that, it being impossible to hold the body there, it naturally swings into the action in exactly the right place. This makes perfect timing possible with maximum clubhead velocity.

JACK DUNN'S PRICE.

Turned Down Cubs' Enquiry For Pitcher.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10. (Canadian Press).—Joe McCarthy, new manager of William Wrigley's Chicago Cubs, struck a snag yesterday in his first attempt to obtain material to bolster his team.

Backed by Wrigley's "million dollar" cheque book, McCarthy started his player hunt by buttonholing Jack Dunn, Baltimore pilot.

"One hundred and fifty thousand dollars and war tax," shouted Dunn.

McCarthy did not pursue the subject when he had recovered from the shock.

PIRATES BEAT ST. PATS 6 TO 3

AT PITTSBURGH.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 10. (Canadian Press). — The roving crew of Pirates who swept the ice here last night brought disaster to St. Pats, the latter being annihilated by the score of 6 to 3. After being outplayed during the early part of the game, the locals launched an offensive during the closing minutes of the second period which swept every thing in their path.

The drive, which reached its height during the last minutes of the second stanza, was resumed with renewed fury at the opening of hostilities in the third period, and three goals were annexed before the St. Patricks' players succeeded in checking it.

SPORT NOTES

Hamilton Spectator: It was figured that the Canadian football season ended last Saturday, but recent happenings in the west have prolonged it another week. From Regina comes word that enough money has been subscribed to send the juniors of that city east in search of the Canadian junior title, and the game will be played at Montreal next Saturday against the M.A.A.A. youngsters, who annexed the Eastern junior honors. It is a long trip for the Regina boys, but they feel that it is time that a football championship of some kind went west, and they will make a supreme effort to win one. When the suggestion was made that the team come east, the money was raised in a short time.

A New York writer says that it looks already as though the Stanley Cup games will be played there next March. They might be if the players do not go on strike.

J. A. D. Slemin, Brantford's Mayor-elect, will be remembered by local baseball fans. "Duff" played with the Brantford Red Sox back in 1911, 1912 and 1913, and previous to that starred in amateur baseball in Telephoneville. He was also prominent in sports at Varsity during his years as a student there.

Vic Foley, who came east to give Bobby Eber a chance to regain the Canadian bantamweight title, is not going to remain long, whether he wins or loses on Friday night. Foley is to box in Portland, Ore., on the night of January 14, so that he will have to hurry back west. Eber has promised to go to the coast to meet Foley, in case the Hamilton boy wins the title, which is only fair, in face of what Foley has done. Since winning the title from Mayberry, Foley has made two trips east for the purpose of defending it, Howard Mayberry and Jackie Johnston having the chance in the spring and Eber getting it this week. While there may be money in it for Foley, it is doubtful if he is anything ahead financially, for he is kept busy on the coast and would not have to lose so much time travelling as he did to come to Toronto.

With victories over Peterboro and Port Arthur to their credit, the Windsor Maroons, Percy LeSueur's new team, look to have a strong aggregation.

Two more Ottawa amateurs, Jackie Duggan, captain of Montagnards, a defence man, and Willie Touhey, with the Ottawa Gunners last season, have worked out with the Ottawa Senators. If their work are to be offered contracts with is favorable, it is understood they are to be offered contracts with the pro. team.

The Woodstock intermediates will work out on London's artificial ice surface. A strong squad of candidates will participate in the initial workout.

AT THE REGENT

"Havoc" is the story of the havoc wrought by a woman without a soul. It depicts the social life of London under the stress of war. There are scenes in the night clubs and homes of the British capital, showing the beautiful vampire winning the hearts of the gallant men who were defending their country's honor.

Part of the drama is enacted on the front in France. By his fine restraint in staging the battle scenes, Mr. Lee has achieved realism nothing short of remarkable. It is quite evident that Mr. Lee has been in the fighting himself.

George O'Brien is at his best as Lieutenant Dick Chappell, the hero of the drama. He gives a vivid portrayal of the Dick who went blithely forth to fight the Germans and of that other Dick, blinded by gas after he has been betrayed by his best friend. Madge Bellamy is most appealing as Tessie Dunton, the faithful little war nurse who sticks to Dick after the vampire has cast him off.

Walter McGrail does some of the best acting of his career as Captain Dunton, the officer crazed by the fickleness of a capricious fiancee. The scene in which he is confronted with the results of his treachery is one of the finest dramatic bits ever enacted in motion pictures. McGrail has succeeded in the difficult task of portraying a changing character—the Captain Dunton who was Dick's friend and the Captain Dunton who issued orders that meant his death.

Margaret Livingston, a comparative newcomer to the Fox ranks, is superb in the role of Violet Deering, the beautiful vampire. She has excellent opportunities to display a dazzling array of gowns. Leslie Fenton has given a vivid portrayal of Babe, Dick's plucky young friend. Harvey Clark contributes some excellent comedy, and Bertram Grassby is no less excellent as a titled lounge lizard.

Other important members of the cast are Eulalie Jensen, David Butler, Wade Boteler and Captain Calvert. Edmund Goulding wrote the scenario

AT THE ROYAL.

AMATEUR NIGHT AT ROYAL TONIGHT

Every Thursday night the Royal gives its patrons something extra for their money in the addition of local talent. Tonight will be no exception to the rule.

ROYAL TO SHOW LAUGH PICTURE "I'LL SHOW YOU THE TOWN" CALLED "RIB-SHAKER"

Four Stars Support Denny in Farcical Drama.

"I'll Show You The Town," the Universal-Jewel feature starring Reginald Denny, which will be shown at the Royal Theatre, commencing today, is a story without a single heroine. It has four of them!

Four leading women, of diverse and distinct types, support Denny in his latest comedy feature. They are Marian Nixon, Margaret Livingston, Cissy Fitzgerald and Lilyan Tashman. Miss Nixon plays the role of a sweet, unsophisticated girl from the far west; Miss Livingston as Denny's boyhood sweetheart from the country; Miss Fitzgerald as a wealthy widow and Miss Tashman as the dance-loving wife of Denny's friend.

Trying to show the sights of the town to three of the heroines at the same time each of the women being unaware of the others' existence is the problem which confronts Denny in the role of Professor Dupree, a scholar who is attempting to write a dissertation on "Apartment House Life in Ancient Rome." How this unnsual feat is accomplished is revealed in a series of highly comic situations.

"I'll Show You the Town" is the screen version of Elmer Davis entertaining novel of the same name. It was produced under the direction of Harry A. Pollard. Denny is surrounded by an unusually strong cast, including Hayden Stevenson, Edward Kimball, Neely Edwards, William A. Carroll, Martha Mattox, Helen Greene and Lionel Braham.

AT THE CAPITOL

HAROLD LLOYD IN "THE FRESHMAN."

The Capitol Theatre had a good crowd of patrons last night for the first evening presentation of "The Freshman," with Harold Lloyd in the stellar role. This is a picture that is filled with real laughs and there wasn't apparently a member of the audience last night that wasn't having a really good time, for chuckles and giggles and laughs were heard from every side. It is not the type of comedy that seems to be striving for effects and brings only half-hearted merriment from the on-lookers. The hero, typical in his rather puzzled demeanor and large spectacles, is apparently enmeshed without his own connivance in situations that are funny in the extreme. Absolutely uncontrollable mirth seems to be the atmosphere that surrounds his struggles. It is one of the best things that Harold Lloyd has done in the comedy line, and that is saying a good deal.

Harold is well named as Harold Lamb. He dreams of cutting a dashing figure in college and reads books about it and models his life along the lines of the college hero of romantic fiction. As Harold's dad says, "When he goes to college, they'll break his heart, or his neck, or both."

Dad was right! Harold becomes the unconscious goat of the college. He's badgered and bullied by everybody except the little girl behind the cigar counter—you guessed it—Jobyna Ralston, herself. Harold falls for her as hard as he does for the line the college bully is handing him. He appears at the "Fall Frolic" in a tuxedo that the college tailor only had time to baste together. The complications are uproarious. Parts of Harold's clothes keep falling off, and the tailor, who accompanies him to the party in case of those very complications, seizes opportune moments in the merry-making to sew the suit together again. This sequence is a genuine inspiration, and Lloyd is personally responsible for much of its success.

The Freshman has been made a water-boy for the football team, though he believes he "made the team." At the big game, when his college is losing fast and is out of substitutes, it, is the poor, heroic little Lamb that steps in and saves the day. Gosh, it's exciting! And funny!

As a characterization, Lloyd's Freshman is splendid stuff, and the cast is not only competent, but each player is imbued with the real college atmosphere and looks and acts his part with utter naturalness. Pat Harmon especially stands out as the football coach, according to a subtitle, so tough he shaves with a blow torch. As is usual with Lloyd's pictures, "The Freshman" is a great picture for the whole family.

AT THE GRAND.

"LUCKY SEVEN"

Captain Plunkett's Dumbells came back to Peterboro in "Lucky 7" last night. Although the crowd in the Opera House was not a large one, it was appreciative and supplied the performers with plenty of applause. The usual snappy, bright, attractive form of entertainment that distinguishes these Dumbell performances kept their audience in good humor from start to finish.

Pata Rafferty's makup, Red Newman's breezy manner and Ross Hamilton's wonderful gowns are always high lights in the Dumbells' show, and "Lucky 7" had its own major attraction also in its orchestra, with its individual music and interludes of song and dance. The orchestra received repeated and renewed applause and came back for a double encore at the conclusion of a lengthy interval. The marionettes in "The Toy Drum Major," with Pat Rafferty and Glen Allen doing "wooden doll" stunts in costume, were particularly fetching, and there was an extra atmosphere of vim and pep, if that could be possible, to the singing of "Yes, Sir, That's My Baby," by Harold Rich, at the piano. The "Gypsy Love Song" was a pretty interval, Al. Plunkett and "Jock" Holland enacting the roles of gypsy lovers. "Riley's Cow Shed," with a trio of stiff dancers, hicks with bowler hats and tight suits, trousers rolled to the knee, was ludicrous in the extreme. Pat Rafferty, Red Newman and Jimmy Devon were this stiff-jointed trio.

Operatic music as it is jazzed was in the final selection of "Faust" by the orchestra.

"I'm Wonderful," by Ross Hamilton, in a black gown and picture hat, was a snappy number, and Marjorie had a truly wonderful outfit in "Darling, I Love You," with a rosered velvet, very decollette, with a long train and glistening oraments, a white silk wig and large white feather fan.

Red Newman had his popular number, "Let's Start the War Again"; Ben Allen, in heavy black face, sang in his melodious tones, a well-received selection, "Susannah's Squeaking Shoes," and Al Plunkett had some of his distinctive songs, in "Whiter Than Snow," one of those compositions that nobody seems to quite catch the drift of, but they like the voice and applaud it anyway, and a rather striking bit in "As Long As She Loves Me."

Stan Bennet, the "Algy" of the cast, with his irreproachable English get up, sang in characteristic fashion, "Stop, Look and Listen," and "Reckless Reggie." "Ain't It Nice" was a typical "Jock" Holland number, verging slightly to the risque side, but never actually offending the taste. A clever bit was "A New Deal," a monologue to the accompaniment of the exclamations of card players, done by Jock Holland, Al Plunkett and Freddie Treneer.

One of the most loudly-applauded numbers was the scrubbing women quartette, "Us Girls Must Have Our Fun," with Red Newman, Morley Plunkett, Pat Rafferty and Stan Bennett in the role of the singing scrubbers, four slatternly ladies with a sense of humor and a collection of marvellous old clothes.

Pat Rafferty was as funny as ever in "The Prisoner" song, and "I'm Not All There," and there were a couple of marvellous dance numbers, one a wonderful exposition of toe work by Glen Allen and Morley Plunkett; the other, an eccentric dance by Jimmy Devon in a pea-green suit.

The sketch, "Red Goes on Leave," featured Red Newman as the batman; "The Bus Scene" was the ridiculous presentation of a variety of freak passengers on an English 'bus in suburban London; and "Up the Hill" was clever, if somewhat heavy, patriotic bit. "High Street, Africa," with Morley Plunkett as a gentleman with marvellously crooked legs, a silk topper, spectacles and bare legs, surrounded by a chorus that was typically "Dumbellish," was the finale to the first act; the last act winding up with an interesting selection of old-time favorites, in "Melodies of Yesteryear."

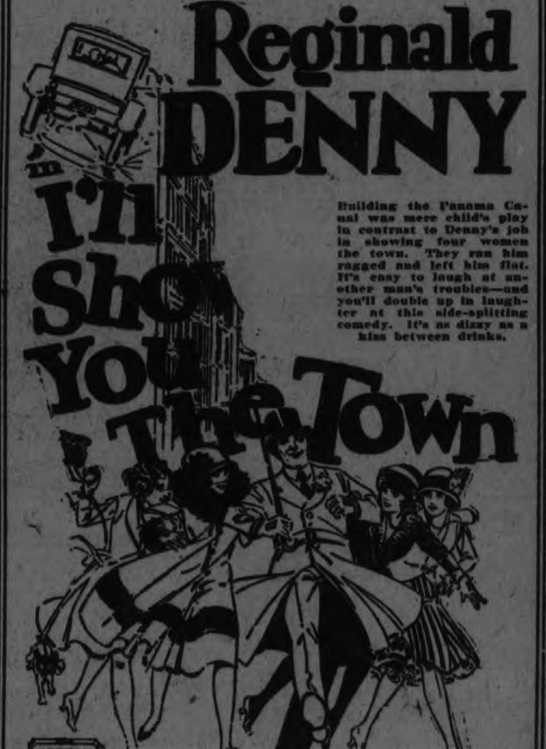
Don't, Don't Miss This High-Powered Laughing Hit!

Reginald DENNY



Building the Panama Canal was mere child's play in contrast to Denny's job in showing four women the town. They run him ragged and left him flat. It's easy to laugh at another man's troubles—and you'll double up in laughter at this side-splitting comedy. It's as dizzy as a kiss between drinks.

Supreme Court Says It May Anuthorize N.C.R. To Enter Bouyn.

OTTAWA, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press.) — The Supreme Court of Canada decided this morning that the Dominion government had power to authorize the Nipissing Central, which is a subsidiary of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario, (an Ontario Government railway) to cross Quebec Crown lands in the gold mining district of Rouyn.

The company petitioned the Governor-in-Council for consent to occupy the necessary Crown lands. Objection was, however, taken by the Quebec Government to consent being given and the Dominion Government referred the question to the Supreme Court for an opinion.

SIMPLICITY WAS THE KEYNOTE OF BOOTH FUNERAL

Service Was Conducted By Veteran Presbyterian Minister.

MANY CITIZENS OUT.

Governments of Dominion and Province Represented, and Employees of Company.

OTTAWA, Dec. 10. (Canadian Press).—Orders for simplicity—that virtue exemplified so well by John R. Booth in life—governed every feature of the funeral of the ninety-eight-year-old lumber monarch here this afternoon.

At Beechwood Cemetery, where his body was interred to rest alongside that of his wife, who predeceased him about half a century ago, and other members of the family, there was no marble vault for the reception of the dust of one of Canada's greatest men. The body was lowered into a freshly dug grave in the Booth plot and earth placed over it.

The funeral service was conducted at the residence of Mr. Booth at 2.30 this afternoon by Rev. Dr. W. T. Herridge, pastor emeritus of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and Rev. George D. Kilpatrick, assistant minister of Chalmers United Church. Then, through streets lined with citizens, and followed by a vast concourse of sorrowing friends, Mr. Booth was born to his last resting place.

The Governor-General was represented by Arthur F. Sladen, secretary, and the Ontario Government by W. H. Ireland, M.L.A., of Trenton.

Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister, and Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Opposition, were both present.

Why Are Errors of Vision so Generally Neglected?

Often it is because they are not known to exist, so are naturally not given attention. The wisest plan for everyone to pursue is to have the eyes examined whether they seem to need it or not. Then every error of vision would receive proper attention. If you have been wondering about your eyes let us give you the facts.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY AT HOME WAS CONGRATULATORY EVENING FOR PETERBOROUGH'S MEMBERS

E. A. Peck and W. H. Bradburn Lauded For Their Respective Victories.

HAPPY OCCASION.

Recent Fight Forgotten in Dancing, Music and Card Playing.

Messrs. E. A. Peck, member elect to the Federal House, and W. H. Bradburn, of the Provincial Legislature, were at home last night to a thousand of their Conservative workers and supporters assembled in Victoria Hall.

Many of the speakers recalled the meeting which had been held in the same building on the night when the returns were pouring in, and the victory for Mr. Peck became an accomplished fact. Others harked back as far as the night when nominations were held and Mr. Peck was placed in command of the Tory forces.

There was nothing about the evening entertainment which smacked of the political. There was no resonant sound of orators indulging in imaginative flights involving millions of dollars. No one made any mention of markets or Canadian youth stampeding toward the border. Instead a really splendid entertainment of brief addresses, interesting songs and fine music was provided. The thunder of the recent battle was stilled, leaving in its place the mirth which follows a bloodless victory. Self-congratulatory to a degree, the encomiums given were yet evidences of true appreciation for earnest labor performed with gratifying results.

Following the formal program a cafeteria lunch was placed at the disposal of each person and to judge from the alacrity shown in visiting the tables as well as by the stacks of soiled dishes in the kitchen few there were who left hungry. At the same time the seats were cleared from the floor and the campaigners, old and young, danced to the strains of B-ll's four-piece orchestra.

Provisions were made for those who did not care to dance but could

OTTAWA, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press.)— Co-operation of the provinces in solving highway problems common to all and a decision to persist in the bombardment of the Federal governments for continuation of its financial aid to the provinces for highway improvement, were two features of the two days' conference on highway problems concluded last night in this city, and which was attended by representatives of provincial government's steam railways, Canadian Good Roads Association and by Hon. H. A. McKeown, chairman of the Dominion Railway Board. S. L. Squire, Deputy Minister of Highways for Ontario, was chairman of the conference.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 11—Citizens residing in the Canadian prairies who were rendered fearful by early fall predictions of a hard, long winter, are beginning to breathe easier.

Rain in December has been a recurring phenomenon. Thursday Moose Jaw and Winnipeg experienced light rainfall and as a consequence the snow which last week blanketed the western provinces is beginning to disappear.

Old timers have steadily scoffed at the forecasts of so-called weather experts. Dispatches from Moose Jaw last night declared that the native weather experts are harking back to the winter of 1905 to find a parallel for the present mild weather. It is averred that the winter of 1905 began in just the same manner as this winter has begun and that it was open throughout.

DIRECT LEGISLATION FAVORED ESPECIALLY ON TEMPERANCE BY U.F.O. ANNUAL CONVENTION

Opposed To Action of Government in Disregarding Plebiscite.

AGAINST TARIFF.

Member Moved That Another Be Expelled For Supporting Tariff.

TORONTO, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Declaring their belief in the principle of direct legislation as expressed by the popular vote, especially as applied to the question of temperance, the United Farmers of Ontario, in the closing hours of their convention last night, placed themselves on record as opposed to the action of the present Government of Ontario in disregarding the plebiscite of a year ago, and in announcing its determination not to submit this question again to a direct vote of the people.

The Convention in addition dealt with the tariff question and by resolution placed itself on record as unalterably opposed to the whole principle of tariff protection.

S. J. McDonald, delegate from Stormont, moved, seconded by John White Ford of South Grey, that Thomas H. Binnie, chairman of the legislative committee of the U.F.O., be expelled from the association, and "That his name be erased from the rolls and records for ever." Mr. McDonald alleged that in view of the tariff stand taken by the organization, Mr. Binnie's alleged support of the Meighen policy in the last election could not be overlooked. J. J. Morrison U.F.O. secretary, explained that no member of the organization could be expelled. "What do you do with traitors—honor them?" said Mr. McDonald.

"If a dog bites, you are supposed to bite him back!" this from another quarter of the house.

Near the close of the convention, some delegates wanted the question of "broadening out," the farmers' movement to include other classes, settled definitely. The discussion on the subject became so heated with Premier Drury and J. J. Morrison, secretary, leading the opposition factions that President Amos adjourned the convention amid disorder without a decision being reached.

SEVERAL KILLED.

BEIRUT, Syria, Dec. 11. (Canadian Press).—News came to-day that the bandits had been repelled in two invasions of Damascus. A force of 200, after entering the city yesterday, was driven out by policemen with motorized machine guns and the use of artillery. Seven bandits were killed.

Later in the day another party of 90 men entered the city via a cemetery, but was speedily driven to rout.

Township School Boards Acceptable If Optional

CHATHAM, Ont., Dec. 11. —(Canadian Press). — That centralization of administration of rural school matters proposed in provincial legislation be optional on the part of townships in the substance of a resolution passed by the Kent County Council Thursday.

A bill whereby rural school boards will be eliminated, and one township board elected to take care of school matters in all parts of the municipality has received two readings in the provincial legislature and is to be finally deal with in January. The Kent county council does not oppose the spirit of the proposed new system, if the bill carries, should not be compulsory on townships.

SIXTY-ONE DIE FROM EXPLOSION IN COAL MINE

Officials at a Loss to Explain the Cause of the Blast.

KNOWN AS GASEOUS.

Fifteen Men Came Out Unhurt and Five Alive But Burned.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., December 11. — Canadian Press. — Sixty-one coal miners lost their lives yesterday when a gas explosion occurred in the workings of Overton Mine No. 2 of the Alabama Fuel and Iron Company, in the Cahaba fields, south of Birmingham.

Fifteen men escaped uninjured and five are in the hospital suffering from serious burns.

An unexplained gas explosion yesterday morning trapped the men in the mine, the main slope of which is 2800 feet under ground.

Rescue workers proceeded cautiously in search for the missing men.

Above ground a temporary morgue and red cross station were ready to receive the victims.

During the afternoon bodies were brought out slowly, amid the screams of the women and children.

Twenty five of the trapped men were white and the others negroes.

The officials of the mine are at a loss to explain the explosion. They said that although the mine was known to be gaseous every safety appliance available had been installed.

Of the 81 in the mine at the time of the blast 15 came through unscathed and 5 were injured The remainder are either known to be dead in the improvised morgue in the bath house or are still on lower levels.

BODIES RECOVERED.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press). — Twenty-six bodies were brought up from the recesses of Overton Mine No. 2 this morning, bringing the total removed to 48. Mine officials and rescue workers believed that some bodies still remain in the mine, but have abandoned all hope that the remainder of the men would be found alive.

Driver's Quick Payment For Snapping Hydro Pole

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press). — Crashing into a hydro pole at a Dundas Street corner in a snow flurry yesterday, an automobile driven by M. P. Fager, of St. George's, broke the pole off at its base and left it hanging suspended from the hydro wires. Fager's car was damaged to some extent but he was uninjured. Instead of reporting the accident to the police, he went straight to the office of the local hydro superintendent to settle for the damage his car had done.

LONG SPELL OF DEPRESSION IN CANADA LIFTING

New Courage Declares President of St. John Board of Trade.

SEAPORT BUSY.

Reference to Unfair Business Practices in Central Canada.

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Dec. 11— "The back of the long spell of depression in Canada is at last really breaking," declared Lewis W. Simms, president of the Saint John Board of Trade in submitting his annual report to the Board last night.

"But here in the Maritime provinces," he continued, " a phenomenon of more far-reaching significance than even good crops or reviving industry has been the new spirit of determination which is generating a new hope. This in its turn is arousing a new faith that the fields of the Maritime opportunity are really ripe for the harvest for her sons who will dare and do."

In an extensive review of every department of the commercial life of the community Mr. Simms pointed out the greatly increased number of sailings scheduled from the port of St. John this winter.

Unfair Competition

In discussing industry and freight rates, which acted he said as a handicap to keep Maritime products out of the markets of Central Canada, Mr. Simms declared:

NATIONS UNWILLING TO DISARM UNTIL GUARANTEE OF SECURITY IS ESTABLISHED, SAYS LORD CECIL

The Helps and Hindrances to Disarmament Discussed By British Statesmen.

PRESS INTERVIEW.

Historic Jealousies and Suspicions an Obstacle—The League's Prestige an Aid.

GENEVA, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, Great Britain's representative on the League of Nations disarmament council, basing his conclusions on a knowledge of the subjects surpassed by that of no other living statesman, gave an interview to the press last night, summarizing in striking fashion the pitfalls to be encountered on the road to a solution of the disarmament problem and of the forces which justify a hope that after all this great issue will be grappled with successfully.

To estimate the prospects of disarmament, Lord Cecil said, it would be a rash attempt at prophecy, but he expressed the belief that some observations might be made concerning the forces which seem likely to retard or accelerate the movement.

"Undoubtedly the chief obstacle to disarmament," he said, "is the want of security, due to historic suspicions and jealousies of nations and the consequent chauvinistic forms of nationalism. Perhaps the chief merit of our recent agreements has been the diminution they have brought among some of the most important of European nations of this attitude of suspicion. A cursory reading of the press of some of the nations involved would indicate that this amelioration does not extend to all sections of the populations. Still, a great step forward has been made.

Prestige of League

"Again, the growing strength and prestige of the League of Nations is an important element toward security. The smoothness and rapidity with which the Greco-Bulgarian dispute was adjusted and still more, the emphatic declarations of members of the council at Paris that a resort to violence as a means of settling international disputes is no longer to be tolerated among members of the League, show a remarkable growth of international good-will.

"The more nations become in the habit of referring disputes to pacific settlement, the less they will regard one another as potention enemies."

When asked to define the domestic difficulties in the way of disarmament, Lord Cecil said that next to international suspicion as an obstable to disarmament he would put internal friction of the various government machines. He said the idea of disarmament is necessarily strange and unattractive to military and civil functionaries who have traditions of their own older than international relations.

"They still think it more important to keep their powder dry than

SUMMER HOTEL PROPRIETOR HAD 10 INSURANCE POLICIES OF $1,500 EACH ON BUILDING THAT BURNED

W. J. Cooper, of Haliburton County, Committed For Trial at Lindsay.

ON ARSON CHARGE.

Witness Declared Cooper and Wife Talked of Burning It.

LINDSAY, Dec. 11.—Wm. J. Cooper, of Guilford, Haliburton County, late proprietor of the Royal Kushog Hotel, which was destroyed by fire a few weeks ago, was committed for trial here Thursday by Police Magistrate Jordan on the charges of arson and theft. The accused was represented by Mr. L. V. O'Connor.

Evidence was given by Mr. John A. Lucas, insurance agent, Haliburton Village, showing that Cooper had taken out ten policies, each for $1,500, on the hotel.

Mrs. Anna Eliza Walling, a resident of the village, and who lived on the hotel property, which was purchased from her, and who assisted in the hotel during the tourist season, told of a conversation which took place in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Cooper and herself in the hotel kitchen, in which Mr. and Mrs. Cooper said they might burn down the hotel and get the insurance. Mr. Cooper, she declared, later made this statement in the presence of herself and husband. Witness and her husband were anxious to get the property back from Mr. Cooper, the witness paying $1 to make it a business transaction. The deed, she declared, was given back on condition that witness and her husband would say nothing about the conversation regarding the burning of the hotel and that witness would help in the hotel.

Silverware Found.

Mr. H. B. Feir, one of the trustees of the Hotel Kushog, told of the arrangements made with Mr. Cooper regarding the use of the hotel equipment. Mr. Feir checked out the equipment for the creditors. He identified a box of silverware which was found in the Cooper home as belonging to the chattel mortgage holders.

Provincial Officer Storey told of a conversation he had with Mr. Cooper about the removal of property from the Hotel Kushog. Witness denied that he had taken anything. As a result of a conversation with Mrs. Cooper, witness said she pulled out a box containing silverware from under the stairs.

Deputy Fire Marshal Nealon, who had investigated the fire, told of a conversation in which Cooper had denied removing any of the chattels. He denied having any silverware in his possession.

Cooper Committed.

County Police Magistrate Jordan committed Cooper for trial on the two charges at the next court of competent jurisdiction.

The hearing of the evidence in the theft charge was waived.

CHINESE FIRED AT FOREIGNERS

International Train En Route To Tientsin Was Attacked By Artillerymen.

NO CASUALTIES.

(By Randall Gould, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PEKING, Dec. 11.—Chinese artillerymen today fired on the international train en route to Tien-Tsin from Peking, with American and European passengers, including the widow of former American Minister Calhoun of China, and Tiffany Blake, representative of The Chicago Tribune.

There were no casualties, and only one window was smashed. The train backed after the firing and several passengers proceeded afoot across a damaged bridge, subsequently obtaining automobiles with which they went through the battle lines and reached Tien-Tsin. The train had not been reported as reaching Tien-Tsin even 24 hours after its departure, despite the fact that the stretch is only 70 miles.

Service Suspended.

TIENTSIN, Dec. 11. (United Press).—The railway service from Peking to this city has been suspended. British, French and Japanese guards are reinforcing the railway which has been broken at several places near Tong Shan.

ONTARIO'S DEFICIT DECREASED; 1925 BALANCE SHEET ISSUED

Improvement Shown in Receipts and Expenditures on Capital.

MORE INTEREST PAID.

Revenues From Old Taxes Increased While New Levies Aided Province.

TORONTO, Dec. 11. (Canadian Press). — Ontario's deficit for the fiscal year ending October 31st, 1925, is $4,905,293, as compared with $8,325,645 in 1924.

Following the precedent he established last year of an early presession submission of the statistical results of the Province's financial year, Provincial Treasurer Price yesterday gave out the year's balance sheet.

Mr. Price stresses this year the evident improvement of the position of Ontario with regard to capital expenditure and receipts. Capital expenditure for the last fiscal year amounted to $27,817,524, a reduction of $8,717,694 from the previous year. Capital receipts, on the other hand, were $9,331,896, an increase of $320,317 over 1924.

Ordinary revenues and expenditures also show improvement, for although there is an increase excluding interest on the public debt of $1,552,256 in expenditures, there is an increase in receipts of $6,213,412.

Altogether the Treasurer calculated an improvement of $873,744 in the Province's expenditures.

The interest on the public debt is excluded by the Provincial Treasurer. In 1923, the Province paid $13,510,708 in interest; in 1924, $16,173,592, and in 1925, $17,230,660.

Revenues for 1925 have been increased to $46,556,135, which is an improvement of $12,577,009 over 1923, and an increase over 1924 of $6,213,412.

Last year's increase was partially caused by new taxation, but there was a substantial addition where taxation was not raised.

Additional collected from motor licenses, $853,758; gasoline tax from May 15 to October 31, $1,976,847; luxury tax, May 21 to September 30, $370,799; and permits to sell, $68,061—a total of $3,269,416.

Two Members Charged With Shooting to Kill—Some Theft Counts.

ONE SENTENCED.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 11. (Canadian Press).—William Holder, arrested yesterday with two companions, was sentenced to seven years in Portsmouth Penitentiary when he appeared in court this morning to answer charges of highway robbery while armed, and theft. W. Carey pleaded guilty to a theft charge and was remanded, while Mrs. E. Winslow, the third of the trio, pleaded guilty to the theft of a car and was remanded a week.

Holder and Carey face more serious charges in Woodstock, and they are now being held for the police of that city. It is alleged they fired at Provincial Inspector Milligan there on Monday last when he attempted to arrest them while they were driving a car which had been stolen. The two men at Woodstock will face a charge of "shooting with intent to kill."

DOMESTIC ECONOMY NEEDED IN GERMANY

Reichsbank Head Says Expenditures Must Be Small Till Bills Paid.

BERLIN, Dec. 11. — (United Press).—The purchase of one hat every two years and other expenditures in meagre proportion is the outlook for German women until the reparations bill and the Dawes loan are paid, according to Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichs Bank. Schacht discussed his recent trip to the United States on Thursday night. Europe now is the periphery and the United States is the centre of world economics, he said. The banker emphasized the importance of the various debt fundings which had been concluded at Washington and explained the danger of excessive credits. Regarding the difficulty of internal reconstruction Schacht said: "I fear German women won't wear two hats a year, but one hat for two years. However, I do not consider this a national disgrace."

SUICIDE AVERTED AT NIAGARA FALLS

Young Woman Pulled From River Just Above the Cataract.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., December 11. Canadian Press. — An unidentified young woman was rescued from the Niagara River, a short distance above the American Falls, at 8 o'clock this morning. The woman was seen to run through the park near the falls, and a few minutes later was discovered in the water floating towards the cataract. Employees of the State Reservation waded out and brought her to shore. She was sent to the hospital. The woman steadfastly refused to identify herself after her rescue. She is believed to be from Buffalo.

"Oh, why didn't I go over when I had a chance," she said, as reservation employees pulled her to safety. "Don't turn me over to the police."

IN POLICE COURT

A supposedly abused wife, an expostulating husband and a stepmother intent on securing redressal on alleged wrongs suffered by her daughter formed the principals in a Police Court scene enacted before Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning. The case was finally dismissed without costs. The wife in her evidence disclosed the fact that she was not receiving sufficient care and attention as regarded food and clothing. The mother of the young lady said that she was forced to buy the clothes which she was wearing in court and, in addition, purchase much of the food to sustain her and the two small children. The husband was able to account for the salary which he had received within the period covered by the charge, and showed that his expenditures in the interests of the home amounted to a few cents more than his actual wages had been.

"Different here!" said Mr. Pooch laconically. "And I'll tell the cock-eyed world I ain't gonna take no lessons to-night! Hop down off that rail and we'll talk matters over. I'm gettin' sick of this clownin'! Who in blazes are you, anyways?"

"Will you put me ashore?" parried Connemara, still poised on the rail.

"Oh, be yourself!" grunted Mr. Pooch disgustedly. "Every copper in the wide, wide world is lookin' for us now, and it's a cinch you don't wanna meet no John Laws any more than I do! Who's that cake eater which was with you on the ferry?"

"Who are you?" queried Connemara in turn.

"Me?" grinned Mr. Pooch. "Why, I'm the fifth horseman of the yoo-cal-iptis. Never mind who I am! Why don't you get sensible and hand over that fifty thousand bucks and be done with it? You don't look like no Dumb Dora, why act like one? Your boy friend has left you flat on your ear and Swede's gang'll be along any minute, so——"

A faint hail over the water abruptly cut off Mr. Pooch's summing up. He stepped quickly to the rail beside Connemara, peering eagerly into the gloom with her. The hail was not repeated and, determined to guide any possible assistance to her, Connemara gathered her breath together and released a sudden piercing "H-e-l-p!"

With a startled oath Mr. Pooch clamped his hands firmly over her lips and tore her from the rail. Connemara desperately sought to free herself from his nauseating embrace but this time Pooch held her tightly gripped in the crook of one arm while his free hand began an exploration of her garments in search of the packet of bank notes. Crimson with rage and embarrassment, Connemara fought wildly, encouraged by a louder repetition of the hail from the surrounding murk. It seemed closer this time, and Connemara, squirming frantically away from Pooch, prayed that it was.

The thatch of red hair surmounted by the white cap of McTish slowly rose over the hatchway. In one hand the little man held an iron bar and he hefted it speculatively as he surveyed the struggling pair, before stepping into the cockpit. His movements were deliberate and unhurried—he might have been completely detached from the picture. Part way over he even stopped to arrange neatly a protruding coil of rope. Mr. Pooch appeared not to see McTish, doubtless believing him safely accounted for by the hatch padlock, for at Connemara's hopefully eager glance at the little Scotchman over Pooch's shoulder, Pooch only laughed aloud, wrenching her wrist cruelly to restrain her struggles. McTish advanced still slowly, but strangely sobered, until within a few inches of Pooch's straining back. Then McTish coughed, rather apologetically.

"Take the air, you little rat—I'll slap you for a mock orange!" growled Mr. Pooch, too busy with Connemara to look around.

He should have done so! For without another word and as calmly as driving a nail with a hammer, McTish raised his arm and the iron bar clunked on Mr. Pooch's head. Silently that gentleman sank to the deck at Connemara's feet.

Amazement—and suspicion—momentarily overcame Connemara's gratitude. She stared at McTish almost accusingly. "Then you—you are not intoxicated—you weren't when we came on board?" she murmured. "You were shamming! Why——"

"What—me drunk?" broke in McTish, with a curl of his lip. "I never touch the stuff—eh—that is, I don't drink it!" He touched Mr. Pooch's inert body with a contemptuous toe. "And now, my girl, who's this swab and where's the chief?"

"Chief?" repeated Connemara vaguely. "What chief?"

"Don't stall, my girl; I heard his voice a bit ago, as I was kicking my way out of the after hatch. Where is he?" demanded McTish sternly.

Connemara suddenly recalled the familiar voice that had called from the blackness over the rail of the yacht. She began to explain, but at that moment there was a chorus of yells from seemingly underneath the bows, a rending crash and then—silence!

"We've run some damned fool down—look over the side and see what you can see, while I stop the engines!" yelled McTish and dashed away.

Feeling certain she was just a figure in somebody's nightmare, Connemara leaned far over the rail, straining her eyes at the sullen black waters. The throbbing of the yacht's engine had ceased, and the boat now rolled aimlessly on the waves as McTish ran past her with a lighted flare in one hand and a life preserver in the other. Determined not to be left alone, Connemara summoned her nerve and cautiously moved forward. She reached the bow just as a drenched and bedraggled figure threw one leg over the yacht's side. At her involuntary exclamation the visitor from the sea halted in the process of boarding the yacht and stared at her, displaying a beautiful set of molars.

"Well, well, well—what a delightful evening!" smilingly greeted Mr. David Lacy, of hither and yon. "Fancy meeting you here!"

Lacy vaulted lightly to the deck, shedding water like a spaniel. "Where's McTish?" he demanded.

Connemara nodded speechlessly to the rail. McTish, fishing diligently with his life preserver, had evidently got a bite and was now hauling in with a will. Drawing near Connemara, Lacy observed her torn garments with a puzzled frown—then his eyes wandered to the prostrate Mr. Pooch, who was beginning to show signs of awakening. Shaking his head quizzically, Lacy knelt down and removed Pooch's coat, and, arising, tendered the garment to Connemara with a bow. Connemara hastily buttoned it around her bared shoulders, while Mr. Lacy began to twist the water out of his own soaked clothing.

"First, get some rope or something and tie that—that beast up!" commanded Connemara, finding her voice at last and gesturing to the recumbent Pooch. "He tried to—Oh, don't stand there looking at me. Tie him up or I'll do it myself!"

Lacy disappeared down a hatchway, returning a moment later with a coil of stout rope. Meanwhile McTish had assisted aboard from the sea a burly gentleman and a lady. The lady collapsed gracefully to the deck and as Connemara ran to her with quick sympathy, the big man turned on the scowling McTish.

"You rich boloneys think you own the ocean, don't you?" he bellowed, shaking a huge wet fist under the little Scotchman's placid nose. "I got a good mind to knock you silly, you red-headed boob!"

formed me that the combines act of 1923 could be invoked against unfair local price slashing by larger upper Canadian industries aiming to exterminate small concerns here. It is deemed advisable, however, by your board, to endeavor to have the said act amended so that there may be no question as to its application to such cases. We have had evidence come before us of more than one instance of unfair competition of this nature recently. Any commercial house or industry in Ontario or Quebec whose greed of gain or thirst for domination leads them into unfair practices of this kind whereby they abuse their central position to strangle the life out of commercial or industrial units in the outlying sections of this country, are trifling with disruptive that uncover the nakedness of their native land and in the resentment thus created they will give her a mortal wound.

Enemies of Canada

They cannot be regarded in this practice as other than enemies of Canada to be dealt with summarily.

"The matter of cheap transportation rates to our legitimate market, however, is vital and this on no trifling adjustment basis but to whatever extent and on a basis of government aid to whatever degree that can be demonstrated as necessary to the life of our industries here in the maritime provinces. Nothing short of an artificial wiping out of from three to four hundred miles of net distance between here and points in central Canada can adequately meet the situation, in my mind," Mr. Simms declared.

THREE TRUE BILLS

In Essex County General Sessions.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press). — Immediately before noon recess in the court of general sessions before Judge J. J. Coughlin at Sandwich Thursday the grand jury returned true bills in three criminal actions: A charge of highway robbery against Westlake and Fuller; a charge of smuggling against Hyman Richardson and others, and a charge of perjury laid against McDonald and West by Mr. Justice Logie at the recent sessions of the supreme court.

NATIONS UNWILLING

to trust to God," Lord Cecil said.

Technical Problems

He then emphasized the immense practical difficulties in the way of land and air disarmament and explained that the technical problems of naval disarmament were comparatively simple, those of army matters being much more complicated. Mere numbers, he said, furnished no criterion of the strength of land forces.

"Even assuming that all nationalities were equally brave—a very large assumption—it remains true that in a modern army guns, rifles, tanks and bombs are of greater importance in estimating strength than the number of soldiers," Lord Cecil continued. "Yet to draw up a list of weapons of war is almost impracticable and such lists would require constant revision. Moreover who shall compare one kind of weapon with another? Who shall say how many rifles are equal to a tank? Who shall make any scale of that kind?"

QUEBEC'S PREMIER

oil wells and anthracite mines of the United States would be exhausted, hence would come the rule of electricity and hydraulic development in which electricity had its birth. He pointed to the development of the St. Maurice and the plans now being executed on Lake St. John.

How Revenues Increased

Illustrating the progress made by the province, Mr. Taschereau recalled that in 1900 the total receipts were $4,770,000, while for the last fiscal year they passed $25,000,000, the highest in the history of the province, an increase of 500 per cent in 25 years. The forests, which in 1900 had yielded $1,000,000, and which it had been feared would be exhausted, now yielded around $5,000,000 in revenue, and were never more carefully controlled than at present. The revenue from mines and fisheries had grown from $12,000 to $600,000. An idea of the growth of commerce and industry was shown in the fact that the joint stock companies which had paid $190,000 in 1900 had paid $3,000,000 last year, and successions had grown from $270,000 to $3,000,000, receipts from the liquor traffic from $600,000 to $5,000,000, and automobiles brought a revenue of $3,000,000 growing from nothing.

How Money Spent

"I do not fear to predict that in another quarter of a century the revenue of the province will grow to $50,000,000," said the Premier. Public instruction, which had been given $450,000 in 1900 received grants totalling close to $3,000,000; agriculture was aided to the extent of $2,000,000, as compared with $195,000; Colonization took $1,000,000 a year instead of $190,000, and in addition there had been spent $7,000,000 on loan account for this purpose; roads cost the province $5,000,000 a year now; hospitals and charitable institutions received over $1,000,000 a year, and the cost of the hygiene service had grown from $14,000 to $300,000.

Mr. Taschereau pointed out that while eight years ago the production of pulp was but 560,000 tons it had grown in 1923 to 1,235,000 tons, or more than the production of all the other provinces put together, and the capital invested had grown from $32,000,000 in 1911 to $155,000,000 in 1923, and probably was $200,000,000 today. It was a fine estate, which would be handed down to those who come after, said Mr. Taschereau.

"One would have to be blind not to see that our most optimistic hopes for the industrial development of the province are being fully realized," said the premier. "Foreign capital is flowing into the province, and aiding in the creation of new centres of activity and production."

Admiration for Gouin

Referring to the presence of Sir Lomer Gouin, Mr. Taschereau said that if politics had been kind to him, and if he had been able to achieve some success in the long period of years under review, it was due to his old leader who had guided and advised him.

"My friendship for him, my admiration for his work and clear vision as to the future, goes back to the day when I took my place at his side in the Legislative Assembly. He traced the road to us, the marks of his feet have been easy to follow along the road of advancement. I have to suffer comparison with my predecessor and that is one of the obstacles in my path, and which perhaps have enlarged the errors which I have committed. However, I learn each day, and my colleagues, whose presence I welcome here this evening, seek to keep me in the proper path."

NEW INVENTION SAVES MILLIONS

A Lamp That Burns 94 P.C. Air.

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94 per cent. air and 6 per cent. common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, F. B. Johnson, 246 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

BACK IN POLITICS.

The decision of the United Farmers of Ontario to have their organization go back into politics comes as a surprise.

The prestige of the Progressive party in this Province had received such a heavy blow in the Provincial and Federal elections, the U.F.O. business enterprises had prospered so much since the organization dropped out of active participation in politics and the influence of Secretary J. J. Morrison was known to be so powerfully exerted against political action that the vote of the convention has upset predictions.

The U.F.O. is to be back in the political arena on a purely class basis; there is to be no "broadening out," no invitation for outsiders to ally themselves with the organization.

It is to be a farmers' movement pure and simple, seeking to elect farmer candidates in the interest of their own class.

It is significant that the decision was opposed not only by Secretary Morrison, whose views on the subject are well known, but by many other leaders, including President Amos.

These U.F.O. stalwarts feel that the organization is making a bad mistake, and that opinion will be generally shared outside of the ranks of the U.F.O.

DISTRESS AMONG VETERANS.

The concession granted by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment in response to the protests against the withdrawal of winter relief for unemployed veterans will hardly meet the case, although it may help some individual ex-service men.

It has now been provided that where an investigation shows that a veteran is unable to engage in employment because of his pensionable disability relief will be given.

What the returned soldiers' organizations want, as the Examiner understands it, is that veterans who find themselves without work because of seasonal unemployment should receive the assistance from the D.S.C.R. that was given in other winters.

In the larger centres there is always a certain amount of unemployment during the cold weather, and ex-service men are among those who find themselves unable to secure steady work.

Hitherto the Government has recognized this fact and has provided enough financial assistance to enable such returned men to get through the winter months, and the withdrawal of this aid will cause considerable distress that will only in a few cases be relieved by the concession now announced by the D.S.C.R.

THE CHAPMAN CASE.

What a comic opera Gilbert and Sullivan could have made out of the strange case of Gerald Chapman, who is under sentence of death for shooting a policeman in Connecticut!

The controversy that is going on over this convicted murderer is difficult for Canadians to understand.

In this country conviction on such a charge almost inevitably means the speedy carrying out of the death sentence.

The United States legal authorities have managed, however, to give a touch of burlesque to the proceedings.

Here is a man who is found guilty of the crime of murder and is condemned to death, but whose neck is being saved for the time being at least because he is also wanted for train robbery.

The situation is that while the State of Connecticut wants Chapman on the murder charge, the Federal authorities have the robbery indictment against him.

The Federal court wants to pardon him on the latter count in order that the State authorities can proceed to hang him, but the prisoner has some natural reluctance to being hanged and therefore refuses a pardon.

The courts have to unravel the problem and decide whether Chapman shall be freed on the robbery charge and hanged, or whether he will have to serve his twenty-five-year sentence for robbery and save his neck that long.

It is a wonderful tangle.

HOW LONDON DID IT.

The city of London is one Ontario municipality that has not been satisfied with talking about getting out a larger vote, but that has taken successful steps to persuade the electors to do their duty at municipal elections.

In London, as in most other Ontario cities, there has been apathy in regard to civic affairs; the average percentage of voters in the years from 1909 to 1924 being 45 per cent.

This year City Clerk Baker and his staff determined to increase this percentage, and the campaign has met with such happy results that 65 per cent. of those on the list marked their ballots on Monday.

A systematic effort was made by the City Clerk's Department to bring out the vote.

In the first place a letter was sent to each voter containing a condensed report of the Council proceedings during the year, information as to the city's financial condition, particulars of the vote to be taken, instructions as to where and when to vote, and a leaflet issued by the London Kiwanis Club urging people to exercise their franchise.

In addition, 7,000 labels calling attention to the election and urging people to vote were issued and were distributed for use by merchants on parcels and by employers on pay envelopes.

These unusual tactics were apparently quite successful, inasmuch as the total of London's vote on Monday was the highest on record in a municipal campaign.

SHOULD BE DEPORTED.

Here is just one more reason why this country should remain British and "white." A Winnipeg reader has sent us "election bulletin No. 1, Communist party of Canada." The matter contained therein concerns the advisability of electing Mr. Mathew Popovich an Alderman in Ward 3 of the Manitoba capital. Mr. Popovich also gives us a picture of himself, middle of the page, top of column, so we know what he looks like. Thick set, eyes close together, high cheek bones and shoe brush hair. He is also young, very young we would say, without much experience in the affairs of this world.

However, the program as indicated by his election bulletin is interesting. For one thing we note that Mr. Popovich would cancel the interest charges on all city of Winnipeg bonds. He would take over the Winnipeg Street Railway without compensation, except in the case where the bonds were owned by workmen. Next he would have a "reduction" in the tax rates by an additional levy upon the banks, the railways, etc.

Then there is the usual program of having a living given you whether you work or not, as well as the regulation Bolsheviki stuff about the "dictatorship of the proletariat," a mouth of words invented by Marx, who probably thought thereby to impress the unwashed.

All of which brings up the question as to how much rope the Popoviches and the other Iches should have. Not long since another of the same kidney and presumably of the same breed, though a female of the species, hailing from Montreal, in addressing an audience in Nova Scotia, calmly announced that the only solution for alleged wrongs was the murder of all capitalists, near capitalists or would-be capitalists, including the landlords.

In the United States people of this sort go to jail for an indefinite period. For instance, out in California there is a prison full of gentry who have been confined since the war days, and up to now there is no sign of releasing them.

Individually, most of these Communists are a good deal of a joke, but it is a moot question as to how many Morons they succeed in influencing. For instance, Canada now has well established Communist Sunday schools, where children are taught to worship the Red flag and scorn the Almighty.

Who can tell how far these misguided muddlers, looking for a short cut to Utopia, are going to influence the rank and file, mainly foreigners who fail to grasp the first principles of free government and who are more easily influenced by the "mouthisms" of the Bolshies, professional and amateur, than by logic and concrete facts.

Who ever heard a constructive idea pour from the mouth of one of these people? Like Mr. Popovich of Winnipeg, they would tear a city's credit into tatters, giving nothing in its stead. Like this woman in Nova Scotia, they would kill the constructive brains of the community, thinking thereby to reap some benefit. Mr. Popovich would bring down Winnipeg's taxes and at the same time calls for higher wages for city employees. As something sinister, a something they do not quite understand, they would do away with life insurance companies, which when all is said and done are the finest combination of big business and public service ever devised.

People with Communist reasonings were conscientious objectors during the war, but now they have a Red flag and are ready to shoot their next door neighbor for not agreeing with their scheme of manhandling human affairs.

Deportation should be the fate of these foreign born Communists, one and all. There is no use jailing these people as they do in the United States. Such action would only bring forth a multitude of weak sentimentalists, the sort that send flowers to condemned murderers, but forget all about the murdered.

In this matter New South Wales has shown us the way. For years these Communists have been a thorn in the side of law and order. But now the leaders are to be deported, Tom Walsh being sent back to England where he came from and Jacob Johanneson to Holland, of which he is a native. Premier Bruce's mandate in the matter is clear as upon it hinged the recent general election in New South Wales.

In Nova Scotia we have J. B. McLachlan, the Glace Bay Communist. For sixteen years this man has been inflicted upon the Nova Scotia coal fields. For years he has devoted his time to making trouble for employees and employers alike. The amount of it is that McLachlan has been able to capitalize his gift of gab and so fool the workmen who support him into believing that he is really benefitting their cause when as a matter of fact he has cast a blight over both the man and his job.

There is no place in this country for the Communist and his theories, which is not to say that all is right with the world, and that conditions could not be bettered. The man with the will to work and without a job or a dollar is the most to be pitied of all living creatures. But half digested Marxian shibboleths, and the tearing to bits of our present civilization, will not make for peace, comfort and happiness. And those who attempt it are Canada's enemies and should be so treated.—Toronto Saturday Night.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—One baby beef from John Gardhouse of Weston came in this morning for the Canadian Packing Co. at $17.25 a cwt. A couple of choice weighty steers sold at $9 a cwt, but other coarse steers sold at $6.25 a cwt. All this morning fresh cattle were sold off during the first hour. Good butchers cows brought $5 and mediums from $3.75 to $4.50 a cwt. The left-overs are chiefly common to medium butcher heifers. A fair clean-up has been made of the stockers and feeders.

To-day's calves were mostly off the road and prices were as nearly as possible steady with yesterday. Prices here are now too high to permit of Buffalo shipments, and only one car was shipped this week.

Any fancy lambs are in demand, but for others, especially the heavy kind, the market is not too keen. Dick Bracken bought two decks of choice lambs averaging 86 pounds each at 15 1-2 cents, but heavier lambs sold at 14 cents.

The market on hogs is over $12 a cwt, f.o.b., and this is accepted as about stable until Monday.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—United States buyers were in the Montreal market today for Manitoba wheat, and sales of 50,000 bushels of No. 2 Northern were made at 10 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg December option, c.i.f. Bay Ports.

The receipts of butter were 186 packages, as against 269 for the same day last week, and 50 for the corresponding day a year ago. According to cable advices received here the English markets for butter have been depressed of late and in consequence of which further shipments of Canadian creamery amounting to 6,700 packages have been made back here, but as stocks of top quality butter in first hands are light, the above will have little effect on the condition of the market. There was a steady demand from local and outside buyers for supplies and a fair trade was done.

The cheese market was reported very quiet, with an easier undertone owing to the falling off in the demand from foreign buyers for supplies and spot prices for Western early makes were quoted at 21 1-2c to 22c per lb. and current receipts at 18 1-2c to 19c per lb.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).— Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows:

Sterling demand $4.85.
Sterling cables $4.85 3-8.

EGGS AND POULTRY

OTTAWA, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—Turkey offerings from 35 cents down were made in Alberta yesterday, and of 34 1-2 cents in Winnipeg. A large part of the stock is moving to the States. Chicken stock is away short in the West and particularly broilers.

London, Ontario—Dealers paying country points extras 62, firsts 52, seconds 35, jobbing, fresh extras 66, firsts 56, seconds 45.

Montreal—Eggs unchanged. Turkey offerings very light.

American Poultry Markets

Buffalo market remains firm with heavy springers and live fowl selling 28 to 30, ducks scarce, live 30 to 32, Cheese doubtful, 20 to 23, Turkeys doubtful, 40 to 42.

Boston—4 lb chicken, 31 to 32; 5-lb., 35 to 37; fowl, 4-lb., 32; 5-lb., 33 to 34; fancy ducks, 26 to 28; geese, 20 to 22; fancy young toms, 45 to 48; hens, 42 to 44, old turkeys, 36 to 38.

New York—Dressed barrel chicken, 1 cent higher, except smaller and larger grades. Turkeys, firmer, 1 cent higher. Outlook is for a higher market. Live, unchanged.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—Several jolts to grain values today resulted from sudden expansion of selling and from lack of any parallel big new demand. In some quarters, the inference was drawn that leading holders were getting out of the wheat market. Late reports, too, told of clearing weather in Argentine likely to halt crop damage. The wheat market closed demoralized at nearly the bottom figures reached 4 to 6 1-4 cents net lower, new style, December 1.72 5-8 to 172 3-4, and May 1.67 to 1.67 1-4. Corn finished 1 5-8 to 2 1-2 cents down; oats 3-8 to 5-8c off, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 5 cents.

The collapse in wheat prices came after an early advance that was associated with reports which implied a widening of the zone of crop injury in Argentina, with smut as well as rust increasingly prevalent, and with heavy rains in progress. A considerable share of the immense selling that developed was ascribed to foreigners, and it was also current talk that leading speculators who had been aggressive buyers a while back were profit-taking on a large scale.

Nearly 10c a bushel set-back in the value of wheat as compared with Monday was witnessed before today's dealings were at an end. The maximum decline today was 7 3-4c from the top level reached soon after the opening.

A THOUGHT.

THE WISE FOOLISHNESS OF YOUTH.

Robert Louis Stevenson, chided for certain opinions by his elders, who told him that he would think as they did when he was as old as they were, said with his accustomed sagacity: "Very likely I shall, but that does not prove I shall be right.'

It is so easy to poke fun at the swaggering confidence with which the young approach life.

Nothing strikes them as impossible.

They do not know the numberless things we older heads have tried and found futile, and so they set confidently out to change a stubborn world against which we have bruised our foreheads in vain.

The present determination of intelligent youth to make a different world than the world of their fathers which suddenly fell apart in 1914 is an easy target for the shafts of the middle aged as they sit in the shelter of their own sheltered illusions.

But I am sure that the confidence of youth is wiser than the cynicism of age.

I am sure Maude Royden was right when she challenged the youth of England to change the world that seems "so indifferent, so matrialistic, so determined to go to war again, so indifferent to the things that the noblest of the younger generation care about."

Let me pass on the key sentences of her appeal.

"You must change it," she said to the youth to whom she had been painting a picture of the ill-arranged and insecure world their fathers had left them after the war, "and I will tell you why. Because you alone can change it."

"In order to change the world, you must first believe that change is possible. But it is very difficult for older people to believe it. They too, once dreamed their dreams.

"And in one generation, in one lifetime, we do not see much change. We see so little that we begin to think, towards the end of our lives, that change is impossible. We grow so terribly accustomed to failure that at last it becomes almost impossible to believe that the world can greatly change.

"You have not yet experienced that, or have not experienced it as the old have, and therefore you can believe the world will change, and your belief is just. You are right, and those who despair are wrong.

"The world will not be changed by those who believe it cannot be changed. Such people may go on working, from a sad sense of duty, for a future in which they have ceased to believe; but it is those who believe who will bring it about. The tools are to you. Use them.

"As long as you believe in the possibility of progress you are young; when you lose it you are old. For youth and age have nothing essentially to do with years."—Glen Frank.

WORKING ON ROAD AROUND WARSAW

Gravel is Being Drawn — Several Accidents on Slippery Roads.

WARSAW, Dec. 11.—Mr. McKivor has five teams on drawing gravel from Wm. Davis' gravel pit for the boundary. There are three men working in the pit. The gravelling is started at Gordon Payne's gate and will go to the Dummer road.

The roads were very slippery, especially on the hills, Tuesday. The bankers, coming up from Norwood, had their car upset coming down Morgan's hill. No one was hurt, but the glass in the coupe was broken.

In the evening Sidney Watley's car started to slide coming down Harding's hill and upset, breaking the top of the car and the windshield, but the occupants of the car were not seriously injured. Mr. Watley had a few bruises and his daughter's hand was slightly injured.

Warsaw school will close for the Christmas holidays on Friday evening, Dec. 18. Mr. Currie has been teaching on Saturdays. The Presbyterian Sunday School will hold its annual entertainment on that evening instead of, as usual, on New Year's evening, as Mr. Currie is taking an active part in the preparation.

Ed. Bell and H. Richmond were getting out wood, and quit Tuesday evening, as they worked in water until it froze up.

How do you serve Vegetables?

It is really so easy to make the everyday vegetables more appetizing and nutritious without any extra trouble. Thousands of women have found that the same handy OXO CUBES that help them to utilize all sorts of left-overs are equally valuable when preparing vegetables.

Instead of serving these "plain boiled", they dissolve an OXO CUBE or two in a little water and add to vegetables which are cooked in their own juice. The addition of the fresh beef flavour and the extra food elements of the concentrated beef make all the difference in the world in the taste of the average vegetable.

Carrots, cauliflower, stewed potatoes and beets are often served with a cream sauce. To be good, this was made with butter and cream. But good cooks have found that they can make a better "cream dressing" with the plain juices of the vegetables, thickened with flour and flavoured with OXO CUBES. Oxo Cubes give a richness and tastiness that once you try them, you will always desire them.

Learn the new ways of putting flavour and sound food value into all sorts of meat, fish, and vegetable dishes.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Walter Plak, 18, of 906 Langlois Avenue, is lying injured in Hotel Dieu as the result of a railway crossing accident Thursday in which he narrowly escaped death.

The machine was destroyed by the impact. Plak was taken to the hospital in an ambulance hastily summoned from A. J. QUEBEC'S PREMIER CELEBRATES 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF ELECTION AS GUEST OF HIS CONSTITUENTS

Revenues Grown From $4,770,000 To $25,000,000 in Quarter Century.

PRAISE FOR GOUIN.

Province Followed Policy of Traditional Sanity, Says Premier.

QUEBEC, Que., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press) — Premier L. A. Taschereau was banquetted last night by four hundred of his electors on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his election as a member for Montmorency. The banquet was a non-political affair, M. Lefrancois, who presided with M. Blais, being a strong Conservative.

The Federal Government was represented by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Hon. H. S. Beland and Hon. Lucien Cannon. All the Premier's colleagues were also sitting at the table of honor. There were present: Hon. J. E. Caron, Hon. J. L. Perron, Hon. Athanase Daivd, Hon. J. E. Perreault, Hon. Antonin Galipeault, Hon. Jacob Nicol, Hon. Martin Maden, Hon. E. Mareau and Hon. L. Lapierre.

A delegation from Montreal headed by Leon Garneau, K.C., and Alphonse Decary, K.C., were among the guests.

M. Lefrancois proposed and Hon. J. E. Caron seconded the toast to the Premier who responded by recalling the history of his 25 years in parliament. Of the 74 members of the house of 1900 Mr. Taschereau is the only one still a member of the assembly.

Sir Lomer Gouin proposed the health of the County of Montmorency to which responded H. E. Lavigeur, M.P., Pierre Casgrain, M.P., and M. Pouliot one of the oldest electors of Montmorency.

Hon. Mr. Lapointe also spoke and complimented the Prime Minister on his silver jubilee.

Premier's Address

In the course of the quarter of a century, Hon., Mr. Taschereau said, while the province had made great progress along all lines, it had not departed from its policy of traditional sanity, and had not swayed to each passing wind, and was not disposed to embark upon what were called modern ideas, preferring to leave other provinces the pleasures of experimenting. He dealt with the increase in provincial revenue and the increase in expenditures for the various departments in the 25 years, and added that he was awaiting with impatience the day when still greater revenues would permit the government to make larger grants for education, and he was glad to say that the time was not far distant when this could be done.

Turning to the natural resources of the province, the Premier said that it had been calculated that the

DEFIANT TURKS ADMIT VIOLENCE IN DEPORTATION OF CHRISTIANS

Angora's Challenging Attitude Toward League of Nations Intensified By Withdrawal of Delegation From Geneva Sessions.

ABSENT FROM MOSUL DISCUSSION.

GENEVA, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—No solution of the Mosul problem acceptable to Turkey can be found at the present session of the League of Nations council, Tewfik Rushdi Bey, the Turkish Foreign Minister, declared last night. The Turkish delegation would not only refuse to accept any decision the council may make as arbiter under the World Court opinion, but would not participate in any further deliberations of the council on the Mosul question.

Thus the threat made by Munir Bey, the Turkish minister to Switzerland immediately after the council had accepted the world court verdict that it was empowered to make a binding and final decision, has virtually become a reality. Rusdi By, however, said that he would not leave Geneva immediately but would remain to see whether "some reasonable proposal along the lines of real meditation may be made."

Presented Their Case.

He emphasized that the Turks were content that they had presented their case fully and clearly before World public opinion. He explained that even any mediation proposition must necessarily be taken up in consultation with the Angora government, and this would require so long that it would not be possible to discuss the proposition before the adjournment of the council.

The announcement of the withdrawal of the Turks was presaged earlier in the day, when Rushdi Bey sent a letter to the Council that the Turkish deelgation would refuse to attend the session to discuss the report on Mosul submitted by General Laidoner, of Esthonia, special agent of the league. The Turks, however, did not allow to pass unanswered General Laidoner's decision that the Turkish authorities were carrying out wholesale deportations of Christians, accompanied by atrocious violence and even massacre.

Deport Christians.

While not denying the charge, the Turkish delegation explained that deportations with violence were carried out against armed Nestorian Christians, who "had always agitated against Turkey."

Counter-charges were made that Moslems had been drivn out of territory provisionally held by the British and that many villages in the Turkish district had been devastated by British aerial bombardment.

KING'S FRIEND DIES A PAUPER

Shipbuilder, Once Millionaire, Called Edward VII "Teddy."

TOO GENEROUS.

LUTON, England, Dec. 11—Once a close personal friend of the late King Edward, William Walter Butler, formerly a wealthy Liverpool shipbuilder, died recently, a pauper, in the workhouse infirmary here. Reckless generosity was blamed for his descent.

Mr. Butler was the son of a London wine merchant and founder of Butler's Wharf on the Thames. When 13 years old he attended boarding school in Luton. When his father died, the young man did not inherit the estate, but was reared by his grandmother. Having a little money of his own, he decided to go into business.

"I have a horror of gambling, but on that occasion I really did toss up as to whether to go to Liverpool or Portsmouth," the aged man said shortly before his death. The former city won, and well do I regret it now.

"I started as a mineral broker. After some time I met, at the Exchange, John Banner, who was trading as Banner Brothers. We amalgamated and got on very well. Eventually we bought the South Garton Docks, but the firm sustained some heavy losses, and I left Liverpool, relinquishing my interest in the partnership."

After that, Mr. Butler's fortune dwindled until he depended entirely on an old age pension for his income, until a sister hearing of his plight sent him an allowance. This, however, proved inadequate to meet his needs and he became a porter, which he remained until his fatal illness.

His wealth at one time was, in his own estimate, nearly $5,000,000. So friendly were King Edward and he that they called each other "Teddy" and "Walter".

"They met frequently when the King, in his earlier days, made periodical visits to Brighton," said Albert Edward White, a Luton tobacconist, who was one of Mr. Butler's few friends during recent years. "They were on terms of closest friendship."

"He used to say that he had been too liberal with his money, and even in his poorest days, when he had little enough for himself, I know that he gave small sums away.

"He put down his fallen fortunes to reckless generosity, and, while he had a multitude of friends when wealthy, they disappeared when he was at last poor."

Essex Council Adopts Law For Lights On Vehicles

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 11.—(By Canadian Press).—Following addresses by J. C. Schofield, Dr. J. W. Brian and W. H. Adams, secretary of the Ontario Motor League, the county council in session at Sandwich Thursday instructed their solicitor to draw up a by-law requiring all moving vehicles, drawn by horses, or motor propelled, to carry lights between sunset and sunrise on county roads.

This by-law is now possible by enabling legislation recently passed by the Provincial Government. It follows the recommendations made by several coroners' juries within the last year, after a number of fatal acidents arising from the presence of unlighted vehicles on the roads. Discussion arose over the matter and no definite opposition developed.

SKELETON FOUND.

Revolver Beside Remains in Quebec.

STE. ANNE DELA PERADO, Que., Dec. 11.—What are believed to be the remains of a suicide were discovered near this village by A. Fiscot and A. Lamothe. Only a skeleton remained.

A revolver containing five cartridges was found near the left hand of the dead man, and on the other side was a bottle still containing a small quantity of brandy. Some people here believe the body is that of a young Montreal man who was employed on a farm here last summer and who disappeared.

INCREASED SUBSIDY.

Britain's Aid to Mining Now £19,000,000.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press.)—A supplementary estimate of £9,000,000 for the coal mining subsidy, making a total voted of £19,000,000 was adopted by the House of Commons last night.

Windston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, moving the vote, explained that 90 per cent. of the subsidy had gone directly to wages. Over the whole coal fields the mine owners were making scarcely any profit, he asserted, but were just able to keep themselves going. He estimated that the total cost of the subsidy would approach £21,000,000.

ALDERMAN MAY RESIGN

Windsor City Father Feels Florida Lure.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Rumors that Alderman A. W. Strong might resign from the city council as he contemplated removing to Florida, were current at the city hall Thursday but could not be confirmed as it was found impossible to get in touch with the alderman.

Friends of Alderman Strong say that he is anxious to go to the "boom" state and follow the building business there. So far as can be learned Alderman Strong has not visited the city hall for more than a week.

Fashion Goes To Zoo For Season's Decorative Ideas

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Fashion again is going to the zoo for its decorative ideas of the season.

Almost every known skin has been taken up by the modern furrier, and in addition the animal motif in decoration has made its presence evident in unexpected directions.

Jewelled animal, fish, bird and insect pins are seen a great deal on hats. Stags, dogs, frogs and lizards are among the favorites. A tiny squirrel embroidered in the corner of a pocket handkerchief is novel and some women even have the particular species of pet dog they favor used in this way.

Another striking effect for ordinary wear is a snake embroidered in gold thread up the front of the stocking.

TWO MADOC MEN ARE CONVICTED

Fined For Assaulting Robert McGhee Last August.

BELLEVILLE COURT.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 11.—Found guilty by a jury of assaulting Robert McGhee, of Madoc, Roy Jarvis, aged 26, also of Madoc was fined $100 and in default of immediate payment must spend three months in the county jail. Damon Hoover, found guilty of aiding and abetting the assault by a jury, was fined $50 or two months. Both fine were promptly paid.

Neither man had been in court before except on intoxication charges. Jarvis is unmarried, but Hoover has a wife and four children.

Robert McGhee, aged 66, former O.T.A. constable at Madoc, where he has lived for many years, and the man who was assaulted told of being assaulted by the accused, Roy Jarvis, opposite the gangway at the St. Lawrence Hotel, about ten o'clock on the night of August 13th last. He was returning with John Rollins from a lodge meeting, carrying a parcel of books, when he says he was set upon by Jarvis and beaten up. M. McGhee is now a tailor at Madoc, and has been in that business there for the past 36 years.

John Rollins, who has lived in Madoc three years, corroborated the testimony of McGhee, he having witnessed the fight.

Eric Cross, student at Osgoode Hall, who was visiting at Madoc and who witnessed the fight, told of rushing forward to separate the men when Damon Hoover, who is charged with aiding and abetting the assault, stepped in front of him and placing a hand on his shoulder said, "Do not interfere, they are settling an old score."

Dr. Sam Eagleson, who attended McGhee the morning following the fight, told of McGhee's black eye and cracked cheek bone, a callous having formed where the bone knit. There was also a cut on the back of his head.

Jarvis, aged 26, and a husky unassuming chap, said he had never been in a fight before, and did not know how to fight scientifically. He told of McGhee having knocked him down with a club when he was constable about ten years ago. He told of buying a suit from McGhee which was very unsatisfactory, wearing out in two months. He walked up to McGhee this night to ask about another suit. McGhee said he would give him one for $37. When they argued about the quality of the other suit, and McGhee was accused of giving him poor value, witness said that McGhee struck at his face with his fist and the fight was on. He was sorry after the fight because McGhee was an older man than he, but he only wished to get away from him, and had to strike him three times before McGhee would release his hold.

CABINET MEETING.

Premier King Met Some of Ministers Thursday.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11. (Canadian Press).—Premier W. L. Mackenzie King and a number of his Cabinet Ministers held a further conference Thursday, in the Prime Minister's office, extending over several hours, and following one held earlier in the day.

At the conclusion of the later conference, it was stated that "the Prime Minister had been talking over matters with his colleagues which he wished to discuss with them," and that the conference had "no special significance."

The Ministers who conferred with Premier King, including Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Finance; Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster General; Hon. Boivin, Minister of Customs and Excise, and Hon. Vincent Massey and Hon. Herbert Marler, Ministers without portfolio.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED.

On Ennismore Youth For Theft of Truck.

LINDSAY, Dec. 11.— At a session of the county court Thursday, His Honor Judge Swayze presiding, the Ennismore farm hand, committed to trial some weeks ago on the charge of stealing a motor truck at Omemee, came up for hearing. The truck, it will be remembered, was found by Provincial Officer Storey, near Fee's Landing in a damaged condition. The accused was allowed to go on suspended sentence for a period of one year, but must pay for the damages sustained by the truck.

According to the authorities, he young man is wanted in Peterborough for abducting a young girl, the offence, it is charged, having taken place in Peterborough county on the occasion of a garden party.

RICE LAKE OPEN AGAIN BY STORM

Waves Rolled High Last Saturday and the Ice Disappeared.

ROADS ARE RUTTED.

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 11—Saturday's storm was one of the most severe downpours of rain that has been experienced in this district for some time. The storm was very much like a cloudburst, and the water teemed over the eaves on the houses and outbuildings. The surface, wherever the land was level, was from six to eight inches deep with water, and the creeks were running over the banks.

During Saturday's storm the ice completely disappeared from Rice Lake, and by Sunday morning the residents residing within sight of the lake could once again see the huge waves rolling up upon the shores.

Christmas Concerts.

Throughout this district many of the local Sunday schools and public schools, as well as young people's organizations, are busily engaged in preparing their Christmas entertainments.

Almost every night during the week before Christmas and the week after Christmas is taken up in school concerts, Sunday school concerts, plays, club dances, etc.

It looks as though the young folks of this community were going to have sufficient activities during this Christmas season to keep them going until the Christmas season comes to an ending.

Ruts in Side Roads.

Although the Provincial highway is in unusually good condition for motoring on this fall, still the township roads are in a very poor condition in these parts.

Some travellers have stated that they have seldom known the rural roads to be in a worse condition in the spring of the year. Already several motorists who have insisted on driving too fast over the rough roads and deep ruts have been taught a lesson by finding themselves in the ditch. There is great danger with the roads in their present bad condition of the cars jumping the rut and skidding into the ditch. Fortunately, there are few deep ditches along the rural roads now that are not fenced on either sides with stout railings.

Personal Mention.

The mail carrier on R. R. No. 1, S. Monaghan, has changed his time of delivering the mail until afternoons instead of forenoons.

Mrs. C. Dawson has moved to Toronto recently where she has taken up residence with her son, Earnest Dawson and her daughters, Misses May and Edna.

Miss Kathleen Dawson, who has for the past few weeks been the guest of friends at Keene, has returned to her home here.

Mr. Todd, teacher of the public school here, has resigned his school and accepted a school on the Toronto staff. Mr. Todd will be vacating the school at Christmas. He will be much missed by his pupils, who have grown to respect their teacher to the highest degree for the able way in which he taught such a large number, and the interest that he took in his pupils both during schools hours and out of school.

Quite a number of the farmers of this district attended the sale of Mr. Willard Jemison of Hope township on Tuesday last.

ACCIDENT TO COBOURG MEN

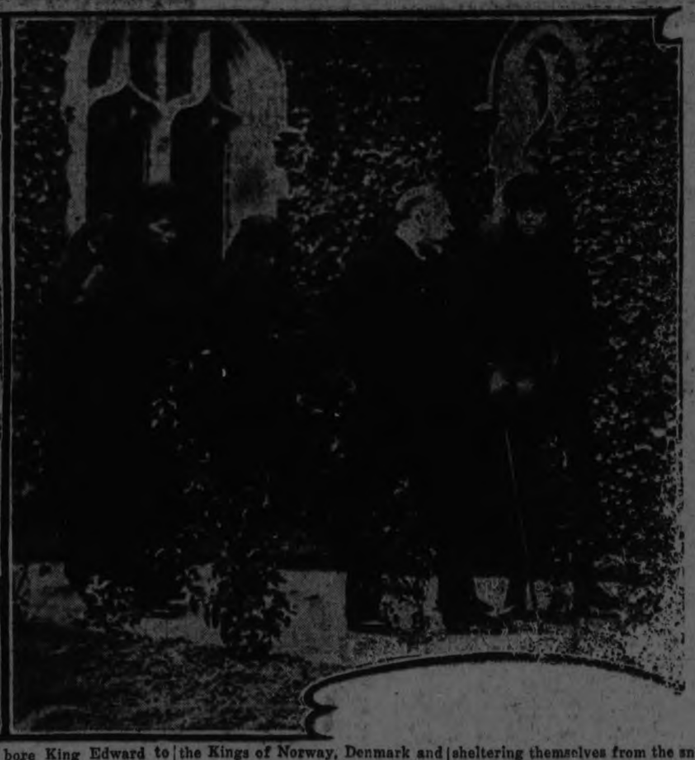
WENT INTO DITCH

COBOURG, Dec. 11.—Icy roads and a snowstorm that plastered the windshields of autos was the reason for a number of motor accidents on Sunday, Three Cobourg citizens, Messrs. W. G. Scopes, Harry Jones and Thos. Flannigan were injured, when their car turned turtle and landed them in a deep ditch on the Provincial Highway, about two miles east of Cobourg. Mr. Scopes had turned out as he met another car, and his car skidded. He and Mr. Johns were pinned beneath the overturned car, which is practically a complete wreck. Thos. Flannigan managed to crawl out and then secured help to lift the car off the others. Mr. Johns was taken to the hospital, and it was feared at first that a bone in the neck was broken, but an X-ray revealed only bad bruises.



London has seen royal funerals with more pomp and grandeur than that which marked the passing of Queen Alexandra, but none has been more impressive or marked by such genuine mourning on the part of the distinguished company in the procession and the many thousands of humbler subjects which lined the streets on one of London's coldest days. At the top left is seen the casket resting on the same gun carriage which bore King Edward to the tomb. At the top right are seen the King, Prince of Wales and the Kings of Norway, Denmark and Belgium walking behind the coffin. Below: a group of elderly women sheltering themselves from the snow as they watched and waited for the dead Queen Mother to pass.

R. S. STAPLES CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION COUNCIL AT CONVENTION IN CAVANVILLE

Inspiration Assembly of Cavan and South Monaghan Religious Workers.

HELD ON TUESDAY.

Need of Religion and Opportunity of Church Teachers Stressed.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 11—The thirty-fifth annual convention of the Cavan and South Monaghan Religious Education Council was held in the United Church, Cavanville, on Tuesday afternoon and evening, and was a most inspirational gathering though the unfavorable state of the roads prevented a number of interested workers from being present.

The afternoon session opened with the retiring President, Mr. J. H. McGill, of Centreville, in the chair, the pastor, Rev. J. O. Totten, taking charge of the devotional period, and Rev. A. H. McConnachie, of Springville, offering prayer.

Mr. Hubert Gardiner, secretary, read the minutes of the last convention, and called for reports from Department Superintendents. The latter seemed to be conspicuous by their absence though Miss McIndoo, of Fairmount, had an encouraging report of missionary finances, a total of $187.50 having been sent to Toronto from eight schools, representing an increase of $3.50 for special objects, and of $33.40 to the general board. The other six schools failed to respond to the missionary secretary's request for information.

Programme of Education.

Rev. H. W. Foley, of Frazerville, gave the first address covering in a comprehensive manner a "programme of religious education suitable in the local church for any child in our congregation," taking as a working basis the truth that "every child belongs to the Lord, and will unfold and come into a right life if brought under proper influences."

Right character depends on the life programme, and religious education is affected by home, school, church, and community conditions and teaching. "We cannot control home, school, or community life to any appreciable extent, but we can control the church and the Sunday School and to set up their programme is our business."

Such a programme has three essentials: Instruction, Worship and Training, and Mr. Foley illustrated his talk by a chart containing an outline covering one year's work with a junior boy, say of 9 years. The points emphasized were: 1, Sunday School attendance; 2, Church attendance (in both cases 45 points for honors, and 35 for a pass); 3, Satisfactory work with lesson; 4, Memory work, including 48 Bible verses, specially chosen, the books of the New Testament, and one or two outstanding hymns; 5, Taking part in three special days during the year; 6, Taking part in three special social occasions; 7, Missionary instruction and giving; 8, Temperance instruction; 9, Daily prayer and Bible study; 10, Grace at meals—"it is a shame that any growing child should eat unconsecrated food."

Recognition of results obtained, by means of a diploma, or in some other way, is absolutely essential, the teacher keeping the record.

The treasurer's report showed the allotment of $105 for North Durham fully met, the amount sent from Cavan and South Monaghan being $55.21. All schools are asked to pay their assessment for 1926, as soon as possible, a number doing so at the convention.

Moving People to God.

Rev. Ernest Harston, of Woodville, the representative of the Ontario Religious Education Council, was the concluding speaker, giving a very practical address on "Ways of getting hold of people in the community and moving them for God."

Basing his remarks on the example of the four men told of in Mark's gospel, who brought their sick brother to Christ in spite of tremendous difficulties, the speaker said, "There are people in every community who will never be a particle of use for the Kingdom of God until somebody gets behind them and helps, but once going they will accomplish wonderful things."

"Some people never get into action until their hearts are broken and the church has a unique opportunity in a time of sorrow, for this may be God's way of opening hearts to His call."

"Sunday School workers have a priceless opportunity to bring growing boys and girls into vital relationship to Jesus Christ, so it will be a natural thing for them to answer the challenge to go into action for God and His Kingdom."

"There are four vital things necessary to have a Sunday school as flourishing as it should be," the speaker said, using the analogy of an automobile, "the gasoline of the Holy Spirit, the oil of love, the spark of faith, and the water of enthusiasm."

Continuing the analogy and showing how Sunday school progress is hindered, or wrecked, just as a car may be stopped by such things as a blowout—"too touchy about feelings, a hard spot reached, leave the school"—a leakage, "too many scholars drift away and teachers are indifferent;" a foul sparkplug, "individual lives may have foul spots that slow progress;" a short circuit, "if you don't go my way, I won't go at all."

"Take the troubles to the Master Mechanic, Jesus Christ, and then move forward on the highway of service that leads to the city of God."

The "Question Drawer" which closed the afternoon session called forth much practical information and discussion, Rev. Mr. Harston being in charge.

Tea was served in the basement of the Community Hall by the ladies of Cavan church who are noted for their generous hospitality, a reputation which was fully sustained in the present instance.

Rev. J. O. Totten led the opening song service at the evening's session, and Rev. F. H. Howard the worship period.

Officers Installed.

An impressive installation service for the newly-elected officers was conducted by Rev. Ernest Harstone, the list being: President, R. S. Staples, Cavan; vice-President, W. F. Fallis, Millbrook; Secretary-Treasurer, Hubert Gardiner, Mount Pleasant; Superintendent of Children's work, Mrs. jas. Douglas, Cavan; Supt. Boys' Work, F. N. Alcorn, Millbrook; Supt. Girls' Work, Miss Pearl Burnham, Millbrook; Supt. Missions, Miss Emma McIndoo, Fairmount; Supt. Adult Work, Mr. William Finney, South Monaghan; Home Department Supt., Mrs. R. M. Hootan, Fairmount; Supt. Temperance, Ray Finlay, Frazerville; Supt. Teacher-Training, Rev. J. O. Totten, Cavan; Supt. Young People's work, Bruce Elliott, Frazerville.

An address by Rev. F. H. Howard on "The Irresponsibility of Society in the present day," had reference to the nerve and hardihood of the criminally inclined, urging that as police and government forces become more active these would not long be confined to the thickly populated centres but would be crowded out to the smaller communities and rural areas.

Making a strong plea for "those caught in the habit and practice of sin," the speaker urged that true liberty is not found in anarchy, but in respect for the laws of God and of the State. "The trouble with many to-day is that they have not been trained in right living and unless some Good Samaritan comes along and sets them free they will be damned sure as anything."

Teachers' Opportunity.

Sunday School teachers have a golden opportunity of impressing on the young lives the fact that it is fools that hate knowledge, and that harmony with the physical and moral laws wisely established by our Creator, and with the laws of their country enacted for its peace and security is to live in real freedom and success, and thus in some measure crime will cease from among us.

"Instruction, rather than incarceration and punishment will lead out into right thought and action, and who knows but the United Church was raised up by God to meet just such a crisis in the life of the nation and of the world?"

A duet, "Jesus is Near," by Mrs. R. S. Staples, and Mrs. A. Kennedy, with Mrs. (Rev.) Totten as accompanist, and a solo, "Beautiful Garden of Prayer," by F. N. Alcorn, were musical numbers which were much appreciated.

The final address on "Our Greatest National Need," by Rev. Mr. Harston, brought an inspiration which will not soon be forgotten by the listeners.

Canada's Greatest Need.

Throughout his address the speaker emphasized that "material things alone do not begin to touch the deepest need of Canada to-day. Not once nor twice have we been taught that the nation which relies only upon such resources totters to its doom. Though there be a glut of gold in its markets, any nation that falls down in regard to the soundness of heart, and cleanness of blood of its sons and daughters, makes one of the greatest failures.

"The greatest asset of any land is to have its manhood and womanhood permeated through and through with the Spirit of Jesus Christ, and there is not a solitary problem, individual, national, or international, that can not be solved, mastered, and brought to a successful issue by an application of the principles of our Saviour.

"There is no wave of crime but can be stemmed if we can get Christ enthroned in the national consciousness, but how bring about a sense of need of the remedy? There is not nearly as clear cut a mark between Christians and the world as there should be. I don't know a class on earth that can be as easily fooled as church folk, and all the time we are dabbling in these questionable things which are eating the soul out of the church, the heart of our Lord is pierced, and the face of the devil is lit up with smiles.

"There must be a revival of home religion or we are going to hit a trail some day that will bring us down to destruction. More strong, effective preaching is also necessary, with thorough, up-to-date Sunday school work, and more and more religious instruction in the schools. This is our task."

The usual votes of thanks, with the announcement that the convention next year will be held either at Centreville of Bensfort, brought the gathering to a close, Rev. Mr. Howard pronouncing the benediction.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

Mrs. S. E. Little, 103 Inkerman St., London, Ont., writes:—"I got a very severe cold which settled in my bronchial tubes.

I coughed night and day, and although I tried several different remedies I could get no relief until a friend advised me to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This I did, and I must say that it gave me almost immediate relief as I got rid of my cough very quickly. I hope this testimonial will be the means of helping others."

VISITORS ATTEND LODGES IN MADOC

I. O. O. F. Was Visited by Belleville and Stirling Lodges.

MADOC, Dec. 11.—Madoc I.O.O.F. held a very successful meeting on Monday evening when representatives of Belleville and Stirling Lodges were present and assisted in the conferring of degrees. Belleville I.O.O.F. No. 81 exemplified the first degree. The floor work of the Guards was particularly fine. Those taking part gave their work in clear distinct tones, especially Noble Grand Duckworth, which was of special benefit to the candidates. Those on whom this degree was conferred were: S. J. Phillips, Claude Demille, Charles Conley, Jr., of Madoc and Messrs. Abbott and Palmer of Stirling.

Stirling Lodge then took the floor and exemplified the second degree in their usual able manner. One of the main features of this part of the evening's work was the excellent music accompanying the floor work, and provided by Messrs. Harvey and Fraser. Conductor Harold Ashley's work also deserves special mention.

Madoc brothers then put on the fourth degree, and the musicians present were again generous with their playing.

County Master Hawthorne visited L.O.L. No. 300, West Huntingdon, on Monday evening at a meeting held for the election and installation of officers. District Master Leury of No. 3 district was also present and gave an inspiring address. The Lodge was well represented and all listened with great enjoyment to the addresses given by Brothers Hawthorne and Leury. After the business had been completed the rest of the evening was passed in song and story. Brother Leury told a number of amusing anecdotes, and Brother Hawthorne sang an old Irish song, which was much appreciated. Brother Roberts of Madoc was also present and gave much pleasure with his singing.

COUNTIES PROPERTY COMMITTEE MEETS

Two Small Items of Business Considered at Session.

(By A Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, Dec. 11.—The property committee of the Counties Council, of which Reeve Elliott of Murray is chairman, and Deputy-Reeve Peake of Seymour is clerk, held a session Wednesday night and disposed of two brief items of business.

The Burnall Fuel Savings Appliance Company of Peterboro offered to put in on 30 days' trial one of their inventions in the Counties Building, guaranteeing a saving of 20 per cent at least in coal. A representative of the company addressed the Council in the interests of the invention during the afternoon session.

The cost of maintenance of the Counties' Biulding is jointly paid by the Town of Cobourg and the United Counties and the Town Council asked the Counties to co-operate in installing the improvement. It was figured that as the building requires 175 tons of coal a year that the annual saving would be 35 tons, 17½ for the town and the same amount to the counties.

On motion of Deputy-Reeve Nelson of Percy this matter was referred to the Council of next year as it was the opinion of the committee that the present council is too near the end of its term to take action.

Clothing For Gaol Officials.

Sheriff Nesbitt wrote to remind the Councillors that they are by Statute required to provide clothing for the gaol officials. This was, on motion of Deputy-Reeve Nelson, referred to the special property committee consisting of Reeve W. F. Elliott, chairman, Reeve Corbett of Cobourg, Reeve Staples of Manvers and Warden McCamus.

Coughs and Colds

Are dreaded by Mothers who do not know of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

What a weight of responsibility rests on the mother of the family during the cold weather season. In every cough and cold she seems to hear the warning of serious developments. She dreads croup, bronchitis, pneumonia and consumption and realizes that these are the natural result of neglected colds.

But Dr. Chase has provided a prompt relief for coughs and colds and a preventive of more serious ailments of throat and lungs, in his Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

This medicine is so well-known that only a reminder is necessary to most people to recall its effectiveness in relieving croup, bronchitis, asthma and all forms of throat and bronchial troubles.

(Sgd.) Richard Lees.

The question of ventilation was taken up by the board and a lengthy discussion took place with reference to a report, printed in one of the daily papers of Dr. Downham, M.O.H. of London, who has just returned from the convention of the American Public Health Association in St. Louis, in which he states that he is very much impressed with the improved system of ventilation as advocated by Dr. Greenburg at the convention, namely: Open windows on one side, with boards to direct the currents of cold air upwards and vents on the opposite side of the room for the escape of the used air. These vents should be two feet square, and two of them to the average room. This applies to all buildings but schools would be particularly benefited. Dr. Greenburg condemned the modern ventilation systems as useless and harmful.

The Board did not arrive at any decision and the matter was laid over for the present.

FIRE WALKING STILL MYSTERY

Outsiders Cannot Discover Secret of South Sea Natives.

SCIENTISTS BAFFLED

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Dec. 9.—Despite investigations of competent observers, the famous fire-walking ceremony still remains a secret of a small company of natives in the island of Raiatea.

The ceremony was given on this island recently for the first time in many years and outsiders were not excluded from witnessing any stage of the preparation of the fire pit.

When the proper time comes and the celebrants pass through the fire, any bystander asking permission may go through beside them without discomfort.

Outsiders who have passed through the fire say they felt no sensation of heat except on the face, although, when standing outside, the radiation made the pit difficult to approach.

Those trying to solve the mystery have pulled out a large stone from the pit while the ceremony was in progress and thrown it into a pail of water. The water would go up in steam. Some also have tried crawling to the edge of the pit and touching one of the white stones with the finger. They were rewarded with ugly burns.

Scientists who have seen the fire-walking have propounded a number of theories, but practical tests always failed to establish such explanations.

The ceremony, harking back to heathen times and the worship of the old gods, is frowned on by the misionaires and the Christian among the natives. Hence it is seldom performed, even in Raiatea, the place of its origin.

On the right is Bert Schneider, of Montreal, from whom he won the title, right in Schneider's own bailiwick. Fifield had a tough, hard row to hoe to win that title in Montreal—in fact it was up and tuck—but he was game enough to tell Schneider that if he were not satisfied he could have a return bout any time. Schiender has height and reach on Fifield and that he is a smart ring man is attested by the fact that he won the Olympic championship in the class in Antwerp in 1920.

Christmas Is the Children's Holiday!

It was a Baby who first gave us Christmas, and throughout the ages children have held the centre of the stage of this, the greatest holiday.

So bring the children down to our great Toyland. Let them feast their bright eyes on the vast assortment of Toys, Dolls, Games, etc., which we have collected.

Let them see Santa in his castle, where he will be glad to shake their little hands, and listen to their wants.

THE ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin. —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

Do you believe in the scientific determination of destiny?

The Examiner has secured the services of a local expert in the science of drawing from a few basic facts a great amount of information that will be helpful and interesting to you. This gentleman, who for obvious reasons desires to remain anonymous under the pen-name "The Oracle", has made a deep study of the science. It is a fascinating study, founded on facts that no one can dispute. It is one of the oldest of the sciences, revived through much reading and application to ancient tables and writings.

And the knowledge of the ages is offered to Examiner readers free of all cost.

All You Must Do

is fill in the attached form and mail it to "The Oracle", The Examiner Office, 419 George street, Peterborough. Initials only will be used in The Examiner. If you desire a more complete reading, enclose a stamped envelope.

Please note that full information can be based only on the complete particulars. Here is what is offered:

When full particulars are given:

Please Remember

that the full name and full date of birth must be given, such as: "John Robert Doe, 12 March, 1899." In seeking advice on a particular day, state the date, month, and year.

J. L. C.—You have characteristics of great strength, mentally, and your physical constitution, too, is good. You are blessed with the great boon of mankind — understanding and sympathy with others. The world instinctively requires much of men having your features, and it is seldom disappointed. Without losing anything of your individuality you could think less of your personal appearance and devote more attention to developing your mind in preparation for the life that is just opening before you. Remember you have not accomplished anything yet on which to preen yourself. You must work and think towards a goal. You are fond of the abstract rather than the concrete, and this is one of the adjustments you must make. And 1930 is still a long way off.

H. D. A.—You are changeable and uncertain in your habits, but have great physical and good mental force. You will be liked socially and personally because of your attractive charm. You should develop depth and cultivate the virtue of constancy. You must be diplomatic to succeed and at all times use great tact. You would be a skillful worker with your hands. Your influence over others must be exerted for good in order to obtain your own peace of mind and secure their friendship. Your color is pink, in all its shades.

B. T.—There's really not much can be said of you, is there? You have had advice in the past—I see good influences all through your life—but you have gone your own way. However, some who come to mock may stay to give thanks. Get out of bad company; get clean thoughts into your mind; take your eyes out of the mud and slime and see the stars and sunshine. Life is not a game out of which you are to take all the pleasure you can at no matter whose expense. Life may be sweet and pure and noble—and full right up with the finest of satisfaction.

Are there going to be any regrets tomorrow about that good meal you're all set to stow away tonight. Better take Seigel's Syrup. Any drug store.

R. H.—You must adjust your mind so that cause for shyness will be destroyed, and you should dissipate by good reading and high thinking the trend toward the occult you have recently taken. You are a lover of peace, but will not take a grave slight without fighting back. You are intended to marry young, and will make your husband happy through your happy personality. You are easy to get along with, and can be trusted with confidences. Be generous, even to those you do not admire greatly. Life will deal pleasantly with you; pass on a little of the cheer. Your colors are orange and heliotrope.

Lassie—You are highly individual, not associating well with those whom you do not admire highly. Your achievements will be made alone, and you must depend upon your own genius to guide you. You have a fine feeling for art, especially architecture and designing, and have unusual quickness of perception. You are not painstaking, and should develop system in all you do. You are inclined to be restless and skeptical, though interested in religion. Your love is given for love's sake, and cannot be bought by wealth, pity, or kindness. You have characteristics of integrity and virtue. Cultivate a kind of impersonal love for all people; look at the rest of the world in a more kindly way. You will not accomplish much on the day you mention. It is a day when you should sit down and quietly reason things out. Let things take their course naturally; and, above all, don't worry.

Curly—Ah, Curly, you are learning the meaning of living, aren't you? And finding it not all roses? You have extraordinary ability with head and hands, but have not developed it. Change and uncertainty are your lot immediately, but with that finess of character you must overcome obstacles and emerge triumphant. Your destiny is achievement—never lose sight of that, and keep working towards it, secretly if need be. Let no force smother your ambition. Do not pay so much attention to showy people; they are never the best people. Look for real worth. Try writing as an outlet for that creative spirit of yours. Give free rein to your artistic sense. You will only be happy and contented when married if you have exercised extreme care in selecting a mate with whom you can reach out for harmonious spiritual development. Keep up heart and hope.

A. R.—You did not send any particulars on which I can base a reading.

J. S. T.—You are misapplying your efforts. You are tied down to a clerical or other inside task, whereas you should be out in the open air. You have engineering and executive ability above the ordinary. Fuller particulars are necessary.

Tommy—This service is free to readers of The Examiner. Your twenty cents is not necessary, and is being returned to you. But you forgot to send your birth date. Please do this, and will answer as soon as possible.

ENGINEERS HEAR OF IRRIGATION

E. L. Miles, M.E.I.C., Addressed Local Branch on Western Land Reclamation.

MUCH LAND SAVED

Making the waste places of the west fit for cultivation and thereby increasing the productivity of the country was the subject of a most interesting address to the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada by E. L. Miles, M.E.I.C., F.R.S.A., of Lindsay, County Engineer and Road Superintendent for the County of Victoria, and a member of the local branch.

Mr. Miles was for some years in the employ of the Department of the Interior engaged in work of irrigation and drainage, for the land which is to be reclaimed is in some cases too dry and in others covered with water.

Mr. Miles started with reading part of the Irrigation Act, which vests in the crown the rights to all natural water supplies, including rivers, springs, ravines, etc. and reserves to the land owner only the rain water he can collect and the water he can obtain from wells. This law is sometimes the cause of trouble, Mr. Miles speaking of one case he had had to settle where a farmer had let all the neighbors except one use water from his spring. When Mr. Miles called to see him the owner said that he was thinking of closing his gates entirely and asked what would be a fair charge to make for the water. As he had more than was required for his own use he was told that he could not sell any of it but that he had either to open his gate or the Government would fence off the spring, leaving him in the same position as the neighbors.

Irrigation has been practiced for years in many countries, and at present the largest field is in India, where over forty million acres of land are irrigated. In western Canada there are millions of acres that need irrigation but a large part of this is unrrigable, and only four million acres can be irrigated. In the part owned by the C.P.R. the irrigation system cost sixteen million dollars and the 1924 wheat crop amounted to twenty-one million dollars.

The crop has increased from 33 to 260 percent, the yield of wheat going from 33 to 44 bushels per are, while the potato crop went up from 50 to 650 bushels per acre.

The other side of the work is that of getting rid of the surplus water where the land is too well moistened. Whereas the irrigation projects are mostly in the southern parts of these provinces, the drainage is done further north. Large areas are marshy, while shallow lakes cover thousands of acres. Many lakes are only three feet deep miles out, and by draining them into convenient rivers the land is made available for agriculture. In the centre there is usually a sort of pot hole fifty or sixty feet deep, which cannot be drained and is left as a small lake. Ths land can usually be reclaimed at a cost of about eight or ten dollars per acre, and is then auctioned or leased.

A. L. Kilaly was the chairman for the evenng. After Mr. Miles had finished speaking a number of questions were asked by different members, all of which were carefully answered.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY AT HOME WAS, ETC.

appreciate a quiet game of cards. People so inclined were mustered on the stage and sat down to bridge or euchre tables. Those who thought cards too slow and dancing too fast were permitted to eat some more, or watch the gyrations of the dancers. Accordingly, as everyone was busy doing something or watchink others (undeniably a potent source of amusement) the company resolved itself into a very happy one indeed—a factor which wreathed the faces of the delighted hosts in smiles.

A feature of the evening's dancing was an old time "suqare," which may not be so ancient either when it was observed that there were more youthful figures involved than any others. True, there were some hoary heads which swirled hither and thither, but the square dance is essentially adapted for the agile feet of youth.

With V. J. McElderry in the capacity of chairman the entertainment began by the orchestra playing the National Anthem. A six piece orchestra led by Mrs. Evans, played a number of selections prior to the commencement of the programme, and also between several of the numbers. Mrs. Evans acted as accompanist for the vocal numbers. It was noted that two of the orchestra members both playing second violin parts were quite young boys, and turned in a remarkable performance.

Mr. McElderry, in introducing E. A. Peck as the first speaker, said that the meeting was not intended to be a stiff formal affair but was to assume a slightly congratulatory character because of the good work done on the last polling day.

E. A. Peck, M.P.

Mr. Peck said that the efforts of the ladies who had prepared the programme for the evening should be considered first and he played a tribute to the active part which the Ladies' Conservative Association had taken in the past electoral campaign. He also said a word of appreciation to the members of the orchestra and congratulated the members for their musicianly qualities. He declared that on the night of the twenty-ninth he had thanked the Conservative supporters for their evidence of approval and he wished again to thank them. In the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, the people had a splendid leader. "What is going to happen at Ottawa when Parliament opens in January, I am not sufficient prophet to foretell. Mackenzie King seems determined to carry on in spite of the desertion of many of his men and the crushing defeat administered to him in his own constituency of North York. However we meet on the 7th day of January and I believe there will be something doing in Ottawa soon after that date. I am sure that with such a cause and such a leader, Mr. Meighen will be speedily restored to his place at the head of National affairs in Canada.

"I had thought we might have Mr. Stinson and Mr. Maybee with us tonight but I have received wires from them to the effect that they can not attend. However, we have Fred Bowen with us—a man whose name has been published from one end of Canada to the other as the man who defeated the Hon. Vincent Massey."

Fred Bowen.

Following a vocal solo by Mrs. Kitney Mr. Bowen presented a brief address in which he told of the pleasure it gave him to be prestnt. He said that a get-together meeting was splendid for the period after an election, and believed that next year would witness another contest in the Federal arena. He attributed the present situation in Ottawa to group government which while not as strong as existed in 1921 was still sufficient to tie up the administration of national business. Some of the candidates, he stated, when appearing before the public again, would be forced to forego their radical platforms, as there were only two sides to the political questions of the present day. The sooner that the two party system is restored the better it will be for Canada, was the opinion of Mr. Bowen. He said that he had dropped into Victoria Hall on nomination night and judged from what he saw that there would be something doing in West Peterborough. Mr. Peck, he declared, had been responsible for vanquishing a Minister of the Crown.

"We have a country," Mr. Bowen said, "which is not governed to the best interests either of the people who live here or the country itself. When the present Government tinkered with the tariff it meant giving way to all other nations. While the King party did not lower the tariff to any great extent, it was enough to cause the business of the country to become disrupted. Nor will there be any advance until we have a national pay-roll and we will not have that till the factories of our country start operating again."

At this juncture Mr. Melton sang two baritone solos which caught the audience. They were titled "There's a Land" and "The Carol Singers," the latter being of a humorous type and used as an encore number.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., was the next speaker, and after an explanation accounting for his late arrival by the fact that he had been in Toronto, he launched into a brief but pithy address. He said: "We have won two elections since 1923, and if we keep our powder dry there is no doubt that we can win every election for the next ten years."

Mr. Bradburn had learned while in Toronto that the U.F.O. intended to float another party. He was sorry for them, and felt that they should be warned by the fact that their leader, Manning Doherty, had practically joined the Conservative ranks. At his home he had noted in The Examiner a pronouncement purported to have been issued by Mr. Ferguson, the leader of the Provincial Legislature. Mr. Bradburn doubted the authenticity of that report, giving as his reason a belief that the Premier would have first consulted his followers before announcing his platform. Whatever it was that Mr. Ferguson decided to do, Mr. Bradburn said he was prepared to support

Mrs. H. T. Fallis.

Mrs. H. T. Fallis, leader of the women's organization, was the next speaker. She attributed much of the success of the evening to the men who had made the necessary detailed arrangements.

Mrs. Fallis said her mind had turned backward to the night of the momentous 20th, when she had last addressed an audience from that platform. She remembered getting three distinct thrills that night, one at the committee rooms, when it was apparent that Mr. Peck's triumph was assured; the second, when, at Victoria Hall, she heard of Premier King's downfall in North York, and the third, when the returns showed Fred. Bowen to be the acknowledged victor over Massey. There was never a time, Mrs. Fallis declared, when the Conservative element was so essential as now, when they acted to maintain national stability. As the West had evidenced Bolshevist tendencies and the Red flag of Communism waved from many of the school buildings, it was proper that the banner province of the Dominion remain essentially British in its precepts.

After a brief word of direction as to the arrangements provided, Mrs. Fallis concluded her address, and the audience fell heartily to the joyous task of diversion.

TUXIS DEBATE.

Election of Parliament Representative Dec. 19.

LAKEFIELD, December 10. — A very interesting and delightful time was spent in the United (Presbyterian) church on Tuesday evening, Dec 8th, when the Star Tuxis Square of that church entertained the Katchewanooke Square of the Regent St. church. The boys with their mentors, Rev. P. L. Jull and Mr. A. B. Burrows, discussed the Boys' Parliament to be held in Toronto during the Christmas vacation, and decided to elect a representatative to attend.

As there are only two registered Squares in Peterboro county this representative will be the member of that Parliament for the county Stanley Darling, Gerald Sherin, Gordon Porter and Donald Kidd are the candidates. The election will be held on Saturday, December 19th with Mr. Burrows as returning officer.

After this item of business a very keenly contested debate was held on the subject: "Resolved,—That the city produces better citizens than the country." Gordon Porter and Russell Payne of the Star Square supported the affirmative and Norman Lemay and Kenneth Kemp of the Katchewanooka Square the negative

The judges were Dr. G. E. Renwick, Mr. Burrows and Mrs. G. C. Grant, who gave the decision for the affirmative.

On Tuesday, December 15th another joint meeting will be held when the candidates for the Boys' Parliament will speak.

THE WHY OF CHRISTMAS TREES.

In the forests of the North, woodsmen are busily engaged in cutting hundreds of beautifully-shaped cedars and balsams, which will soon be in every city throughout the Dominion, to be sold as Christmas trees. On Christmas morning they will be dazzling and glowing with light and color and beauty, and ladened with gifts. Little children will gaze in adoration, clap their hands for joy, and laugh and shout as they behold them, while grown-ups looking on will recapture some of the happiness of their own lost childhood and feel that truly Christmas is the gladdest merriest time in all the year.

This practice of decorating and hanging gifts on a Christmas tree is well-established, and one of the most delightful of our Christmas customs. But just how it all originated is somewhat uncertain. Certainly there is no mention of the Wise Men of old hanging their gifts on a tree. It is, of course, well-known that the Christmas-tree custom was first introduced into England from Germany, about a hundred years ago, and was rapidly adopted by all English-speaking countries. In Germany, the Christmas tree seems to be a very ancient custom, probably a remnant of the fanciful pageants of the middle ages, or may have been introduced into Europe by the ancient pagans, as were so many of our Christmas customs.

There is a legend about the Christmas tree which tells how one, Ansgarius, went forth as a missionary to the Vikings of the North. Three Messengers were sent along with him,—Faith, Hope, and Love,—to find and light the first Christmas street. They searched for one that should be as high as Hope, as wide as Love, and should have the sign of the Cross on every bow. The balsam fir seemed best suited to meet these requirements, and so was chosen, and to this day the balsam fir is the favorite Christmas tree.

And, is not this symbolism one of the most beautiful things about a Christmas tree. For a Christmas tree is always connected with Childhood and Home, both of which enshrine these three qualities,—Love, Faith, and Hope. Indeed, there is no other season of the year when Home lures to itself young and old alike, so strongly and so tenderly, as at Christmastide. The Christmas season finds people travelling north, south, east, and west, to be Home for Christmas.

In anticipation of this heavy Christmas and New Year travel, the management of the Canadian National Railways has made special arrangeemnts by which all holiday travellers may reach "Home", or wherever their destination may be, as comfortably, conveniently, and rapidly as possibly.

Travellers are recommended to secure their tickets and reservations as early as possible, to avoid the last minute rush. 1d

CHURCH COUNCIL TALKS OF LIQUOR

Bootleg Aristocracy Will Govern Next Generation, Says Clergyman.

DETROIT, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press.)—The "bootleg aristocracy" which Rev. Dr. Charles Stelzle, of New York City said, "will have a large part in governing us in the next generation," was pictured yesterday for the annual session of the executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

"There can be no question about the large amount of drunkenness throughout our country to-day," said Dr. Stelzle. "It may be seen upon the streets and in all public places. Liquor may be had in hotels. Indeed, one is solicited by bell boys and the bootlegging industry has become so disgraceful that in some parts of the county it is practically bringing about a nullification of the eighteenth amendment.

Old-time ginger snaps will keep for a long time if stored in a tin box To make, boil one cupful of molasses five minutes, take from fire and add one-half cupful of hortening, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful each of ginger and cinnamon. When cool, stir in enough flour to make the dough stiff enough to roll. Roll thin, cut with cooky cutter and bake in a hot oven, being careful not to let the snaps burn.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

DESCRIBING THE NEW TWO-PIECE EVENING FROCK

Yesterday afternoon I spent an hour shopping with a young friend who had begged me to help her buy a dance frock.

"I'll spend an hour with you," I told her. I managed to get the hour free by having a quick pick-up lunch first, and then launching forth on the shopping expedition.

"The newest thing at Madame's is the two-piece evening frock," I informed Emma.

"I knew you'd give me some good information!" she exclaimed. "I didn't even know two-piece evening frocks were being shown. They sound like sports things."

"They are modeled after the two-piece sports idea," I explained. "But they are typically evening in appearance."

Then Emma informed me that she'd love to go to Madame's, but she did not want to pay above a certain amount for the frock, and she knew Madame's things were usually as expensive as they were good.

"Then I'll take you to a cunning little place I know," I informed her, broad-mindedly. I could understand Madame's things being a little out of reach of the everyday pocketbook.

We went to the place I had in mind, and saw several adorable frocks. Emma was undecided between a two-piece white and silver brocade, and a luscious peach georgette. She decided in favor of the peach georgette.

I'm showing a sketch of it in my diary, because I think it is such a good-looking model.

First, Emma donned the underneath part, which consisted of the skirt gathered onto a plain peach satin bodice. The skirt was split a distance up either side, and stitched along the splits with silver thread embroidery.

"I love this skirt which gives so much room for dancing, and has such a graceful point at the front and back," she remarked.

"Irregular hems are awfully good just now, too," I informed her.

The top part slipped on over her head, just like the daytime over-blouse It had a deeply slit neckline, which revealed the satin bodice of the skirt which was worn beneath.

THE FIGURE.

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(United Press).—Every woman is trying to prove that she is a living Venus these days. Fine figures have become as plentiful as fine feathers. One shows just as much as one dares.

An artist tells us that only women who have unbeautiful figures assume to be shocked by other women's display of figures and refuse to display their own. Beauty, h claims, knows no modsty. It is the ungainly woman who feigns modesty. But be that as it may, one is just a trifle shocked at some of the physical display one sees this Winter.

Many women are brassiere-less, shirtless, corset-less and end extremely short-skirted. It is not unusual to see young women dancing with no under apparel except a form-fitting brassiere and a pair of bloomers. Skirts and petticoats are entirely discarded by the younger element. Even with semi-transparent frocks this is the case. With the velvet evening frock the step-in is the undergarment. Often the entire upper body is bare save for the low-cut frock which is often cut scant over the bust to leave no doubt as to the wearer's figure.

Short skirts have become so common that they no longer provoke any interest. The duffing of corsets hasn't created any furor for the female figure without the corset is less attractive than the slightly corseted one. Only recently, however, have women attempted to go as nearly underwear-less as possible and one wonders whether in time even this will fail to shock us.

In Paris the popular undergarment is the form-fitting silk knit affair with the vest and body portion made in one with the stockings. Over this is worn a gown which is made to display the figure as nearly as possible.

NORTH HURON SEAT TO PROGRESSIVES

Conservative Strength is Reduced Now To 116 Members.

TORONTO, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press.)— The decision of Mr. Justice Wright in the North Huron election case which gives that seat to the Progressive instead of the Conservative candidate, reduces Mr. Meighen's strength in the House of Commons to 116. The Liberals have 101, Progressives 25, Labor 2 and Independent 1.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 11—Adam and Eve learned to sew by watching the tailor bird spin its nest, in the opinion of Sir John Bland Sutton, celebrated British surgeon.

Sir John explained that surgeons still were searching for the perfect stitching material for wounds and asserted birds, plants, insects and animals had been studied with the view of finding the ideal substance.

"In India, Brazil and Asia Minor, the mandibles of ants have been used from remote times as clips for closing the edges of wounds, which are pressed together and the ant applied by means of forceps," said Sir John. "The ant separates its mandibles for defense, and as the insect is brought to the wound it seizes the edges and remains fixed. The body of the ant, antiseptic by virtue of the formic acid normally present in ants, is divided with scissors, leaving the mandibles grasping the edges of the wound."

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 12.

A day of routine affairs in a business way is predicted from the prevailing astrological testimonies, but the realm of social, domestic and affectional affairs may be visited by unhappy experiences or harrowing situations. There is an omen which may mean sickness and sorrow, as well as of some irregular or untoward event, possibly of an abrupt or sensational nature. Discretion with writings is enjoined, and generally the personal affiliations should be protected.

Those whose birthday it is may have a rather routine year in business but there may be anxiety or untoward developments in the realm of the heart and home. These should be safeguarded and employment should also be handled carefully. All letters and writings should be discreetly signed. A child born on this day may be inclined to be restless and unsettled, and it may have anxieties in its domestic or love affairs.

When a man becomes old enough to know better, it is usually too late for him to do better.

Most Women

Have discarded old hygienic methods to assure immaculacy at all times

FEW modern women but employ a new and different way in hygiene. A way that supplants the old-time "sanitary pad" with true protection.

Wear filmy frocks and light things . . . any time. Dance, motor for hours without doubt or fear.

It is called "KOTEX" . . . five times as absorbent as the ordinary cotton pad!

Thoroughly deodorizes . . . thus ending ALL fear of offending.

You ask for it without hesitancy simply by saying "KOTEX" at any drug or department store. Costs only a few cents. Proves risky old ways a folly.

Christmas cakes made by the following recipe improve with age. They require one pound of dark brown sugar, one pound of flour, one-half pound of chopped almonds, one-fourth pound each of chopped citron and candied orange peel, two taspoonfuls of cinnamon, four eggs beaten very light Mix, then roll out ,cut into squares and after cutting brush the top of cakes with a thin sugar-and-water sirup to glaze. Place on well-greased pans and bake.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silvar

DAVID MEETS A LITTLE FELLOW

One day while David was visiting his uncle, who lived in Western Africa, he came across a queer little creature while walking through the woods.

At first David had a big notion to turn around and run back. Then a tiny hand touched his sleeve, and David looked down into a pair of merry black eyes.

"Well, of all things, if it isn't Squeedee!" David cried, hugging the wee little elfin until he almost cried. "Say, it's great to meet you here, Squeedee. What in the world is that funny looking creature? First when I saw him he looked as if he were dragging something behind him. Now he's rolled himself up into a knot. What is it, Squeedee?"

"What, that rough-looking ball?" laughed the elfin. "Why, David, don't you know that's Mr. Longtailed Manis? Sure, it's him. He looks like a dreadful creature, but he wouldn't harm anything. Come on, let's go over and meet him," and he ran over to the funny, rough-looking ball and tapped it on the top. "Come on out and meet a friend," laughed Squeedee.

Slowly the rough-looking ball unrolled and David had his first view of a Long-tailed Manis. From the tip of his funny pointed nose to the very tip-end of his great long tail he was covered with a lovely suit of armor. His forepaws were armed with large, strong claws, and they looked rather wicked when he stretched them out to shake hands with David.

"Don't be afraid of me," he chuckled. "I'm a most harmless creature. Sometimes I think my claws are terrible looking, but when I want to dig down after a good square meal I find they are just what I need."

"You see, David," said Squeedee, "Mr. Long-tailed Manis has no teeth."

"To tear up the ant hills these White Ants build out of clay," sniffed Mr. Long-tailed Manis. "If a fellow can locate the ant hills before the clay becomes baked by the hot sun he's in fine. But if the sun has baked the clay hard, then it's a job. If I didn't have just such claws I never could get at the white ants. I defy anyone who says that they can find an ant hill I can't break into."

"I'll say you can tear them down," laughed Squeedee. "And, David, he has no teeth, so his tongue is long and slender, and is covered with a slimy, sticky stuff, so that when he runs it down into an anthill he can gather the whole tribe up at once."

"My goodness," David stepped back and looked at the funny little fellow. "No wonder my first impression was to run when I saw you."

"Gracious me," chuckled Mr. Longtailed Manis, "why, I'm a peaceful fellow. In fact, I have no way to protect myself but this armor you see me wearing. When I scent danger, I just crawl into myself, roll up like a ball and defy my enemy. There's very few meadow folks who care to bump up against the sharp edges of these plates on my armor. But if I don't get home some one will be looking for me," and bowing very politely, Mr. Long-tailed Manis waddled off down the path to the woods.

David and Squeedee watched him out of sight, then they went into the woods in search of new adventure.

"WE DELIVER ANYTHING ANYWHERE ANYTIME"

FAMOUS FORTUNES

By Barbara Bayne

ANDREW CARNEGIE—
The "Star-Spangled" Scotchman.

Never, perhaps, has a career run such a wide range of the romantic as that of Andrew Carnegie. Starting as a bobbin-boy at twenty cents a day, at fifty-one years of age he was the Steel Caesar of the world. He controlled seven huge plants, coal mines, iron mines, coke ovens and banks and had an annual income of $25,000,000.

Carnegie was a "princely philanthropist"—the most generous donor of money that ever lived. Had he hoarded his wealth instead of sharing it with others, it is estimated that he would have left a fortune of not less than $3,000,000,000. But his frequently expressed desire to rid himself of his riches was no affectation, and he left "only" $30,000,000—less than any modern American Croesus, a hundred million dollars less than his partner, Henry Frick.

His benefactions in America, Scotland and England reach well over $325,000,000. He distributed largess with a lavish hand.

Carnegie pere was a weaver in Dunfermline, Scotland, where our Andy was born. He came to America about 1847 and secured work in a linen mill at Allegheny, and Andy, then eleven years old, became a bobbin-boy, then a stationary engineer, then a messenger-boy in a railroad office, and finally a telegraph operator.

By a daring assumption of authority during the absence of Col. Scott, the division superintendent, Andy fired a message up and down the line that cleared the tracks following a smash-up. Instead of dismissal he won promotion and became Scott's secretary. He had his first "high financial flight" when Scott assisted him to buy ten shares of Adams Express stock. The next high wind brought him the opportunity to sell a block of railroad stock in England. Andy's commission was $250,000.

With his two boyhood chums, Henry Phipps and Tom Miller, Carnegie then started on the big adventure. The Keystone Bridge Works led in succession to the Union Iron Works, the Edgar Thomson Steel Works, the Homestead Works, the Lucy Furnaces and then the Carnegie Steel Company. The latter, in 1900 declared a dividend of $40,000,000, and forty men whom Carnegie had raised from the ranks to partnership, had a slice of the melon.

Then Carnegie's last great coup was in 1901, when his companies formed the nucleus of the United States Steel Corporation, called the "Billion-dollar Steel Trust." J. P. Morgan paid him $3,000,000 for his interests alone in the Carnegie Steel Company, and he signalized his retirement by gifts aggregating $5,000,000 to his old employees.

Carnegie was a short, stocky, hickory-knot of a man, his head as round and hard as a golf ball. But it was full of brains. He was the fastest and shrewdest money maker the world has ever known. Carnegie died in 1919.

QUEEN MOTHER BROUGHT MELBA BACK TO LONDON

Prima Donna Had Vowed She Would Never Return After Poor Opening.

HAD TRIUMPH.

Alexandra Was Only Member of Royal House Devoted to Music.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 11. (Canadian Press).—Dame Nellie Melba, the famous singer, in her book of reminiscences, just published, makes the interesting revelation that it was through the late Queen Alexandra's interest in her that she was induced to make another series of appearances in London after an unfortunate debut here. It happened in 1888, when Dame Melba had scored a phenomenal success, at the outset of her career, in Brussels and Paris. Dame Melba came on to London for some performances at Covent Garden. There was a half-filled house, an indifferent orchestra, and bad management all-round. Dame Melba returned to the Continent, vowing she would never see London again. However, she had a letter from Lady de Grey, one of the leaders in matters musical and artistic of that day, begging her to return.

"One of those who are most anxious for your return is the Princess of Wales," wrote Lady de Grey. "She was present at your performance of Rigoletto, and deeply impressed with your singing."

Dame Melba did return the next year, and achieved the first of her unending English triumphs. In this connection it may be mentioned that Queen Alexandra was about the only member of the English Royal House in her time, who had any deep knowledge of and devotion to music. The only other real musician of her own generation was the Duke of Edinburgh, brother of King Edward, who died many years ago. The Duke and Sir Arthur Sullivan were life-long friends. King Edward himself could hardly conceal his feelings of boredom when he attended grand opera.

King George has no great liking for ambitious music, but Queen Mary, although herself not professing to any merit as an executant maintains an unabated interest in pianoforte performances, and her knowledge of music in general is considerably above that of many of her friends.

D.S.C.R. OFFICE BUSY IN ENGLAND

SOME DISABLED.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press despatch).—Care of Canadian pensioners and attention to the needs of permanently injured Canadian veterans in the United Kingdom still requires a staff at the High Commissioner's Office in London. A statement from that office recently said:

"The general public hears very little of the work in the High Commissioner's Office carried on under the direction of Major C. G. Arthur, D.S.O., the Overseas Representative of the Canadian Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment, yet the work today occupies a staff of 11 persons, besides Major Arthur and his assistant, G. R. Middleton, who find as much to do now as they did five years ago. Last month 7,803 pension cheques were sent out. There are today 275 men on the strength for treatment for war disabilities and there men are served with all sorts of orthopaedic appliances. The department looks after Canadian ex-soldiers all over Europe, but at the present time only two or three are outside the British Isles. The work entails much more than the mere signing of pension cheques. There are often children to be looked after, widows' rights to be upheld, and mentally deficient people to care for. Of the 7,303 pensioners, about 40 per cent are widows or dependent parents. As there is no Canadian hospital over here an arrangement has been made by the Department for the treatment of disabled soldiers in the establishment of the British Industry of Pensions. There are 500 men who have lost an arm or leg and 500 who suffer from minor disabilities necessitating the provision of splints, artificial noses, kneecaps, etc., and a good deal of work is entailed in providing them with the necessary appliances which may have to be renewed. The work of Major Arthur and his colleagues is carried out with sympathy and understanding, and every effort is made to interpret the spirit in which the pensions have been granted by the Canadian Government."

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D., Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Anemia in girls is a common and well recognized trouble. It is easily controlled and the patient is speedily returned to perfect health.

Quite another thing is pernicious anemia. For some reason this disease makes its way unrecognized. For a long time it may be attacking its victim without consciousness on her part that serious trouble has overtaken her.

It is the common experience that profound pallor of the skin is associated with some disease which causes the flesh to melt away, the collar to get loose, and the waist to lose its rotundity. It is not so in this disease.

A characteristic of pernicious anemia is that the body remains well nourished. While the pallor is pronounced, there is little loss in weight. Indeed, the striking thing about it is the well nourished body, even though the skin is waxy, or lemon colored, the whites of the eyes so very white they resemble pearls, the appetite gone and the inclination to exercise entirely suspended.

On the contrary, some persons have this disease without apparent loss of energy. They go about their affairs, complaining of nothing, perhaps, except shortness of breath. But ordinarily, headache, mental slowness at times, palpitation of the heart, dizziness, swelling of the feet, and physical weakness are numbered among the symptoms.

Diarrhea, stomach-ache, sore throat and pussy-gums are noted in most cases. Decayed teeth and pyorrhea are almost invariably present. Another rather common sign of the disease is sherry colored urine. Numbness, tingling, lightning like pains and loss of sensation in spots, are included among the nervous symptoms.

The normal quantity of blood is materially decreased. Also the red-blood cells are remarkably diminished. The blood changes account for the paleness of the skin and most of the other symptoms.

One of the strange things about pernicious anemia is that the first attack is followed by a considerable period of apparently perfect health. There are many reattacks and disappearances of the symptoms. These experiences may cover years and years. Many patients have recovered completely.

During the attack perfect quiet is essential. Rest in bed, preferably in the open air, is the right treatment.

The appetite must be coaxed. Good food is more important than medicine. Entertainment and pleasant associations will help a lot.

The victim of this disease must be impressed with the importance of removing all local conditions associated with pus formation. Every suspicious tooth should be extracted. If the tonsils are diseased they must be given attention. Almost the first thing to do in the treatment is to purify the mouth.

Likewise, any bowel trouble should be corrected. Any local infection may be regarded as the possible source of the original trouble.

The medical treatment will be carried on by the family doctor, but the patient can do much for himself by heeding the ordinary rules of hygiene, good feeding and common sense.

MATTER OF LIGHTS ON VEHICLES IS LEFT BY COUNTIES COUNCIL TO PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT

WANTS GENERAL LAW.

Feels That Any Law Compelling Lights at Night Should Be Province Wide.

(By a Staff Reporter).

COBOURG, Dec. 11. — "We recommend that the matter of lights on vehicles be left to the Provincial Government and that it is the opinion of this Council that glare lights on autos is more dangerous to the public safety."

This was the report that the Counties Council received from the legislative committee when it convened Thursday afternoon, a report which was presented by Reeve Davidson of Campbellford, chairman of the committee, and adopted without discussion.

At the meeting of the committee Thursday forenoon this matter was threshed out thoroughly. Warden McCamus and others took the position that while horse-drawn vehicles should carry lights after dark, a law to that effect should be general. The difficulty of carrying lights on heavy wagons, loads of hay included, was recognized, but it was agreed that there is little or no traffic of such vehicles after nightfall.

The majority of the members of the committee are farmers, but nearly all of them own autos. The general opinion was that if the law providing for dimming headlights when meeting another car or a horse-drawn vehicle were enforced, there would be fewer accidents.

The report of the committee was moved by Deputy-Reeve Wight of Darlington and Deputy-Reeve Austin of Murray, and was signed by every member.

Road Through Alderville.

On motion of Reeve Mouncey of Alnwick and Reeve Hess of Hastings, the matter of securing a grant for the county road through the Indian reservation at Alderville was referred to County Road Superintendent Greer, who will take it up with the Department of Highways. Any assistance that may be given, it is understood, will come from the Department of Indian Affairs at Ottawa.

Culverts Versus Bridges.

The difference between a culvert and a bridge was explained by Col. F. D. Boggs, solicitor for the counties. The statute makes a distinction between the two without defining either. Col. Boggs said a culvert was a conduit to allow the passage of water under a road, while a bridge carried the road over the water. A bridge is a structure over a stream or river, a pond or a lake.

Col. Boggs explained that while the counties were liable for a share of the cost of building bridges on county boundaries, the adjoining municipalities were required by the statute to pay for all culverts put in.

This decision affects culverts put in on the boundary roads between Durham and Ontario Counties, and between Victoria and Durham.

A Question of Feet.

It was explained further that any structure over water is a bridge if it is 10 feet or more in length, and that a bridge cannot be built unless the plan is approved by the Department of Highways.

Over two hours were spent in discussing this question, and, as one of the Reeves stated, the Council appeared to be going around in a circle and getting nowhere. At last Reeve Holdaway of Port Hope brought the oratory to an end when he moved that the Council should pay all outstanding bills for culverts, but that it would not be responsible for the cost of further construction of these on county boundaries unless they were first approved by the chairamn of roads and bridges and the Warden.

Cost of Bridges.

As there are more bridges to build in Northumberland than in Durham County, the latter municipality pays 25 per cent. and the former 75 per cent. of constructing county bridges. This account was not adjusted for the past five years, and this year Northumberland finds itself over $17,000 in arrears. To raise this calls for an increase in the tax rate of the townships and urban centres of ever one mill. Local councils are liable to be blamed for a matter over which they had no control.

Reeve Bedal of Brighton Township brought this matter up at Thursday's session, and was told that if the municipalities of Northumberland desired an adjustment every year, so that the extra expense would hardly be noticed, there was nothing to prevent the adoption of such a policy.

More Legal Advice.

Reeve Elliott of Murray reported that a resident on the boundary road between Murray and Sidney Townships, the latter in Hastings County, had built three fences across the road, the allowance for which had never been opened up. Two other residents were denied access to their wood lots as a result. Reeve Elliott asked for the opinion of Counties Solicitor Baggs as to what could be done in the matter.

Col. Baggs stated that country boundary roads were under the jurisdiction of the adjoining municipalities and that in the case in question nothing could be done except by the unanimous action of the councils of Murray and Sidney.

Addressed the Council.

Brief addresses were made by George A. Smith of Port Hope, who was Warden in 1923, and P. S. Inspector Snyder of Port Hope, who spoke on the subject of township boards, a bill for the providing of which is to come up at the next session of the Legislature. Mr. Snyder asked the councillors to use their influence in support of the measure which he regarded as one that would prove of immense advantage to the rural schools.

Deputy-Reeve Nelson of Percy moved that the Council request the Legislature to defer action until 1927, but failed to get a seconder.

The Council adjourned until 10.30 a.m. Friday.

Finance Committee.

The finance committe met Thursday evening and decided to recommend:

That the request of the Department of Highways for a uniform system of book-keeping be adopted by the various counties.

That a chartered accountant be engaged to audit the accounts of the Counties at a salary of $300 a year.

The Hastings Bridge.

Accounts to a total of $3,500 for the repairing of the county bridge at Hastings have been paid. Some of the surfacing that was put down according to the instruction of a representative of the company that provided the material, has not proved satisfactory and further outlay will be necessary. The company did not furnish a guarantee and after Reeve Hess of Hastings, who with Deputy Reeve Nelson of Percy acted as commissioners to oversee the work, had explained the steps taken, the company was held responsible for the defects in the construction.

On motion of Reeve Bedal of Brighton Township and Deputy Reeve Thickson of Bowmanville, Clerk McNachlan will write the company, that as the material had been laid according to their instructions and was not satisfactory, some amends should be made.

OMEMEE A.Y.P.A. PLAN CONCERT

Committees Appointed For New Year's Entertainment.

MISSION MEETING.

OMEMEE, Dec. 11.—On Monday evening, Dec. 7, the A.Y.P.A. held a business meeting in the basement. So much had to be arranged for the coming New Year's entertainment that the evening was spent in nominating committees to attend to the many tasks. Following this business, Miss Edna Morton gave an interesting report on the annual banquet of the District Council A.Y.P.A., which was held in Peterboro on Friday, Dec. 4. Some twenty members from Christ Church attended, despite the adverse conditions of the weather and the roads. Next Monday evening an illustrated address on "Our Indian Boarding Schools" is the missionary topic.

W.M.S. Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Trinity United Church was held on Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. T. C. Ivory. In the absence of the president, the first vice-president, Mrs. Jas. Bushnell, conducted the meeting, which was opened by singing the doxology and repetition of the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The treasurer, Mrs. T. C. Ivory, read the names of all paid members for this year thus far, and also reported the total receipts from the recent bazaar to be $145.00.

A discussion on sending a bale to Oshawa Mission took place, and it was unanimously decided to pack a bale as in former years, which was announced from the pulpit on Sunday, the articles to be left in the sun-room of the parsonage this week. Mrs. E. Bradburn and Mrs. T. C. Ivory kindly consented to pack and value the bale and have it shipped next week.

Mrs. J. Widdis was appointed to take charge of the missionary topic in the Sunday School, the third Sunday in December.

The meetings will be held in the homes during the winter months. The January meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Harry Lamb.

Following the business session, a Christmas responsive reading was the first item on the programme, after which Mrs. (Rev.) D. R. Clare of Welcome led in prayer.

An excellent report of the W.M.S. district convention held recently at Fenelon Falls was then given by the delegate, Miss L. Parsons, and at the close a hearty vote of thanks was extended to her. Twenty-two members and three visitors were present, and the meeting closed with a hymn and prayer.

Teacher Appointed.

The Trustee Board has been successful in securing Miss Mary Faulkner of Omemee as teacher for the junior room of the Public School, duties to commence after the New Year.

Mr. Bert Henderson, of Toronto, a former Omemee boy, has been engaged by Mr. T. E. MacPherson as assistant to Mr. Fred. Johnson in the local bake-shop.

New Machinery.

Several car-loads of machinery for the Omemee Tannery are being unloaded at the freight shed, and it is rumored that the large building is soon to be extended and many more employees added to the list. Each week sees more new families arriving, with accommodations becoming scarcer.

Mr. Leslie Diamond of Campbellford paid a short visit with his cousin, Mrs. H. Nugent, on Saturday.

Miss Annie Ingram, who has spent the past year with her sister, Mrs. Haddea, of Birtle, Man., returned home last week.

Miss D. Young, assistant public school teacher, spent the week-end with Peterboro friends.

Miss M. Nicholson of Rice Lake is the guest of her aunt, Miss M. Williams.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. R. James of Omemee, on Thursday, Dec. 3, a son.

Messrs. S. J. Mackey, S. Best, J. Deyell and R. J. Patterson attended a meeting of Presbytery in Port Hope on Tuesday.

Mrs. V. Pogue visited her sister, Mrs. C. Foster, of Warsaw, this week.

Mr. Ernest Corneil, of Queen's University, Kingston, attended the Masonic banquet in Omemee on Thursday evening.

Fish and Game Inspector Stocker of Lindsay was in town last week trying to round up some Indians on the pond who are reported to be cutting open the rat dens.

Mrs. James of Peterboro is visiting her son, Mr. Ralph James, in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Harmon of Midland were the guests of Mrs. J. Rutherford in town last week.

Mr. W. Brady of Campbellford was a visitor in town on Saturday.

Miss Ata Moncrief, nurse in training in the Nicholls Hospital, Peterboro, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Monchiet, on Saturday.

The 45th anniversary of the Omemee United Church will be held on Sunday next, Dec. 13. Rev. Mr. Holling of Lindsay will be the speaker at both the morning and evening services.

STEAMER IN DRYDOCK.

Broke Propeller Shaft When It Went Ashore Near Eastport.

EAST PORT, Maine, December 11 —Canadian Press. — The Steamer "Grand Manan," was beached with 30 passengers aboard while in Ludec Narrows on a trip from here to Grand Manan, N.B. She is in dry dock to-day for replacement of a broken propellor shaft.

The accident occurred yesterday, and the vessel was swept ashore on the mud flats in the Lower Passamaquoddy Bay. A lighter attracted by distress signals, came alongside and brought the passengers and baggage to East Port. The "Grand Manan" later was floated.

If the casualties keep increasing, we will have to replace the automobile repair stations at every corner with hospitals.

The groom at the wedding, like an automobile engine, is unseen but very necessary to make the thing go.

ALF. MERRILL DAIRY DIRECTOR FOR EAST NORTHUMBERLAND

DAIRY ADDRESS.

WARKWORTH, December 11. — (Special.) — The dairymen of East Northumberland met in annual conclave at the town hall here, on Wednesday.

The chief item of attraction at these meetings is always the nomination of a director for the district. Mr. Alexander Hume of Menie, who has filled the office several times was last year elected vice-president of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association and was in line for the presidency if returned this year. Mr. Hume had a strong contingent with him from Menie, Burnbrae and Campbellford, but they were hardly strong enough for Alfred Merrill's squad from Meyersburg and Wilson settlement. Three names were placed on the nomination list, those of Messrs. A. Hume, A. Merrill and R. Honey. Mr. Honey had failed to bring his usual chowd of supporters, and so came out in last place. Mr. Merrill won by a plurality of two votes over Mr. Hume. Mr. Hume is a young man who has been prominent in dairy work for a number of years.

Good Dairy Year.

Mr. Hume acted as chairman of the meeting and in his remarks spoke of the exceptionally good year for the dairymen of the province, and the cheese factory patrons in particular.

Good prices had been combined with an abundance of feed. Canadian cheese had secured a firm hold on the British market, due in a measure to grading, which acted also as a great incentive to makers, increasing competition.

During the last year local dairymen had succeeded in getting a grading station at Campbellford which was a great convenience. Two of the five prizes offered by the Farmers' Advocate for the best kept factory and premises in Ontario, came to Menie and Woodlands. The speaker thought that competitions of this sort were a great incentive to improvement.

Instructor's Report.

Mr. Smith of Brighton, agricultural representative, was unable to be present and sent his regrets.

Mr. Hume then called on Mr. Murray, the district instructor, for the first address of the afternoon. He reported fair expansion for the year past with a total of 1022 patrons and 10,119 cows. The make was 10 per cent. ahead of last year with fat content about the same. Makers were receiving good support from most of the patrons in their efforts to improve the quality of their product and although conditions could be bettered in some factories on the whole the situation was good. Mr. Murray called attention to the loss from turnips fed in October and November amounting to $2.85 per standard for the factories concerned.

James Irwin.

Mr. James Irwin, cheese grader, was the next speaker and gave some good pointers and facts gleaned from his experience. Campbellford district cheese compared very favorably with any graded this year. Some of the graders' troubles were from immature cheese during the early spring and late fall. He reported an increase of 7 per cent. of first grade cheese over 1924 in 150,000 boxes which he had handled. Mr. Irwin reported that better facilities would be provided at Campbellford if grading were continued there next year. He stated that in his opinion the cheesemaker was 100 per cent of the success of any factory and this drew forth some lively discussion.

Practically every speaker had something to say about turnip feeding in this district, and Mr. Irwin said that turnips were a tragedy to Northumberland.

Mr. Sprague, a cheese buyer from Belleville, addressed the meeting in a general way along dairying and cheese making lines. He has been directly connected with the dairy industry since 1873. The seamen's strike had affected delivery of New Zealand cheese and given the Canadian product a better price on the British market this year, but prices would probably be somewhat lower to start next season.

Turnip Flavor

At this point considerable discussion took place regarding turnip feeding and returning whey in milk cans. Mr. Murray stated the latter was a very dangerous practice, while Mr. Irwin summed up the turnip situation as follows: "All the turnip flavor in Central Ontario came from Campbellford district and only forty of these cheese from the east side of the river."

G. H. Barr's Address

Mr. Geo. H. Barr, director of Dairying for Ontario, was the principal speaker of the day. In an address full of clear-cut statements he presented his case in a manner of once interesting, entertaining and instructive. There are 35 cheese instructors in the province and it is difficult to get men for this position who can get the makers to do what they want them to. He complimented the Northumberland district on having such a competent instructor as Mr. Murray. After seven months travelling over the province Mr. Barr finds that some factories are as fine as the best in any country and he considers it his job to make them all as nearly like that as possible. He was a judge in the Advocate competition and found only one factory to surpass that of Mr. F. M. Little at Menie, that one being near Prescott in the French section. Mr. Barr finds the best equipment for handling whey in Northern Ontario and the French districts of Eastern Ontario. Campbellford district has three reputations now, two good, one not so good; namely, success in factory competition, less whey drawn in milk cans and more cheese spoiled by turnips than any other district.

How are we to eliminate second grade cheese? asked Mr. Barr. No one can protect the producer so well as the cheese-maker but he must be paid for his work. 100% makers are not got at a cheap rate. It has been estimated that 90% of the patrons send first grade milk to factories. What about the other 10% that cause the 90% to lose money? Small factory makers are taking in under grade milk because they are afraid of losing patrons who become angry and leave if milk is rejected. Mr. Barr's suggested remedy is that every maker be granted 1st, 2nd or 3rd grade certificates annually and that any maker who accepts milk from a patron within thirty days of the time when such patron's milk was rejected from said factory shall forfeit his certificate. Mr. Barr closed his address with this question for his listeners to consider: would there be any harm in making the 10% who produce under-grade milk better citizens?

Mr. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario took charge at this stage and then gave the closing address of the session. He gave a general summary of conditions and asked the dairymen to do everything in their power to stop the loss from second-grade cheese. Co-operation between maker and producer is the keynote of success in the cheese-making industry.

ANCIENT CURSE IS RECALLED

CASTLE CURSED.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—In connection with the death of Lord Leith of Fyvie on November 14, a long "curse" which is said to have been laid on Fyvie Castle long years ago is recalled. Lord Leith was found dead in bed at Hartwell House, near Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire.

Lord Leith, who was 78, was Alexander Forbes-Leith, the son of Rear-Admiral John Leith, and joined the navy himself at the age of 13.

Twelve years later when he was a lieutenant on the Zealous lying in San Francisco Harbor, he met at a dance Miss Mary January, daughter of a wealthy American steel magnate. He married her, left the navy, and joined his father-in-law. Later he became a director of big steel companies in the Western States, entered into partnership with Andrew Carnegie, and eventually became chairman of the Federal Steel Company.

Then having added an immense fortune to that of his wife, he returned to this country and realized the dream of his life by buying Fyvie Castle, the seat of his ancestors. In 1905, Mr. Alexander Forbes-Leith became Lord Leith of Fyvie.

Attached to the castle is the legend of a curse, laid on it by the Scots' poet and prophet, Thomas the Rhymer. He visited the castle disguised as a beggar and was turned from the doors. In his anger he declared that no laird of Fyvie should ever be succeeded by a son, and the prophecy has been fulfilled to this day.

Lord Leith leaves no heir. His only son died during the South African war, and his grandson was killed in action in 1914. The latter was the son of Colonel C. R. Burn, ex-M.P. for Torquay, who married Lord Leith's daughter.

Unmarried Turk Brings Reforms To Girls' School

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 11—Emine Bey, a young unmarried Turk, has become director of the Normal School for Girls here—a position which a few years ago only a bearded patriarch could have held.

Many radical reforms have been instituted by the new director, Traditional lattices have been removed from windows and now the rooms are flooded with sunlight and air. The old white head covering worn by students has been banned and they now attend classes bare-headed.

Tennis, basket and volley ball courts and others athletic grounds have been provided by for the 320 girls and no longer is attendance at religious services compulsory.

ANCIENT ABBEY BEING RESTORED

St. Hilda's, in Yorkshire, Was Neglected For 500 Years.

SHELLED DURING WAR.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press)—High on the headland above the little port of Whitby in Yorkshire stands the ruin of St. Hilda's Abbey. For five hundred years, after the heavy hand of Henry the Eighth had fallen upon the abeys and monasteries, the fabric of St. Hilda's foundation was left a prey to the ravages of time, and—for many generations at least—of any builder in the neighboring countryside who wanted a waggon-load of dressed stone for the fetching. Then, one morning in the early winter of 1914, the emissaries of another royal despoiler appeared in the shape of German warships, which shelled what there was still standing of the fine West Front of the Abbey.

It may seem strange when the world is in need of so much in the way of reparations, that attention should be given to what is merely a relic of mediaevilism. We are more careful of our ancient landmarks now than formerly, however. Five years ago the ruins of Whitby were handed over by the then owner, Sir Charles Strickland, to the Ancient Monuments Department of the Office of Works, which has since steadily persevered in restoration work which is now complete. It aimed simply at making the West Front what it was before the bombbardment. Much has been done also to improve the appearance of the remainder of the Abbey ruins. Before the war the nave was a mere jumble of fallen masonry overgrown with grass. One nave is now a smooth and well kept lawn from which stands up the bases of the great pillars which were till recently interred. In clearing away this debris and in the extensive excavations which have taken place outside the Abbey many interesting things have been found. As these excavations are completed the earth is filled in again and smoothly turfed so that when the work is finished what is left of the Abbey will be green and level within and without.

Many Issues At New York Reached New High Levels

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press.)—Responding to a series of constructive business developments, stock prices advanced briskly to-day with over a score of issues mounting to new high levels for the year. Secretary Mellon's optimistic report of business conditions, maintenance of the 3 1-2 per cent. re-discount rate by the New York Federal Reserve Bank, reports of expanding steel operations and rumors of special dividends and capital split-ups all helped to create bullish enthusiasm. Pools were again active in a wide assortment of issues. The rapid advance in some of the rail issues suggested a limited floating supply of these stocks.

Firm Opening Followed By Slight Price Drop

TORONTO, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Prices turned slightly easier on the Toronto Stock Exchange after a generally firm opening. Brazilian, the leader in activity, closed 3-8 lower at 79 3-4, after reaching 80 1-2 during the session. Smelters sold up to 152 3-4, then receded to 151 for a net advance of 5-8. Barcelona was strong, advancing to 28 3-4 for a point and a quarter gain. City Dairy was marked down a point and a half at 76 1-2, and British Columbia Fishing dropped 3-4 at 63. Vipond in the quieter mines section eased 3 1-2 at 155. The banks continued firm and Commerce advanced a quarter point.

Wheat Prices Were Lower On News From Liverpool

CHICAGO, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices averaged lower today in early dealings. Argentine advances told of clearing weather and Liverpool reported offers increasing both from Argentine and Australia. In downturns in value, however, the market here received excellent support, especially from buying on the part of houses with Eastern connection. Opening 1 3-4c lower to 1 1-8c higher, new style, December 173 1-2 to 173 3-4, and May 166 to 167, was followed by usually numerous changes with in a range of 2 3-4 cents. Commission house buying of corn had sufficient volume to give firmness to the corn market. After opening at 1-4 to 5-8c decline, May 84 5-8 to 84 3-4, corn scored fractional gains.

Oats were easy, sympathizing with wheat rather than corn. Initial prices of oats were a shade to 1-2c lower, May 45 1-2 to 45 5-8, and the market held near to the initial range.

Easier Trend In Mines With Trade Volume Light

TORONTO, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—The trend was easier on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, and trading was light compared to the volume of recent sessions. Tough Oakes, one of the leaders, and Vickers were exceptions, however, each advancing a point and a half, at 52 and 14 respectively. The active Teck Hughes eased two points and Argonaut, Con. West Dome, Crown Reserve and McKinley-Darragh were all slightly lower.

FIELD SECRETARY ADDRESSED W.M.S.

An enthusiastic gathering of women interested in the work of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada was held in Knox Church yesterday afternoon. It was a sectional meeting, called especially to hear the message of Miss Evelyn Mitchell of Toronto, one of the field secretaries of the United Church. Miss Mitchell has been travelling continuously throughout Canada, gathering first-hand knowledge of conditions as they really exist in the land and bringing encouragement and inspiration to Auxiliaries and Home Missionaries.

Mrs. J. John was in the chair, and after a short devotional period, in which she was assisted by Mrs. R. M. Waddell, Mrs. A. Mackenzie, Mrs. W. Watt and Miss Dickson, the speaker of the afternoon was introduced.

Miss Mitchell spoke of the missionary enterprise as the greatest enterprise in the world, for two reasons, the first, because its aim is the same high aim as that of Christ, the redemption of the world, and the second, because it has done more for the transformation and uplift of nations than any other enterprise.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century, someone said that it was the maddest scheme of a mad enthusiast to want to send missionaries to India, but at the end of the nineteenth century, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal said: "Let us put the results of all other enterprises together and they will have done very little for the uplift of India as compared with what the foreign missionary enterprise has done." And what is said of India can be said of all other nations.

Miss Mitchell related interesting incidents showing the power of the Gospel as demonstrated in India, in Tokyo, through Miss Caroline McDonald's prison work, and in Africa, where a wider field has now been opened. Especially interesting were the references to the life of General Feng, the great Christian General of China. When two hundred of his soldiers were baptized, they said: "It is not the philosophy of your religion that has won us, but the evidence of the spirit of Christ in the life of our General that has made us want to follow him."

The great need of Canada, and the great responsibility of the Church, said Miss Mitchell, was the assimilation of its non-Anglo-Saxon peoples, coming to us for Christian education. If non-Christianized, they may become leaders in sedition, but if Christianized, they often become leaders in Canadian life and go out from among their own ranks to act as missionaries to others.

Incidents were also given of the good work done in the school homes and in the hospitals, where the healing of the patient's body led often to the healing of his soul also. Among the children, training in ideals of citizenship went on in the school homes, where not only the teaching of the English language but the training in the Christian religion led to many of the pupils passing very high in their classes, making their mark in Arts and Theology as well as in the more ordinary courses. This evidences an intellect on a par with the native-born Canadian, and when it is added to the graces possessed by the residents of the Dominion, they may become outstanding citizens.

In great stretches of country in Canada, there are thousands of people who have never heard of the Gospel, and Miss Mitchell spoke of the great need of spreading such instruction, quoting a woman resident in the West, who said: "If you people cannot give enough for us to have a missionary, can you not better do without than we can?"

The spirit pervading the meeting yesterday was one of deep interest and enthusiasm, resulting in a quickened consciousness of the great opportunities presented to the women of the United Church for spreading the Gospel of Christ and carrying on the extension of His Kingdom.

BENEFIT CONCERT.

Interesting Programme Is Being Arranged For Sunday Night.

An interesting programme of vocal and instrumental music of a mixed order is being prepared by a committee of ladies for the benefit concert to be given at the Capitol theatre on Sunday evening at half past eight o'clock, in aid of two old people of Belmont township. DR. SCHLATER WILL ADDRESS MEETING

Will Give Illustrated Talk on His Trip To Scotland.

At the last regular meeting of the directorate of the Peterborough Horticultural Society, held last Friday, Dec. 4th, the directors confirmed President Dr. J. E. Middleton's action in securing Dr. Schlater, of Toronto, to lecture in the George street United Church, Jan. 19th. The subject will be "Scotland" (Illustrated), a personal tour of this year.

Dr. Schlater is already well and favorably known in this city, so the members of the Horticultural Society have no hesitation in again recommending him to the public.

The general meeting of the Peterboro Chamber of Commerce will be held in the Council room, Chamber of Commerce Offices, to-night at 8 o'clock.

A shooting gallery, the first in the city since early in the war, will be opened to-morrow on Hunter street, by two local men.

LARRY O'CONNOR AT KIWANIS CLUB

Lindsay Man Tells of Visit To Salt Lake City, Utah.

L. V. O'Connor, of Lindsay, was the speaker at today's Kiwanis luncheon, giving an interesting and instructive address on impressions gleaned on a visit to Salt Lake City, Utah. Mr. O'Connor, who is known here for his prowess as a curler, showed that he has the ability to perceive quickly and retain perfectly pictures of places and matters of importance.

Tracing the origin of Mormonism as it is told by Mormons, Mr. O'Connor outlined the present status of the followers of Joseph Smith and Brigham Young. In his summing up he declared their city to be well-governed, with police unnecessary; the people highly moral; sanitary arrangements wonderfully good; and religious fervor unexcelled. The plurality of wives, the principal objection taken to Mormonism, was discountenanced by a Church edict in 1890.

Kiwanian Wilfred F. Huycke proposed the vote of thanks.

It was announced that next Friday's meeting will be for business only, including the election of officers. On Monday, December 21, the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs will hold a joint meeting, and the following Friday, being Christmas Day, there will be no Kiwanis luncheon.

Today's booster was Walter Lacey and the prize winners were Jack Heron, F. Taylor and George Henderson, first second and third respectively. President Charles Cook was in the chair.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11. — Canadian Press. — The difference between Modernists and Fundamentalists, as set forth by Rev. Jas. Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House, is: "Modernists say: 'There ain't no hell.' Fundamentalists say: 'The hell there ain't.'"

POULTRY SHOW.

Arrangements in Progress For Good Show Next Month.

The Peterborough Poultry Association is busy making arrangements for their annual show, which takes place this year in the Armories, on January 5th, 6th and 7th. The officials anticipate a bigger show than even this season, as numerous enquiries have been received from out-of-town fanciers who have not previously exhibited at Peterboro. A feature this year will be a guessing contest in connection with admission; the first prize to be a pen of birds; the second, a ham.

UNITED CHURCH CAMPAIGN FUND OVER OBJECTIVE

Some Peterborough Churches Above Their Allotment —All Reach It.

SUPPER AT KNOX.

United Churchmen of Peterborough New Organization Formed For Advancement.

The dining hall at Knox United Church was well filled last evening when the elders, stewards and managers of Peterborough United Churches sat down to a supper prepared by Knox Ladies' Aid. After a splendid report came a brief programme of music provided by Messrs. M. Park, Douglas, Carlyle, Ed. Humpage and Jack Smith, with Chas. Peaker at the piano.

Rev. Mr. Gordon gave a brief address and the chairman of the evening, Dr. M. A. Morrison, called for reports from the various churches on the Maintenance and Extension Fund campaign. Great interest followed the roll call of the churches for this purpose and the very splendid results announced indicate a high peak of sacrificial giving and triumph for the United Church in Peterborough as all the six churches reach their objectives and some go far beyond. Announcement of the complete results will be made later and will assuredly prove of great credit to the churches. After these reports were given, Rev. M. C. Mackinnon gave the report of the committee on permanent organization consisting of Revs. Langford, Todd and Mackinnon. Following the recommendation of this report a permanent organization was formed to include the elders, stewards and managers of the six united churches for the purpose of enriching the new fellowship, making the union a very practical partnership in the work of the kingdom, and cooperating with one another and with other groups in promoting the religious life of the city. The organization is to be know as "The United Churchmen of Peterborough." The officers elected are: Chairman, Mr. George Gillespie; vice chairman, Dr. M. A. Morrison; and secretary-treasurer, Mr. George C. Carruthers. These with H. J. McCannon, Thomas Brown, W. Ward and the ministers of the six United Churches in Peterborough form the executive. The matter of appointment of committees and times of meetings was left to the executive. Thus was launched an organization which must prove important in church life in the city.

A resolution was passed heartily endorsing the holding of special services during the week of prayer and looking forward to cooperation with other churches in the same.

The doxology and the National Anthem were sung and Rev. A. J. Langford closed the meeting with the benediction.

BLIND MAN ILL.

Mr. Brownlee Has Been Confined To Home With Cold in Eyes.

Mr. J. R. Brownlee, of 612 Chamberlain Street, the well-known blind man of Peterboro, who does such good work in reed and cane and basketry, has been confined to his home for some time with trouble in his eyes, caused by taking cold when attending one of the Fall Fairs. Mr. Brownlee will have to undergo an operation in about two months, and in the meantime is under the care of a physician.

Although Mr. Brownlee is not able to be up and around, he has been making a number of pretty things in reed for Christmas sale and is anxious that old and new customers should come and see him at his home. He has a quantity of serving trays in different sizes and shapes, hanging and rose baskets, vases, ferneries and jardinieres. Anyone who has ever seen examples of Mr. Brownlee's careful work will remember the daintiness and excellent finish of his pieces in reed.

This was the Seagram's stable most successful turf year, horses from that popular establishment winning 81 races and $133,315. INSIDE GOLF.

Makes 'Em 61 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

By CHESTER HORTON

One fine way to get the feel of correct timing, and a fine stunt to rehearse any time before a round of golf, is to take a club, say a wood, and, standing erect, as you would with a baseball bat, begin working the club back and forth. The baseball swing you will do automatically. Take the club back that way, then without thought of adding power to it, let it fly forward. Observe how, with the club swung naturally this way, the clubhead gets its maximum speed just where the ball would be hit. Then, each time you repeat this swing, let the club gradually be lowered toward the ground—an inch or two lower each time. By the time the clubhead is grazing the ground you will find you are making perfect golf swings, with the timing just right. Be particularly careful that you do not begin to force and press the club when your swings get the clubhead near the ground.

Newell Banks, national match champion at checkers, gave a remarkable exhibition of his skill in Denver the other night, when he played against six chess experts and nineteen checker players simultaneously and at the same time played four other checker players whose boards were not in sight, the moves being called off to the champion.

TENNIS QUEENS MAY MEET SOON

Suzanne Lenglen Enters Cannes Tournament—Helen Wills Going Over.

JANUARY GAMES.

NICE, France, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).— Suzanne Lenglen against Helen Wills is the tennis treat which will be offered to fans on the French Riviera next January if the United States champion carries out her intentions to come to Europe this Winter.

Mlle. Lenglen sent in her entry for the Hotel Metropole tournament at Cannes Thursday.

"I am greatly pleased that Miss Wills has decided to come to the Riviera this Winter," the French queen of the courts said. "It is certain to give a great boost to French winter tennis. Miss Wills is the finest type of sportswoman and a great tennis player.

"My winter campaign was all mapped out before I knew she intended coming to France, and her coming will not interfere with the schedule I have outlined for myself, which consists of playing singles in three tournaments and in doubles and mixed doubles in all the winter tournaments as I have been doing for the last three or four years."

BERLENBACH AND DELANEY TO-NIGHT

15 Round Title Match in New York Ring.

Berlenbach, a former amateur wrestler and boxer and a member of the 1920 Americn Olympic team, entered the professional game with an impressive amateur record, from the star of his professional career was a success. Mediocre middleweights were tossed into the lists against him and one by one all were lowered by the tremendous left-hand of "Punch-'em-Paul."

Then the opposition began to become more patient but still the knockout record rose. Twenty-three consecutive knockouts were registered before Berlenbach was stopped.

Delaney entered the ring at the old Madison Square Garden against Berlenbach, March 14, 1924 and scored one of the most stunning upsets of the indoor boxing season when he knocked out Berlenbach in the fourth round of a 15-round match.

Berlenbach rallied, however, against the best in his division and reached the height of his form when he outpointed Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, in a listless exhibition at the Yankee Stadium, June 30, 1925. Since winning the crown Berlenbach has protected it against Young Marullo,

THIRD SHUTOUT FOR SENATORS

Beat New York 3-0, Outclassing Visitors All the Way.

FORBES WAS STAR.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Scoring their third consecutive shut-out N.H.L. victory, Ottawa Senators sent New York down to a 3 to 0 defeat in a scheduled league fixture here last evening. The Senators won by three goals, but it is only fair to say that only Vernon Forbes stood between them and a much larger margin. Completely out-playing the New Yorkers at very stage of the last two periods, the Senators made the Gotham team look very ordinary.

SPORT NOTES

Edmonton Bulletin: Too many likely looking local amateurs from this city have flown to "greater fields." Johnny McKinnon is said to have been offered a contract that would call for $10,000. There is a good chance that Manager Dandurand, who is responsible for the story, made a mistake in one or so of the ciphers. At any rate the fact remains that he is wanted by professional teams. He turned the offer down. Charlie Talbot, one of the best-looking amateurs that the south side has produced—and that is saying something—is away at Preston. Kenny MacKenzie tried hard to sign Charlie to a contract, but he was not ready to leave the simon-pures.

Kingston, Dec. 10.—At a meeting of Queen's Football Club Norman ("Liz") Walker was elected captain for next season.

LANDIS BREAKS DATE DEADLOCK

Majors Will Close Next Season on September 26.

SINGLE BALLOT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Disagreement of the American and National Leagues over the abbreviation of the playing season was settled quickly and decisively Thursday by the single ballot of High Commissioner K. M. Landis for the closing of both races on September 26.

With that bold and decisive stroke so characteristic of his activities, organized baseball's dominant figure thus broke a tie in which magnates of the National League voted solidly against the new date and routed the storm clouds which lung threateningly over the joint session of the American and National Leagues.

EVERETT SCOTT RETIRING.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Everett Scott, Washington utility infielder, who created a major league record of playing 1,307 consecutive games between 1916 and 1925 as a member of the Red Sox and Yankees, is ready to announce his voluntary retirement from baseball, Stanley Harris, manager of the Washington Americans revealed this Thursday, while discussing the prospects for the Washington club next year.

"Roger Peckinpaugh will be back at his old berth at shortstop next year, but I expect to hear of the voluntary retirement of Scott at anytime," he said. "Scotty has opened up a profitable bowling alley business in Fort Wayne, Ind., and I don't expect him to report in the Spring.

"Find me a better shortstop in the American League than Peckinpaugh and I'll use him if I can get him. I also have 'Buddy' Myer to use in a utility capacity. Myer is an infielder of wonderful ability. I expect him to develop into one of the stars of the game."

GRANGE INJURED AT PITTSBURGH

Blood Vessel Broke in Arm —Movie House May Bar Film.

BITTER AND SWEET.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Red Grange was injured in Chicago Bears-Pittsburgh football game Thursday. He has a ligament and broken blood vessel in his right arm.

May Bar Grange Pictures.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—The Motion Picture Owners of America yesterday issued a statement through General Manager Joseph M. Zeider saying that Red Grange would not be allowed to appear on the screens of the theatres of their organization if the exhibitors found his $300,000 contract cheque with an independent producer was "bunk publicity."

Mr. Zeider quoted a statement of E. A. Shallenberger, the indpendent producer with whom the football star signed a contract last Monday, in which Shalenlberger said the $300,000 cheque was in reality to be held in escrow until the picture is completed, and that Grange has been advanced but $10,000.

Red Paying the Price.

The haloed half-back made this plain following his Boston debut here, during which he tasted his first professional football flop. Chicago's Bears, with whom, it is reported, he has climbed the financial ladded to a position of semi-millionaire, had been bowled over and flattened by the Providence Steamrollers, 9 to 0, and Grange clearly showed his disappointment.

"A lousy affair," was the way in which the wearer of the magical "77" described the game as he sat on the side-lines during the final quarter.

"I won't get more than a dollar and a half out of this racket," he added.

Somebody suggested he probably wouldn't mind this, as he already had made a fortune through the capitalization of his pigskin prowess.

"A fortune" Red ejaculated. "Say, I haven't seen a dollar of real money yet!"

"Well, then, how did these stories about your share in the big money originate?" he was asked.

"I don't know. The money I have heard about so far is what I've read about in the papers. I never realized what an awful job pro. football is. I'm sick of it already, I'll tell you.

According to his manager, Red will receive about $12,000 for his Boston appearance. That's at the rate of approximately $1,000 for each yard he gained.

May Return to Studies

As Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth learned before him, Grange is beginning to know that the penalty of fame is "thumbs down" when a star doesn't deliver and that the public expects much of a hero when he is being paid for it.

Veteran football trainers, watching Grange try to play eight games in 17 days and attempt a schedule of 31 games in little more than two months, predicted that it couldn't be done, and it begins to appear that it can't be done.

The strain of travel, the annoyance from a pestering public and the burden of his fame have worn Grange down so much that he was unable to do a thing in Boston, and he was forced to listen to the first chorus of razzberries from disappointed customers.

Renorts were heard that the former Illinois star was so fed up with the dash for the dollar that he was about ready to be satisfied with what he had, quit the game and return to his studies.

Girls Seek Star Job.

When the ravishing ingenue who is to play "opposite" Grange in his first movie finally is selected, there are going to be loads and loads of disappointed maidens throughout the country.

With the ink from Grange's fountain pen scarcely dry on his $300,000 contract, already scores of girls have offered themselves as highly fitted to supply the "heart interest" when the gridiron star faces the camera.

These girls, in letters and telegrams sent to the picture corporation that has Grange's contract, from cities as far away as Salina, Kansas; Peoria, Ills.; Miami, Fla., and Bangor, Maine, usually are past or present co-eds, who suggest that their knowledge of university life would be a help in making the movie realistic. Two letters have been received from co-eds at the University of Illinois.

TULANE'S STAR HALF BACK

"Peggy" Flournoy, Tulane University's all-American halfback, who leads United States football point scorers with 112. He is almost certain to be included on Walter Camp's list this year.

TORONTO PRESS COMMENT

Telegram: It was a very close call for Peterboro. They just couldn't get going at all. The forwards seldom got past the Kitchener defence during the early stages of the game, leaving all the rushing to McLeod and Parker. Bogardis went better in this game, his playing being a decided improvement over his work in the T.C.C. affair. Collins and Ranger had their hands full all evening watching the tricky Kitchener forwards. Bailey was watched too much to get any place with his rushes. The Kitchener body checkers made Bailey like it at every opportunity. Rose and Cox were used on the forward line often, as the entire Peterboro team tired very easily. Parker and Goalkeeper Dwyer were the only players that stayed on during the entire game.

Globe: It was a thrilling battle enjoyed by the few fans who thought it worth while attending the expected slaughter of the Innocents. The Petes were off their stride from the start, and it was plain to see that they had underestimated the srength of their opponents. When they did realize that they were in for one of the hardest battles of their careers they could not get going in their usual form, but they gave a fine display of "gameness" under a withering fire, and that means a lot in any sport.

Peterboro performed no mean feat in holding the Kitchener sharpshooters goalless for fifty-eight consecutive minutes. Kitchener got their only counter twelve minutes after the game began, and from then until the finish Joe Dwyer gave one of the most remarkable goalkeeping exhibitions ever seen anywhere.

The champions may have been off color on the attack, but there wasn't much the matter with them on the defence. Any team that can hold a smart aggregation like Kitchener to one goal deserves a lot of credit. Peterboro will likely have few goals scored against them this season, and all they need to do to develop into the leading championship contender in the eastern group is to improve their attacking system.

Mail and Empire: While Dwyer and McLeod were Peterboro's best, Bailey and Ranger worked hard, and the former's shot for the winning goal was well made. Bruce Cox showed to much better advantage than he did against Toronto Canoe Club, while Bogardis, Collins and Rose were anything but weak.

Bert McLeod was the only member of last season's Senior finalists able to make any real headway on the attack. Bailey, Parker, Collins and Ranger were as a rule bottled up before they got past the halfway mark.

The former Collingwood boy was easily the stand-out for his team, and it was while he was resting that Kitcheper scored their goal in the first period. And McLeod was serving a penalty in the last five minutes of overtime when George Hiller, following in his own shot, which was wild, again secured behind the net, and bringing the puck out in front just failed to slip it past Dwyer. It was a clever play by Hiller, who helped Kitchener win the Allan Cup in 1918, and deserved a goal, but the puck glided past the post, about an inch on the outside.

OXFORD LOSES RUGBY ANNUAL

Light Blues Win 33 To 3 After Soccer Tie on Wednesday.

HISTORIC CONTEST.

Of the 49 previous contests Oxford had won 23, Cambridge 17, while nine were drawn.

The game was played at Twickenham in the presence of a huge crowd. Beautiful weather prevailed, a bright sun shining. The pitch was soft. The teams were:

Cambridge—B. Turnbull, Christ's; Sir T. Devitt, Corpus Christi; T. Francis, Pembroke; A. Aavold, Emmanuel; Rowe Harding, Pembroke; W. Sobey, St. John's; C. Bishop, Christ's; W. Tucker, Caius; W. Idris Jones, Caius; C. Barlow, Caius; S. Barlow, Caius; R. Barlow, Corpus Christi; E. Gibson, Trinity; G. Hamilton, Caius; G. Morpeth, St. John's; A. Allen, Caius.

Oxford—D. Drysdale, Brasenose; C. MacIntosh, University; A. Wallace, New; J. Richardson, Brasenose; H. Jacob, Christ Church; J. Nunn, New; W. Strong, Brasenose; G. Abell, Corpus; A. Valentine, Balliol; W. Berkeley, Hertford; W. Roughead, Oriel; B. Brestow, New; L. Seccombe, Pembroke.

Of the Cambridge team, seven are old blues, six seniors and two freshmen—Aavold and Allen. The Oxford team comprised seven players who were on the 1924 team, Foldes was on the 1922 team. McIntosh, Richardson, Landale, Preston, Seccombe are seniors, and Drysdale and Nunn freshmen.

Massing Movement.

At the beginning Cambridge developed a massing movement and Harding ran strongly only to be brought down by Drysdale. Wallace intercepted a pass and dashed through dribbling almost to the Cambridge line. Richardson held on too long and Cambridge got relief. The play at this stage was tremendously fast.

After a quarter of an hour the ball came out on the Cambridge side. Francis dribbled back, cleverly gave to Bishop, the latter passing to Aavold, who, with the road clear, dashed over for a try. C. Barlow converted. After that for a period the game was in the Oxford terrain. When the dark blues did get possession they ran up against Sobey, who was so quick and strong that they rarely got into a good position to pass and very seldom ran beyond midfield. Turnbull also kicked soundly several times while under pressure.

Missed Badly.

Following a penalty Strong had a good chance to kick a goal, but missed badly. Cambridge began to attack determinedly after half an hour's play. Turnbull fielded a long kick, but did not return and then ran right up to Oxford's twenty-five-yard line. He passed beautifully to Devitt, who scored near the corner. C. Barlow's splendid effort to convert just missed. For a short while before the interval Oxford had more of the game, but their handling was never good. Richardson got a chance but was brought down, and Turnbull frustrated another promising movement. The Cambridge full back deceived his opponents into thinking he was going to pass. He then sprinted and gave to Gibson. Devitt was following Gibson and getting his pass scored under the posts, C. Barlow bringing out the major points. Oxford got right down to the light blue line, but could not penetrate, the half time finding the score: Cambridge 13, Oxford 0.

MUCH MISCONDUCT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—More than one-ninth of the entire personnel of the coastguard, the Government service for suppressing rum smuggling, has been court-martialed this year for misconduct, it was learned at the Treasury Department.

Out of an enlisted strength of 9,000 men approximately 1,700 have been on trial on various charges ranging from being absent without leave and desertion, to conniving with bootleggers.

Officials of the service said discipline was very strict, but the morale of the enlisted men unusually weak, due to the large number of enlistments of men unfamiliar with guard customs and traditions.

RUSSIA MUST BE IN AGREEMENTS

Completion of Work of Locarno Necessary For European Solidarity.

SAYS RAKOVSKY.

PARIS, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press)—"The anti-Soviet sting must come out of the Locarno treaty," said Christian Rakovsky, Soviet Ambassador to France today. The Ambassador yesterday presented his credentials to President Doumergue. "The Locarno treaty," M. Rakovsky continued, "must be completed by agreements with Russia if it is to be regarded as the starting point for a policy of European solidarity."

CHURCH LEAGUE. Y.M.C.A.

Murray Street tied up with All Saints for first position in the Church League by taking all three games from them. As this is the close of the first section, a playoff between the two teams will be necessary to decide first place. Nicholls' three good singles of 221, 170 and 221 were a factor in Murray Street's success. Other good singles were Loomis' 258, McNeeley's 222, Bell's 225 and Warde's 196.

HOME LEAGUE HELD BAZAAR AT TEMPLE

Good Patronage Given Two Day Sale Under Army Auspices.

The Home League of the Salvation Army held a very successful bazaar on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, in the Young People's Temple on Aylmer Street. There was a good patronage for the two days' sale, and the ladies in charge had a large number of very pretty things, both useful and fancy, on view. The bazaar was in charge of Mrs. T. Lang, secretary of the Home League. Mrs. E. Hedge, treasurer, had charge of the afternoon tea. Mrs. J. T. Braund and Mrs. A. J. Smith supervised the service of an excellent hot supper. During the first evening, an enjoyable musical programme was given by the Scouts' orchestra, and last night, the Saxaphone Party entertained the crowd.

The big hall of the Young People's Temple was bright with colored streamers of pink and blue and green, and the various booths were arranged with standards wound with bright paper and centred by large red and white bells. The candy counter was particularly attractive, done in white, with overhead streamers of silver tinsel and lines of colored lights, the candy in colored holders and the table centred with a vase of artificial sweet peas.

Ladies in charge of the various tables were Mrs. W. Jones and Mrs. W. G. Robinson, at the sale of work held by the Young People's League; Mrs. N. Shadgett at the Girl Guards' counter; Mrs. G. Thomas and Mrs. V. Laing for the candy sale; Mrs. E. Jones, Mrs. F. Gandy and Mrs. Jas. Richardson at the counters devoted to the sale of pretty things in fancy work and miscellaneous articles. Mrs. Jas. Pammett, Mrs. W. Butcher and Mrs. A. McDonald had the rummage sale.

GENEVA, Dec. 11.—"If war is forced on to us, England will maintain her rights as she has always done," declared British Colonial Secretary L. C. M. Amery in an exclusive interview with the United Press to-day. He was discussing the delicate situation surrounding the League of Nations' efforts to reach a decision as to the future control of the oil district of Mosul.

"The British Government," he continued, "is not pursuing an aggressive policy, is not seeking fresh territorial responsibilities, nor a war, but if war is forced as a result of responsibilities already assumed, she will fulfill her duty."

Amery himself was doubtful that a council decision in favour of Britain would be followed by a Turk war. Nevertheless, he indicates clearly that England would amply meet such a threat. "Under the Sevres Treaty, which the Turks accepted," he observed, "Mosul was included integrally in the Kingdom of Irak. When the Turkish government was overthrown, the new Turkish government wanted Mosul which constitutes one-fourth of the area of Irak and the richest part."

Cession of Mosul to Turkey would mean economic ruin and the question of the district's population would be very grave. Twenty thousand Christians have fled from the portion of the district still under Turkish jurisdiction and if Mosul were ceded, 80,000 Christians would be obliged to flee from deportations and atrocities.

"England, under the mandate, established a democratic government in Irak, which is a novelty in the Near East, and this has been progressing steadily. To abandon it now would be fatal. If Mosul were given to the Turks, it is certain that their first step would be reprisal against Christians and also an effort completely to stamp out the large Kurdish population in pursuance with their policy of several years to wipe out all racial minorities. We are ready to accept any decision of the League."

He pointed out that a decision adverse to Turkey would not mean that she had actually lost anything since Mosul had been a part of Irak since the Sevres Treaty, it would only mean she had failed to get what she claimed. To-day the Council decided to modify its decision and to resume sittings this afternoon on a minor question, deferring further discussion of Mosul as long as there was a possibility of reaching a direct, amicable settlement.

ENGINEER DIES AS TRAIN STOPS

IN BUFFALO STATION.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press). — Robert B. Savage, Michigan Central Railway passenger engineer of St. Thomas, fell dead just as he had taken passenger train No. ten into Buffalo Station from St. Thomas at one o'clock this morning. He left here last night at ten o'clock. His fireman saw him reel and fall almost as soon as he stopped his engine, but he was dead before aid reached him. Heart disease was the cause.

DIRECTOR OF "HAVOC" SAYS SOLDIERS RECALL FUNNY EVENTS ONLY

Rowland V. Lee Illustrates Statement with Stories Told by Battle-Scarred Veterans.

Humanity is in itself a paradox. Of the thousands of men who went through the war, facing the most terrible things of their lives, there is hardly one of them who did not come out of it with their minds filled with the comedy of it rather than the tragedy. Director Rowland V. Lee, who made the screen version of "Havoc," now playing at the Regent Theatre, had an excellent illustration of this fact when he employed three hundred ex-Canadian, British and Scotch war veterans for the tremendous war sequences of the picture.

"It is a funny thing," said Mr. Lee, "but out of these three hundred men, all of whom saw the most gruelling service and many of whom were wounded, I never heard one of them relate an incident of the war that was not humorous. Night after night, during the war sequences, they would gather around the camp fire and swap stories. Each would try to outdo the other to get a laugh. It would seem that they had been on one big lark instead of in the greatest war of the ages.

"Whether these veterans were recalling incidents of a great advance or a retreat, it was all the same. The time that a shell landed next to Scotty Dunlap and nearly buried him with earth or the time that Sergeant McManus nearly broke his neck over a stone wall to get away from a 'dud' is infinitely more important to these men now than any harrowing incident. They would much rather tell of how Private McTavish was hit in the seat of the pants by a mud pack than when some other unfortunate was struck by a shell."

AT THE ROYAL.

SUCCESSFUL AMATEUR NIGHT AT ROYAL

Another of the successful series of amateur nights arranged by W. P. McGeachie, was one of the features at the Royal last night. From an entertainment point of view it was one of the best.

Mr. Carter entertained with a saxaphone solo, introduced in a novel way by Mr. Harris.

The Guerin Children were one of the big hits of the evening with "Oh, How I Miss You Tonight," with special lighting effects.

Abraham and Collins, announced as Peterboro' Minstrels were the big hit. Their songs and clever chatter went over big. With a little "brushing up" these boys will soon be out of the amateur class.

Sammie Harris officiated in his usual capable manner.

Capital Audience Greets Denny Picture with Prolonged Laughter.

In a comedy bubbling with fresh and novel situations, Reginald Denny is seen here in his latest release, "I'll Show You the Town," the Universal-Jewel feature which opened at the Royal theatre last night. Having none of the customary comedy hokum, "I'll Show You the Town" is a racy, romantic love story of an unromantic college professor whose only interest in life is centered in the completion of his dissertation on "Apartment House Life in Ancient Rome." Circumstances constantly arise which prevent Alec Dupree, played by Reginald Denny, from carrying on his monumental work. One of the circumstances which arise is the basis for the many funny situations of Elmer Davis' rollicking story from which this production is adapted.

Alec was quick to promise and quick to perform. Hardly aware of the fact himself Alex had promised three women to show them the sights of the town the same night, though each separately; neither of the women to be aware of the others' existence. It was a "tough" and unusual proposition, but Alec summed up his courage and went through with it. The three women were Agnes Clevenger, a wealthy though homely widow, played by Cissy Fitzgerald; Fan Green, Alec's neighbor, and Hazel Deming, a visitor to the metropolis from the far west. Agnes was to be wooed and won for the sake of old Wyndam, a defunct college; Fan was to be tolerated for good-fellowship, while Hazel was the girl after Alec's own heart. How it is all accomplished is revealed in a series of laugh provoking situations. Lilyan Tashman plays the role of Fan Green, while Hazel is played by Marian Nixon.

"I'll Show You the Town," although a comedy of the first water, is not devoid of thrills. One of the big scenes in the production takes in a fast airplane tour over the metropolis. In this sequence Alec is accompanying the wealthy Agnes on one of the fastest sight-seeing tours on record.

Denny is supported by an unusually strong cast including, other than those already mentioned, Edward Kimball, Hayden Stevenson, Margaret Livingston, Neely Edwards, William A. Carroll, Martha Mattox, Helen Greene and Lionel Braham. Harry A. Pollard directed the production.

AT THE REGENT

HAROLD LLOYD KNOCKS TH LAUGHS FOR A GOAL IN "THE FRESHMAN" HIS BEST COMEDY

It has become such a habit for Harold Lloyd to make comedies of a high grade of excellence that it seems commonplace and savoring of repetition to say that "The Freshman," which had its initial showing here, Wednesday, at the Capitol Theatre, is another link in his unbroken chain of hits. In fact, in our humble opinion, it is the best of all of them, and that statement is made after careful reflection.

While not as breath-taking as "Safety Last," as filled with hilarious farce as "Why Worry?" or as crammed with gags as "Hot Water," it is nevertheless better entertainment than any of these, for it combines the best laugh-getting points of them all. In type it more nearly resembles "Girl Shy," for the laughs have been hung on a farce comedy framework in which there is just enough story to carry them, strong human interest and a plentiful sprinkling of pathos.

As soon as the characters and the atmosphere are well planted, the laughs start in—at first gently, and then working up with increased volume and velocity, until your laughs have become one prolonged roar. We see Harold in his home, just prior to leaving for college, planning his campaign to be the most popular boy on the campus. Then come enough scenes on the train to introduce him to the heroine, Jobyna Ralston. His arrival and welcome exceed his fondest dreams, for he doesn't realize, in his simplicity, that he's been recognised as a dub and is being kidded to a fare-ye-well. There is excellent humor and human interest in the scene where he makes a speech to the students while he has a kitten fidgeting under his sweater.

The laughs become more robust and the action more strenuous when Harold substitutes for a dummy in tackle practice with the football squad. In this sequence a tear or two is mixed for an extra measure of emotional reaction. This sequence is followed by the Fall Frolic, of which Harold is host and which he is forced to attend in a basted tuxedo that causes a solid quarter of an hour of hilarity.

The great climax comes in the football game, into which Harold, only a lowly water boy, is thrown in as a substitute to at least save the school from the disgrace of forfeiting the game.

It's a great picture of laughs and thrills and tears, extremely well constructed, smoothly directed, and perfectly acted by a cast that couldn't have been more wisely selected.

TURKISH HOPE OF FRENCH HELP WAS SHATTERED WHEN BRIAND REFUSED ANY INTERFERENCE

Tewfik Bey Cancelled Trip To Paris on Receipt of Refusal.

WON'T ENTER MOSUL.

Britain Let France Alone in Syria, So Intervention is Impossible.

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

GENEVA, Dec. 12—The Turkish delegation's eleventh hour hope of securing French support for their position in the Mosul mandate dispute before the League of Nations Council was shattered to-day when the Turkish envoy at Paris, Fethi Bey, telegraphed the Turkish Foreign Minister, Delegate Tewfik Rouschi Bey, here, that the latter's proposed trip to Paris would be useless.

Fethi Bey was understood to have been informed by Premier Briand that it would be impossible for France to interfere in the situation.

Briand is reported to have told the Parisian envoy that France was sufficiently occupied with her own Syria problems and that as Britain had not interfered with the French in Syria, France could not well interfere in Mosul. Anyway, according to the reports, he informed Fethi Bey that France and Britain were pursuing a common policy in the Near East, which, it was indicated, would render the desired intervention out of the question. In view of this negative reply from Fethi Bey, the Foreign Minister cancelled his sleeper reservation which had been made yesterday when he decided suddenly to make the Paris trip in the hope that it might offer a way out of the Turkish dilemma.

The Turks manifestly have seen the handwriting on the wall in the form of a stiffer attitude by the British toward them in the wake of a stronger pro-British sentiment in the Council as a result of the report of Turkish deportations of Assyrians.

The Turks realize too that the Council is only delaying a decision adverse to them so as to enable the Turks to negotiate with the British for a peaceful solution meantime. The terms of such a settlement, however, are placed higher by the British than they would have been a week ago, before the Laidoner report turned the tide toward the British.

PAINLEVE APPOINTED.

To Committee of League of Nations.

GENEVA, Dec. 12 (Canadian Prss)—As a savant and not as a former premier of France, Pacl Painleve was appointed Friday by the Council of the League of Nations a member of the League's committee of intellectual co-operation to succeed Hnri Bergson, the noted French philosopher who resigned recently on account of poor health.

It is expected that M. Painleve will be made president of the committee succeeded M. Bergson.

Alfredo Rocco, Italian minister of justice, was appointed to the committee to succed Francisco Ruffini, former minister of public instruction of Italy.

Ex-Alderman Stratton Asked To Run For Mayor

Ex-Alderman A. H. Stratton, when interviewed by The Examiner regarding a rumor which named him as a possible contender for Mayoralty honors, denied that he had any intention of entering the field. He admitted that he had been importuned by several who wished to support him in the municipal lists, but he had apparently not given the matter serious consideration.

FRENCH DEPUTIES LOTH TO PASS HEAVY TAXATION MEASURES BUT WOULD MULCT WAR PROFITEERS

Finance Minister Himself Accused of Withholding Part of War Benefits.

FRANC DECLINING.

Antagonism To M. Loucheur Develops as Fiscal Schemes Appear.

PARIS, Dec. 12—M. Loucheur's prophecy when he assumed charge of the ministry of finance that his fiscal measures would make him the most unpopular man in France already is being realized, for his financial bills are meeting with growing opposition in parliamentary quarters.

He spent virtually the entire afternoon Friday explaining the measures to the Finance committee of the Chamber of Deputies but apparently failed to convince the majority of the committee, and expert parliamentarians say that the political fate of the finance minister may be greatly compromised when the bills reach the oratorical and voting stage in the open chamber.

The piece-meal introduction to the Chamber of M. Loucheur's seven financial bills — five of them having been deposited with M. Herriot, president of the chamber since Monday and the remaining two still being revised—has caused much criticism in the chamber, where the measures themselves are unpopular.

Conversion of Bonds

The bill introduced yesterday deals with a method of security conversion that will be offered to holders of the present 4, 5 and 6 per cent. French internal bonds would be permitted to convert them into a single five per cent. security which would be accepted by the government instead of cash in the payment of inheritance taxes.

In addition to the opposition shown by the finance committee, the attitude of several important political groups does not auger well for the future of the legislation which the finance minister has prepared. He has made it known that his projects are subject to amendments, and this concession has been seized upon avidly by the Socialists. They have prepared counter-projects which, if accepted, would make M. Loucheur's original measures completely inoperative.

Squeeze War Profiteers

A few deputies seem anxious to vote for the new heavy taxation burdens called for by the finance minister, but many are asking whether it would not be possible to institute recovery proceedings against war profiteers.

This phase of the discussion by the finance committee brought on a personal attack against M. Loucheur, one member accusing him of having failed to declare all his war benefits to the state. Such accusation has appeared often in the press, but this was the first time it was made openly in the presence of M. Loucheur. It upset the equanimity of the Finance Minister, who had been treating the question from a purely technical viewpoint. He challenged the accuser to prove that he had not turned over all his war time profits to the state and called upon his political opponents — M. Francois-Marsal, who is mentioned as a probable successor to M. Loucheur—to prove that a cheque was not sent to the treasury in full settlement.

M. Loucheur has decided to fight the accusation to the bitter end, and the matter is likely to come up in the chamber.

U. S. Debt is the Key

When asked by the Finance Committee where he intended to stop depreciation of the franc, the finance minister declared that the United States debt settlement dominated the problem of stabilization of the French currency.

"We must persuade the British government," he said, "to make the question of settlement of its debt subordinate to an agreement with the United States. It is for the purpose of resuming the negotiations at Washington begun by M. Caillaux that M. Berenger is leaving for the United States soon as French Ambassador and we hope that when an accord is reached the French franc will follow the upward course of the Belgian franc and the Italian lire."

Franc Declines Further

The increased uncertainty as to when the country's finances are to become stable had a repercussion in the Paris Bourse yesterday when the dollar and sterling passed 27 and 131, respectively. Another great rush to buy foreign securities at any price was a feature of the day's trading, and the lead in the depreciation of the franc now has devolved upon Paris, as the dollar opened higher here than it closed on the New York Exchange Thursday.

Meanwhile parliamentary circles, openly discussing the possible fall of M. Loucheur, are asked: "Who and what next?"

Four Children Burned To Death While Mother Was Milking Cows in Stable

MONTREAL, Dec. 12. (Canadian Press).—Four small children of Saul Gervais were burned to death when their home at La Sarre, Que., in the Abitibi district, was destroyed by fire Thursday night before the eyes of the distracted mother and neighbors who came to her aid. The frantic efforts of the mother and others to enter the building were frustrated by the flames, which were pouring out of windows and doors before they were discovered. Mrs. Gervais left her children in the house while she went to milk her cows. In some unknown manner the place took fire, and was only noticed when the mother chanced to look out of the stable door. Her screams and the fire attracted neighbors, but it was too late for anything to be done. The charred remains of the four small bodies were found when the fire had burned itself out.

The father of the children was absent at the time working in the woods.

Utilities Commission Tells Campbell Mills Circumstances

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir.—The question of the quantity of power used by the Campbell Flour Mills Company in the years 1919, 1920 and 1921, and the quantity paid for by that company during those years, having been again raised, the Utilities Commission feels that in justice to all concerned, the facts should again be made public.

This Commission is satisfied that the Campbell Flour Mills Company has paid for all the power it has used, and that any idea that it has used power for which it has not paid arises from lack of knowledge of the facts, which are as follows:

Before February, 1919, there was no meter installed on the Campbell Company's service. Periodical readings were taken with a Bristol ammeter, and bills were rendered and paid on the basis of these readings.

In February, 1919, a Westinghouse R. O. meter was installed in the company's plant. Before this meter was installed a bench test was made of it by the meter department of this Commission. This test is made by setting up the meter on a bench, attaching it so that it received the electric current, and ascertaining, by comparison with a tested meter, that it measured the current correctly. After this test was made, and entirely independent of it, the inspector for the Dominion Government tested the meter and also found it to register correctly. The Government Inspector then sealed this meter, which was done by pouring wax into a hole, through which two wires pass, and affixing the Government seal, and the meter could not be opened without this seal being broken. This is the usual practice. After the meter was installed in the mill, tests were made of it in place. These tests, made with a split-core transformer, and an ammeter, were sufficient to show that the meter was properly installed. The meter was kept under observation for six weeks, and it was ascertained to be doing its work.

In March of the same year, 1919, the meter was removed from the mill and placed on a pole on the north side of Dalhousie Street, across the street from the mill. This was done because it was thought that the vibration of the mill might be affecting the accuracy of the record. The meter, still sealed, was placed in a box on the pole, and the box locked. The wires to which it was attached carried a current of 2,000 volts, and in addition to the Government seal and the locked box in which it was contained, there would be extreme danger in anyone trying to interfere with the meter, and any idea that the meter was tampered with is out of the question.

During the period from 1919 to 1922 this mill was being operated at only partial capacity. This information was given to the Commission's representatives by the mill management in the ordinary routine of checking this installation, and there is no reason to doubt the accuracy of their statements.

In March, 1922, owing to the representations of Mr. Meyers, the meter was taken down, brought into the meter department and again subjected to bench tests by both the meter department of the Commission and the Government Inspector, and the results showed that it was working accurately. It was again sealed and placed on the pole as before, and, after being installed, was again tested in place by the same tests as outlined above and found to be properly installed and recording the current that passed through it.

SUPREME COURT HEARS TALE OF 'HIJACKING' AND MURDER AT SEA

Father and Son With Cargo of Rum Were Slain, Disembowelled and Sunk Off Vancouver — Picaresque Evidence.

APPEAL FOR TWO CONDEMNED "PIRATES."

OTTAWA, Ont., December 12. — Canadian Press. — Tales of piracy and bloodshed of liquor smugglers and of "hi-jackers" who preyed upon them masquerading as "the law," echoed through the unfamiliar precincts of the Supreme Court of Canada Friday.

The appeal of Owen B. Baker and Harry Sowash, alias Meyers, against their conviction on a charge of murder, was heard, and the court sat 40 minutes past its usual hour of adjournment to permit counsel to finish. Judgment was reserved, but an early decision was forecast in the instructions of the Chief Justice to counsel that all citations must be handed in before Saturday noon, and the fixing of Friday next, December 18, as the next sitting of the court.

The sitting when finished yesterday was a special one, set for the purpose of hearing the Baker-Sowash appeal. Five judges heard the case, attired in the scarlet and ermine reserved for special occasions.

Assistant Chief Justice Idington was absent because of illness.

Two Points of Law.

The grounds of appeal narrowed down as the hearing proceeded, to two points of law: whether certain details in the evidence should have been admitted at the trial and whether the judge properly instructed the jury as to the relative value of evidence given by accomplices in the enterprise and that given by independent witnesses. Counsel for Baker R. V. Sinclair, K.C., urged that A. S. Clausen of Seattle, whose previous testimony was the chief corroborative evidence to that of the crown witness, Paul Stromplkins, was in fact an accomplice to the whole plot to rob the Beryl G. of liquor, during which enterprise the captain of the Beryl G., William Gillis and his son, were murdered. The most debated phrase in the trial judge's charge to the jury, "Sowash corroborates the evidence of Strompkins," related to Sowash's position in the case entirely, it was decided after much discussion between Crown counsel and the bench. The suggestion of counsel for the condemned men was that it might have influenced the jury into thinking that the corroborative evidence necessary to give full weight to testimony of an accomplice had therein been supplied, and that the jury might have found differently if the judge had not used that language.

Chief Justice Anglin admitted that the judge might have used different language but was inclined to think that the exact scope of the remark had been properly applied and that there had been no misdirection of the jury.

Hold-Ups Alleged.

Again there was much discussion as to whether evidence concerning alleged hold-ups staged by Baker in the past should have been admitted as evidence, that he might have carried a revolver on the night of the murder. Baker not only denied being at Sidney Island, B.C., where the murder was committed on the night in question, but also asserted that he had never possessed or carried a gun in his life

The contention of appeal counsel, Mr. Sinclair, for Baker, and Austin O'Connor for Sowash, was that the trial judge should have granted separate trials for the two accused, and also should have granted a postponement of the trial to permit the defense to introduce extra witnesses.

The Supreme Court ruled yesterday that the trial judge was within his discretion in refusing the motions made for these two concessions.

Mr. O'Connor urged that Sowash

Five Priests Brave Death Enter Ruins To Aid Hurt

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press).—Walking literally into the "Valley of the Shadow," dauntless at the call of duty, five Roman Catholic priests braved imminent death with firemen and doctors last night, to administer the last sacrament and give aid to eight workmen buried in the collapse of a brown stone residence, under repair.

Once they were called on to close the eyes of a dead man and for hours they stood by the side of two others, alive, but hysterical and with only their heads above a mass of fallen timbers, plaster and bricks.

Though five of the eight were rescued almost immediately—all of them with the aid of a priest, who was the first to enter the wreckage — three others were pinned, one dead and two alive, within the building for more than than six hours. Two more men were believed to be entombed in the cellar.

Stenographer Found Dead And Revolver Beside Her

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 12. (Canadian Press)—With a bullet wound in the head and a revolver lying near her, the body of Miss Jessie Ross, aged 20, was found at noon Friday near her desk at the offices of Davidson Wright, Limited, Customs brokers, where she was employed as a stenographer.

A. C. Wright, member of the firm, was in his office when he heard the report of a revolver shot. He went to the private office occupied by stenographers and found Miss Ross on the floor. She was shot in the right temple.

The body was removed to the city morgue, where an inquest will be held.

C.N.R. TO BUILD EARLY IN SPRING

Assurance Given Hon. G. N. Gordon on Visit To Ottawa—New Locomotives.

Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., is back in the city to-day after a business trip to Ottawa, where he interviewed several Government Departments on Peterborough business.

In an interview with Sir Henry Thornton about the use of the Diesel engine and oil electric locomotives on local lines, Mr. Gordon was assured that the matter is being considered, and he is inclined to believe that the substitution of this type of locomotion for steam engines is being seriously thought of. Mr. Gordon was also informed that there is included in the budget for 1926 an amount for the construction of new freight sheds and offices in Peterborough. Building will probably start as soon as the frost is out of the ground and the new construction will make a considerable improvement on Aylmer and Charlotte Streets.

Through the Department of Railways and Canals, Mr. Gordon arranged for two representatives [illegible] will be Alex Kerr of Peterborough, to go to the New York Motor Boat Show early in January with the Trent Waterway exhibit. The Chamber of Commerce will be represented by Mr. Gordon to attend to this while in Ottawa.

LEAGUE INVITES UNITED STATES GERMANY AND RUSSIA TO ASSIST IN DRAFTING DISARMAMENT PLAN

Question Cannot Be Settled Without Co-operation of All Nations.

TEXTS DELIVERED.

Aid of U. S. Desired in Preparatory Work For Conference.

GENEVA, December 12. Canadian Press. — The text of the invitation to the United States government to participate in the special committee which is to prepare for the convocation of an international conference on disarmament was approved at a secret session of the council of the league of nations last night. It will be forwarded to Washington to-day by way of the United States legation at Berne.

Invitations almost identical as to text will go to Russia and Germany, the Russian communication being sent by mail. The texts will only be published when the document intended for Russia has reached its destination.

The council last night reached a complete accord on the programme of study to be submitted to the special preparatory committee and the understanding is that a copy of this programme, which covers all aspects of the disarmament problem, will form a part of the United States' invitation.

Universal Co-Operation.

According to an unofficial synopsis, the invitation says that after a long study, the council is of the unanimous opinion that owing to the perplexity of the question it cannot be settled in its entirety unless there is co-operation by all the countries, because it affects the interests of all.

Therefore, it continues, the council gives great values to the collaboration of the United States, both in the preparatory work of the committee and the disarmament conference itself. It concludes with an expression of hope that the time will come when all nations will be making efforts toward the attainment of the common goal and that the council will be able to count upon the full co-operation of the government of the United states in a work which so closely affects the peace of the world.

League leaders are unanimous in hoping that the country across the Atlantic may see its way clear to some sort of participation. The point is made that the United States might be able to present useful information concerning the economic and industrial aspects of the disarmament problem.

Chamber of Commerce Hears Report Presented By Mayor J. J. Turner.

REDUCTION SOUGHT.

Interesting Session of Local Body Discusses City and Canadian Affairs.

Four reports embodying affairs of civic, provincial and national interest were heard last night in the Chamber of Commerce Council room, and served to show the efforts being made by Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade to solve the business and economic ills of the day.

J. J. Duffus, a vice-president of the Ontario Associated Board, presented an exhaustive account of what transpired at the Kingston conference held last month. Many of the resolutions adopted had been prepared and submitted by the Peterboro branch.

His Worship Mayor Turner while unable to report an actual success, yet revived hope that Peterboro citizens may soon achieve a lowered gas rate.

E. Bruce Fowler presented a report which had been jointly prepared by himself and B. F. Ackerman. It told of the Dominion conference which had been held in Winnipeg in mid-November.

J. Wells Fraser recounted what had transpired at the first annual meeting of the Tourist Association of Ontario which had been held in Toronto on November 27.

BENEFIT CONCERT.

The programme arranged by the committee in charge of the benefit concert to be given in the Capitol Theatre at half past eight o'clock on Sunday evening, is an excellent one, and promises a really entertaining session for all who attend. The concert has been arranged for the aid of a needy old couple of Belmont township, living in reduced circumstances, both at an advanced age. Parents of two soldiers who fought for Canada in the Great War, the father is blind and the mother has been compelled to earn a precarious living by cutting wood and selling little songs from door to door on the streets of Peterboro. Their Christmas will be gladdened by the patronage of the citizens at to-morrow evening's concert. The programme is as follows:

Opening overture by the Capitol orchestra; selection by the children's choir; vocal solo, Mr. W. Hodson; vocal solo, Mrs. Brearley; piano selection, Miss Marion Adams; vocal solo, Mr. A. Everitt; solo and chorus, Mrs. Jackson and the Female Voice Choir; violin solo, Mrs. J. Foster; vocal solo, Mr. T. Stazicker; vocal solo, Miss J. Patterson; saxaphone group of the Salvation Army; selection by the Female Voice Choir; vocal quartette, Mrs. H. F. Doig, Miss Beulah Payton, Messrs. D. Fleming and W. Skitch; vocal solo, W. Skitch; vocal solo, S. Willis, duet, Mrs. Cairns and Miss J. Patterson; vocal solo, Miss M. Allen; choir, "Nearer, My God to Thee," orchestra.

The following gentlemen have consented to sit on the platform: Hon. N. W. Gordon, K.C., E.A. Peck, M.P., elect, Mayor J. J. Turner, Capt. Winterbottom, S. Whatley.

The committee in charge is composed of the following ladies: Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mrs. J. Mills, Mrs. R. Bugg, and the executive of the Female Voice Choir.

Christmas Eve, 1814, is notable in history as the day on which the Peace of Ghent was signed. This brought the war between America and England to an end.

How I Earned My First Dollar

E. A. PECK—M.P. ELECT

I have been asked how I earned my first dollar. Well, that I find hard to answer. I, of course, as other boys do, received frequent small sums for domestic services, such as filling the wood box, running messages etc., but those are not to be considered in this discussion I suppose, and at any rate such amounts as a dollar for these services were unheard of. Ten cents or a quarter were substantial terms to the boys of my day. I do not remember earning one dollar at any one time until I left school and started out as a clerk in a law office.

I remember rather distinctly though an attempt I made at an earlier date than that to break into the financial world. It was before the snow plough had come into its own and our sidewalks by early spring would be badly drifted in places. With some other boys the job of removing snow from one of the walks was undertaken and a sum of money collected from adult residents interested, to compensate us for our arduous labors. Unfortunately I was not the custodian of the funds. We performed the work to our own satisfaction at any rate and the question of "slicing the melon" came up. For some reason which I never understood I was refused my share and, as the treasurer was considerably larger than myself, I was deprived of the only possible remedy to a boy—the application of force. Of course our proceeding was a mistaken one. We should have consulted a solicitor, had a proper agreement in writing executed and arranged to have the funds deposited to a joint account in a bank. While, doubtless, the lawyer's fees would have exceeded the amount of the fund, yet thus, the whole proceeding would have been carried out in an orderly legal manner. I leave it to the readers of The Examiner to extract from this experience the proper moral.

GAS PLANT TO MAKE UP STREET RAILWAY LOSSES

invaded the precincts of the Hydro offices. He had said that a compilation of gas rates of a number of cities in the province showed Peterboro at the top of the list, and while Peterboro liked to be ahead in most cases, it did not wish prominence in that matter. Commissioner McGuire said that as the street railway wasn't paying, the profit from the gas plant acted as a counter balance. In reply to this the Mayor pointed out that every industry should stand on its own bottom,and in many cases those using gas never availed themselves of the transportation facilities, and should not be called upon to pay for something that they did not use. The rate reduction asked was $1.75 net but Mr. McGuire was outspoken, and said he would not agree to a reduction. To this it was intimated that certain manufacturing concerns would be forced to demolish their gas heaters and instal electric devices in order to cut down expenses. The mayor pointed out that if Mr. McGuire's attitude prevailed it might result in the slaughter of the golden-egg-producing-goose. The matter had been under discussion for two years and the people were clamoring for a lower rate. He said that the Hydro should make a Christmas gift of the reduced rate and the increase in gas consumption would make up the loss.

The Hydro authorities said they would prepare a memorandum of the selling price of the plant. In conclusion, the Mayor stated that the plant might be handled advantageously as several small economies could be introduced as the reading of gas and electric meters by the same people, whereas the work is duplicated at present. He urged that the people keep hammering away.

Questioned by F. D. Kerr, K.C., as to the relation between the deficit of the street railway and the surplus of the gas plant, it developed that the deficit was $37,000, as opposed to the gas plant surplus of $20,000.

J. J. Duffus.

The meeting of the Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce was held in Kingston on November 5—6, and an agenda containing 24 resolutions was submitted to the consideration of delegates.

J. J. Duffus and Frank G. Stinson were delegates from the Peterborough branch. A resolution submitted by this branch had to do with the stopping of autos before crossing a provincial highway. This was withdrawn. Another which received the approval of the Associated Board concerned the extension of the tourist permit for an additional 30 days.

Regarding the suggestion that the next annual meeting be held in Peterborough, Mr. Duffus took objection, on the ground that much of this district had been covered by the Kingston Convention. He thought that Toronto was the logical place for convening next year.

E. Bruce Fowler.

The report of the Dominion Conference of Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce was exceptionally well prepared and entailed accounts of deliberation on national topics by such authorities as Sir James Aikins, Hon. John Bracken, Premier of Manitoba; S. B. Gundy, Chairman of the Conference, and Sir Thomas White, who presented an address on Canada's present national and economical position. Other topics on the agenda sheet were "Immigration and Colonization—the Need, the Prospect, and the Method," "Utilization of Maritime Reports," "Scientific Research in Relation to Industrial and Agricultural Development."

Mr. Frazer, commenting on the report, said that there had been a feeling of antagonism growing up between the provinces, and affirmed that the Winnipeg conference would go far in banishing that bitterness. Provincial problems would not loom so large when placed against issues which the Dominion was facing.

Mr. Fowler paid a tribute to the qualities of Mr. Ackerman as a travelling companion, and told of the benefits derived by attending the assembly. He said that two hundred of the biggest men in Canada dealt with the matters to hand in a non-political and uncontroversial manner. It was a great privilege for Peterborough to have been represented as a wider view of Dominion affairs was obtained than was possible in any other way. He was particularly impressed by the spirit of optimism which prevailed and said that there was an improved business tone because of the great wheat

J. Wells Fraser.

A report of the Tourist Association of Ontario Conference by J. Wells Frazer concluded the evening session. The value of the tourist traffic to the province is just beginning to be recognized," he said. Switzerland exists by its attraction to tourists; France gets much revenue from foreign visitors, and England is also known as a mecca for trave'. While the efforts of the Ontario Association were confined to soliciting traffic from the United States, the commercial value could not be over-estimated. According to statistics a revenue of $300,000,000 was added to the Dominion by tourists during the past year. Montreal increased her income by $18,000,000. Peterborough and Lakefield banks computed that $250,000 had been spent in this district by visitors from the United States.

M. Fraser said that the work was going on and any suggestions which would further its efforts were welcome. At the conference all by-laws were passed without opposition and a discussion of tourist camps was held. More than one hundred attended.

Toward the close a general discussion ensued. Mayor Turner told of a visit to Geneva and gave personal evidence of the manner in which the Swiss maintains his existence from the munificence of his guests. F. D. Kerr, K.C., speaking of the Trent Waterway Association, of which body he is the president, said that the Tourist Association owed its birth to the humble efforts of the body which he represented.

Mr. Kerr said that community advertising was a good thing and said the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce should congratulate the hockey team which was gathering fresh laurels.

He said that the canoe industry was not the biggest in the city, but no other factor had spread the name of Peterborough so widely as the light and fragile water craft. It was which was composed of good sound business men.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P., said that angling licenses for the past season were double that of last year, and showed that protection to the fish during the closed season meant the preservtaion of the district as a tourist paradise.

Resolutions of thanks and appreciation were presented to all who had given reports.

"BRINGING UP FATHER" — Geo. McManus

O Worship the Lord in the Beauty of Holiness

Suggested by Rev. Dr. C. W. Rose

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

CHURCH UNION

Mr. Editor—

Dear Sir.—As I am in the evening of life, my hearing somewhat impaired, my memory faulty, am a poor talker and as my occupation is a tiller of the soil and as I have only a log schoolhouse education, I crave your indulgence in placing some facts on paper. Sixty-two years ago last February, was the second last time I remember seeing my father alive; he was standing in the door of the Presbyterian Church, Lakefield, on the day when it was dedicated to God, as a place for Divine worship and religious instruction. The last time I remember seeing my father alive was on his death-bed, four months later. I was then twenty years old. Ours was a large family, seven boys, four girls; I was number six, counting from either end. I had then been a member of the Presbyterian Church about four years. My father's last request was that I be good to my mother. She lived 32 years after my father, and for the last 13 years was an invalid from paralysis. I did my best; my good wife and family helping me. During the 62 years I have sat under 10 pastorates; 55 years ago the first day of June last, Mrs. Fairbairn then a girl of 19 years, gave up her membership in the Methodist Church, and became a member of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church, and ever since has been a loyal, helpful member; leading her children at an early age into the Church of her choice. We have always been in accord with our minister.

If we were alone in our sorrow we would be silent. We have in our congregation at least seven widows, some in the country, some in the village. They are all loyal to the Presbyterian Church; they have laboured with their husbands, and families to support the Presbyterian minister to unfold the Gospel to the people. I went into one of their homes, about a gunshot from the church, about two weeks ago. The tears were rolling down her cheeks. She said her children had voted her church home away, and she was lonesome. I know this widow when her children were younger, conducted family worship regularly.

This is not an isolated case by any means; there are many men and women who are lonesome, without a church of their choice to go to.

Now, just a little personal reminiscence. Twenty-five years ago last June the Presbytery of Peterboro', did me the honor of sending me as a delegate to the General Assembly at Halifax; then again, 22 years ago last June, the Presbytery of Peterboro', did me the honor of sending me as a delegate to the General Assembly at Vancouver. At that meeting I witnessed a deputation, from the Methodist Church, pleading for the Presbyterian body to unite with them. After some discussion, there was no action taken. In the year 1910, or seven years later, the Presbytery of Peterboro' asked me to let go the plough handles and attend the General Assembly at Halifax. At that meeting the same request was brought forward. Here we have the continent, or 4,000 miles between, with sterner opposition than before. I well remember the petition was laid on the table for further developments. This is what we are getting out of the developments. I well remember on that occasion, Rev. Dr. Campbell, of Montreal, who had been Clerk of the Assembly for many years, exclaiming in open court, "Don't destroy the Presbyterian Church; if you do I will go home from this Assembly brokenhearted."

As to local conditions, we have a beautiful village, with a prosperous country adjacent to it. It only needs wise government. We have four Protestant churches, and one Catholic; the Protestant churches are Presbyterian, Methodist, Anglican and Baptist, costing yearly between nine and ten thousand dollars for maintenance. The Presbyterian Church has been moving along in peace and harmony with all the other churches in the village for 62 years. The first seven years of Rev. Mr. Jull's ministry in Lakefield, we were a united people—pastor and people in sympathy and love with each other; in fact we flattered ourselves that we had the most efficient and capable minister in town. We also believed we were busy pulling weeds out of this part of the Lord's moral vineyard. Since the notorious voting business, we believe we are only cultivating the weeds.

A few more facts and I am done. Eight years ago on the 13th of September last, Rev. Mr. Jull was inducted into Lakefield charge. Three days later, the 16th, on Sabbath, he preached his first sermon in commencing his work. He had nly the one charge, with morning and evening service. The stipulation by the congregation was —$1,000 dollars yearly, four weeks holidays and a house to live in, with barn and garden, and the work was proceeding very satisfactorily. We raised his salary to $1,200 dollars then, in case of sickness in his family, we gave him a substantial bonus; then, as time went on, we paid him $1,500 yearly. For the last number of years we have paid him $1,800 and, with the house and grounds, this is easily $2,000 yearly. His home is better equipped and he is a better looking man than when he came to us.

In 1924, the Peterboro' Presbytery was composed of 22 ministers and the same number of elders, at one time; nineteen of the ministers caught a vision and went over into the so-called Union, our minister being one of them. Sometime after he announced the fact from the pulpit. The congregation had no objection, it is a God-given privilege we have of thinking for ourselves. If the minister had behaved himself and let the congregation decide this matter the result would be different, and he would have many more friends. Immediately after announcing he had gone into Union, he commenced preaching Union.

In January, 1925, our Annual business meeting was held. Shortly before the meeting an official meeting was called, at that meeting it was decided to proceed with the voting immediately after the close of the yearly meeting. At the close of the business meeting, before there was a vote polled, I heard Mr. Jull say: "If Lakefield congregation votes non-Union, I will pass in my resignation at once, as I can not belong to two denominations at the same time." Mr. Jull had confidence in me at that time as he asked me the second time if I would take charge of the voting. From that time on, Mr. Jull persistently worked, both in the pulpit and out of the pulpit to swell the majority for Union. The only public effort the non-Unionists made was on the Saturday, when the principal of our High School and one of our doctors circulated a leaflet, which came from Toronto, with a number of questions and answers encouraging the non-Unionists. The next day, Sabbath morning, the minister took the leaflet into the pulpit and ridiculed it before the congregation and branded the authors of it as cowards as they did not sign their names. At the same time Mr. Jull was using the election dodge, telling both old and young we can go on as we have always done; we can sing our own hymns, and be governed by our own officials.

We have 193 names on the Communion roll as members; we are sure there are several names there which should not be there, we will not dispute that point, but as I counted the votes I will vouch for it. Further, contrary to the expressed wish of his Presbyterian friends, Mr. Jull held open court four times, immediately after service on the Sabbath day, and we believe and are sure it was then he secured a large part of his majority. After serving as returning officer on Tuesday evening, also on Saturday evening I told my minister, I had religious scruples about turning the Presbyterian Church into a polling booth on the Sabbath day, and would not act. The first Sabbath he secured a member of the congregation to take my place. The second Sabbath he secured a man who was not a member. He reinstated me on the week-days. I had in mind what Jesus did, when he found people in the temple doing business.

Total number of votes on roll	193
Number of votes polled	143
Number of votes for Union	98
Number of votes non-Union	45
Majority for Union	53
Number not voting	50

We may safely say, if they voted Union Mr. Jull would have had them.

At the time of Mr. Jull's induction there were six elders in the Session court. The same six served with Mr. Jull during the eight years of his ministry. He never suggested he wanted an increase. During the notorious voting contest two of the elders, with their families, withdrew and have not attended service since. Then from what had taken place before, and the announcement made from the pulpit two Sabbaths before, June 10, I heard the minister distinctly say, "On the tenth day of June the Lakefield Presbyterian congregation automatically goes over into the United Church of Canada, and takes the property with it." Needless to say, many of the congregation were shocked, when it was put up to us, that we had to think and do as our pastor had done, or release any claim on the church property. We chose the latter and withdrew. Our congregation is broken, three out of six of the Session court, at least two out of the managing board, with a large portion of the congregation on the street, with no Presbyterian Church to go to nearer than St. Paul's, Peterboro', ten miles away. When we found our esteemed minister taking advantage of the legislation to disinherit us of our church home, then we circulated a protest through or amongst the congregation. It was only a few hours before we had seventy names of members and supporters of the congregation, and we could easily have a number more if necessary. You will readily see where those who were loyal to the Presbyterian Church were placed, the minister using every effort to swell the Union majority, and using the pulpit that we supplied him with to that end, namely, to disinherit us of our lawful rights. It pains me as a duty to stand here in defence of my loyal brothers and sisters in the Presbyterian Church, Lakefield.

During the minister's holiday season this summer, I attended the services in the Methodist Church on eight Sabbaths. At one of those services, I joined with the congregation at Communion service, and was surprised at the small number who encompassed the Lord's Table.

In conclusion, I am sure it is in no case necessary for the fulfillment of Union in Lakefield to take the Presbyterian Church home into account as there is abundance of room for both congregations in the Methodist Church, and then have seats to let.

The assessed value of the Presbyterian Church property is $17,700; Methodist valuation is $26,400; Presbyterian seating capacity, 325; Methodist seating capacity, 450; Presbyterian membership, 193.

The orphaned part of our congregation has endeavored to carry on afternoon services in the Baptist Church for five Sundays. The first three Sundays, laymen, the last two Sundays, ministers who had their own charges to minister to.

Our largest attendance was 58, and our least attendance, 32. On October 4 it was 42; October 11, 32; October 18, 40; October 25, 58; November 1, 48. October 25, the weather was not favourable but not stormy. I have it from a reliable person who was there, and counted, who says the number at the morning service in the Presbyterian Church was 35. I was present at night when there was a township minister holding forth. He told me that Mr. Jull was preaching an anniversary sermon six miles distant. I was first, the minister second, the organist third, then three ladies came in and three small children, only one of the ladies being a member of the congregation. One of the ladies, being a useful member of the Methodist Church, glancing up and seeing no one in the choir, went up and took her place there. Afterward one of the choir girls came and helped. That was the choir. I counted those who were present. The number was 30, counting myself. The peculiar thing is, during the five Sabbaths we held service in the Baptist Church we had the largest number that day, namely, 58.

During the many years the Presbyterian and Methodist congregations have continued doing the Master's work side by side in peace and harmony. Now we have the rowdy and the man on the street pointing the finger of scorn. They are not saying, "behold how Christians love each other," but, "look how they fight." We are told in the Good Book, a house divided against itself cannot stand. We take encouragement from the fact. It is not a membership movement, and many who voted Union are anxious to carry on in the same old Presbyterian Church. We believe if the property is given over to the so-called Union Church, the time is not far distant when a notice will be placed on the door "for sale." The debt on our church is $600.00, by note. The Methodist Church is free of debt. If the property is ours, we assume the debt; if theirs, they do. Our plea and prayer is that the good Lord may so overrule the machinations of men that the disruption that is taking place in the Presbyterian congregation in Lakefield may be averted; and the property remain with its rightful owners.

MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS

Mrs. F. H. Miller, 1843-11th Ave. East, Vancouver, B.C., writes:—"Five years ago my husband suffered terribly with severe attacks of palpitation of the heart and smothering spells, and two doctors stated that he could not possibly live six months.

A friend recommended Milburn's H. and N. Pills, with the result that my husband is still enjoying life at the age of 84 years.

He has improved so wonderfully that he can now climb the stairs without having those awful pains in his heart."

HOW TO RELIEVE CHILDREN'S COLDS

Avoid Serious Results By Using Baby's Own Tablets.

When a child shows the first symptoms of a cold, such as sneezing, redness of the eyes, clogged or running nose prompt measures for relief may avert serious results. Mother should always have on hand some simple, safe and effective remedy for immediate use.

Baby's Own Tablets act quickly, contain no opiates or narcotics, are tasteless and harmless. Mrs. Joseph Cadieux, Holyoke, Mass., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my children and find them a very satisfactory medicine. When my little boy had a cold I gave him the Tablets at night and he was well next day. I give them to the children for constipation and they always do good. I think Baby's Own Tablets are much easier to give a child than liquid medicine. I recommend the Tablets to all mothers who have small children and believe they should always be kept on hand."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DOMINIONS ALL WORKING HARD FOR IMMIGRANTS

Canada First in Field to Take Advantage of New Interest.

BIG STAFF BUSY

Other Dominions Seeking Men to Go Out as Farm Workers.

By KEITH JONES

LONDON, Dec. 12. — (United Press).—One of the greatest "back-to-the-land" movements the world has ever seen is gathering momentum in England.

Involved in the plan is not only Lloyd George's vast scheme for the rehabilitation of agricultural England which would in effect distribute the vast landed estates of the nobility among millions of small farmers, but also a concentrated drive that Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa are about to inaugurate to place several hundred thousand Englishmen yearly in agricultural pursuits in the colonies.

In addition Great Britain has drawn up a program for the reforestration of England that calls for the planting of 250,000 acres of wasteland during the next ten years with more than 430,000,000 trees. Then in itself will call for a small army of workers throughout the ten years period.

But it is Canada which is first in the field to take advantage of the newly awakened interest in agriculture. J. Bruce Walker, Director of Immigration for Canada is already on the scene in England and is now engaged in gathering about him a staff of five hundred lecturers and agricultural demonstrators who will visit every part of England painting the allurements of Canadian agricultural life and exhorting all who are discontented with their prospects in England to immigrate to the farming districts of Canada.

He had set his goal for 1926 at securing 20,000 farm hands and 80,000 others with sufficient capital to start in on farms of their own. For such as wish to own their own farms immediately upon arriving in Canada, Walker has set the minimum capital requirement at $4,500 But for those who are willing to start in as farm laborers, the only requirement is sufficient capital to purchase their passage and maintain themselves for a reasonable time in Canada while they are awaiting placement on farms.

Meanwhile the Canadian immigration director and his staff will operate "farming schools" at selected locations in various parts of England in which the candidates for immigration can be trained in the rudiments of routine farm work. The director is emphatic in stating however that character nd willingness to work are among the essential requirements for candidates to admission to the farm schools.

Once the stream of farmers and farm laborers has been started and is running on a satisfactory basis, Walker and his staff will turn their hands to the question of securing a desirable class of immigrants for positions in the trades, offices and as shopkeepers.

Not to be much outdone by Canada, Australia is laying plans for a ten-year immigration campaign which it is hoped will net 470,000 immigrants before 1935. Representatives of this Commonwealth will also follow much the same plan of campaign that Canada is pursuing —establishment of training schools and the sending broadcast of a corps of lecturers who will expatiate on the virtues of life in Australia as contrasted with the lot of the average working man in England.

New Zealand on its hand has "scouts" out looking for settlers of the right type to try their hand at fortune making under Southern skies, and South Africa is also working out a plan to capture would-be farmers, on a scheme that would parcel out farming lands to newcomers in blocks of 100 acres each, train the farmers, and guarantee them against loss for a period of time.

NET TIGHTENS ABOUT ENRIGHT

FRIEND SLAIN.

BATH, N. Y., December 12.—Pending findings of a coroner's jury as to the death of Timothy Shea, Addison farmer, District Attorney Guy W. Cheney of Corning yesterday continued an investigation of the connection of Michael Enright, eldest brother of Police Commissioner Richard Enright of New York city, with the killing.

Shea died when he was struck between the eyes with an axe.

The troopers found blood on Enright's shirt and trousers. An axe covered with blood and hair was discovered against the house.

There was a spot of blood on the front porch which tended to indicate that Shea was on the porch when he was struck on the head. There was another large splotch of blood on the ground just off the edge of the porch which is about 35 feet from the ditch where the body was found. A trail of blood led to the body from the porch.

According to Michael's story, he was in Corning on Wednesday afternoon and when he returned about 3 o'clock in the afternoon he found Shea at the house badly intoxicated. They had several drinks together and at 8 o'clock, Michael claims, he went to bed, leaving Shea in a drunken stupor on the kitchen floor. When he awoke in the morning Shea had left the house. Going to the mail box by the road he found Shea's body.

IN THE WRONG COLUMN.

It was rather unfortunate that Hon. W. H. Price, the Provincial Treasurer, should have headed his list of "extra and unavoidable expenditures" during the past year with an item of $68,000 for increased sessional indemnities.

The people of Ontario will hardly regard this item as being accurately described as "unavoidable."

Whatever may be said about other expenditures, it is surely impossible to accept the classification that has been given the increased indemnities.

It may have been necessary to provide for the other items in Mr. Price's list, but it cannot be claimed that more salary for the members of the Legislature could not have been prevented.

The majority of the electors think that this particular piece of expenditure is not justified, that there was no justification for increasing the sessional indemnities, and that under the old scale the members were amply recompensed for the time they devoted to the service of the public.

It seems to be adding insult to injury to have the Provincial Treasurer, in explaining the deficit in the present year's operations, calmly place the cost of increased indemnities in the column of unavoidable expenditures.

MAIL THEM EARLY.

The appeal of Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster General of Canada, to the people to give the postal workers a real Christmas this year by mailing their Christmas cards and parcels earlier, is one that should be heeded.

The congestion of Christmas mail during the last few days, which means a rush of extra work for the employees of the postal service, could easily be avoided, or at least materially reduced, if Mr. Murphy's advice were heeded.

Too many people hold their parcels back until the last possible moment, planning to have them arrive at their destination on Christmas Eve, and the result is a pressure of mail that taxes the facilities of the postal service to the utmost.

Many of these parcels might as well be on their way now, thus, as the Postmaster General expresses it, letting their Christmas spirit manifest itself in a practical way.

The gifts can be marked "Do not open until Christmas" if you desire, but at all events mail them early as possible.

In this matter, as in the case of Christmas shopping, a little thought and consideration for others would make this Christmas season much more enjoyable and less strenuous for many people who have learned to dread the Yuletide because of the pressure of work it means for them.

THE 4.4 FAILURE.

The full extent of the failure of Premier Ferguson's famous 4.4 beer can be realized from the financial statement just issued by the Provincial Treasurer, which shows that up to the present the beverage tax has only added $370,752 to the Treasury of Ontario, instead of the $1,900,000 a year originally estimated.

The figure, of course, is the return for only part of the year, but it includes the receipts for the summer months when the consumption of the beverage that was to please everybody would naturally be at its greatest.

As a matter of fact, the new beer was a complete failure.

Hotelkeepers who tore their premises to pieces to comply with the regulations have found that the demand for 4.4 did not justify the expenditure.

Many of them are closing or curtailing their beverage rooms, realizing that the public does not want the Ferguson brew. One reason perhaps for the cool reception of 4.4 beer after the first day or two of its sale is the fact that home-brewing has developed to such an extent that the man who wanted a drink of beer saw no reason for paying 10c for a small glass of inferior stuff.

Home manufacture of beer is being carried on in Peterboro, and doubtless all over the Province, on a scale that would be a surprise to many people if the complete statistics could be compiled and were available.

THE U.F.O. ATTITUDE.

The United Farmers of Ontario have left no doubt as to where their organisation stands in regard to the tariff question.

At their convention this week the United Farmers passed a resolution calling for an immediate and substantial reduction in the tariff, and a number of delegates went so far as to propose the expulsion of one member who in the last election had endorsed the Conservative tariff policy.

The resolution will for the time being, at least, have little effect upon the Federal situation.

There are only two Ontario Progressives in the House of Commons, and neither the tariff policy advocated by the Conservative party or that espoused by the Liberals meets the U.F.O. views in regard to substantial tariff reductions, although the latter comes much closer to it than the first.

In the next election the attitude of the U.F.O. may, however, result in a wider cleavage among the political parties in this Province, and in a much larger number of three-cornered contests than was the case in October.

With the Conservatives calling for higher protection, Liberals for a moderate tariff policy and U.F.O. for an appreciably lower tariff than at present, it is difficult to see how there can be any working agreement between any two of the three parties, if all are sincere in the statement of their views.

It is ironical, but true, Peter Smith is serving a jail sentence for having accepted a bribe, while the man charged with giving the bribe is exonerated.—Brockville Recorder.

LET'S HAVE SAFE WALKS.

Winter will soon be upon us. And it brings with it terrors to pedestrians. The maintenance of walks in safe and reasonable condition is a pressing need, not only in Kingston but in all Canadian towns, says the Kingston Whig. The civic laws are strict enough, but the non-enforcement is the thing that irritates. It would be a wise procedure for the chief of police—to whom authority is given to enforce the law—to have the code examined, its salient points freshly printed and then enforced. Walks in the past have been permitted to be a danger and a menace, and the owners allowed to get away with non-performance of their duties as property owners and citizens. Early last week the walks were in a very unsafe condition and days passed before they were sanded, and then only a few of the walks were so made safe to walk upon.

At Utica, N. Y., the same disregard of attention to walks is spoken of, and the Observer insists that many people who would not deliberately set out to injure someone, or cause loss and damage to a neighbor, by permitting their walks to remain in a dangerous condition, become responsible for the harm, injury and loss to a neighbor or to some one who is passing along the street.

Then it goes on to say, as we have already mentioned, that there is sufficient legislation to compel the occupants of premises, or the owners or agents of vacant property, to keep the sidewalks clear from snow and in safe condition. That there is so much carelessness and neglect is wholly due to inattention on the part of a police force. Officers will plough through snow banks, climb over ridges, wade in slush to the tops of their overshoes and scramble over ice to their own peril, before they will give notice to guilty offenders and make reports to their superiors. The heads of departments are negligent in their failure to make it a requirement that the patrolmen clean up the walks in the territory which they are expected to cover.

PARTY FUSION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Dissolution of parliaments, followed by general elections, has become almost an imperial habit of late. In three of the five self-governing Dominions there has been a shaking up of political parties within the past few weeks; and, if signs are not misleading, a similar process may be witnessed soon in a fourth. From South Africa comes news of political developments which are exciting nation-wide attention, and which, at no distant date, may precipitate an appeal to the electors, with results that should be interesting.

Before the advent of the present Government, headed by Hertzog, there were four parties or groups in the Union—the South African party led by Smuts, the Unionists, who supported that brilliant statesman and soldier; the Nationalists, who followed the present Premier, and the Labor party under Creswell. At the last general election held about a year ago, the Nationalists and the Labor group joined forces and won a notable victory over the allied South Africans and Unionists, Hertzog forming a coalition government with Creswell as one of his chief lieutenants.

The Process of amalgamation has been so complete that, essentially, there are today only two parties in the state—one the Nationalist or Government party; the other, the South African or opposition party; and now the feeling is finding expression throughout the country that these should unite. The movement in favor of fusion seems to have had its origin in the suggestion of General Smuts that, since there was no essential difference in policy between the two parties, they should join hands and work together to promote the welfare of the Union and safeguard its interests as an integral part of the Empire.

That there are difficulties in the way of attaining the unity desired has already been made apparent. Premier Hertzog does not agree that the differences between the parties are so slight as to admit of a successful rapprochement; and, while acknowledging the growth of a more conciliatory spirit, he claims that the principles and point of view, particularly of the Unionist or ultra British section of the opposition, are still far apart from those of his own following. But he has intimated that, if General Smuts is convinced that nothing stands in the way of union, the door is wide open for the former Premier and his party to join the Nationalists, which rather suggests that if the lion and the lamb are to lie down together, the lamb must be inside.

That is a condition which, naturally, does not commend itself to the South Africans, who, while advocating union, insist that it shall be effected on a basis acceptable to both parties. Certainly no terms would be acceptable, least of all to the Unionist wing, which failed to ensure the maintenance of the imperial tie. On that score, the Prime Minister is no longer suspect. He has declared that secession would be a national calamity, and, since his accession to power, has succeeded in convincing even his bitterest opponents of his loyalty to the Union. But there is still some doubt as to the attitude of a section of his followers, and even of certain of his Ministers; and that is a complication which may forbid the banns.

Whatever may be the outcome of the present advances, they signify a notable change in the relations of the parties in South Africa. If not yet destroyed, the old bogey of secession is evidently badly scotched, and the racial bitterness that formerly prevailed has given place to a spirit of conciliation which cannot fail to have a beneficial influence. And, incidentally, the proposed union furnishes another illustration of the general trend towards the elimination of superfluous groups or parties.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

If you want the Fire Department in your home for Christmas decorate the tree with lighted candles.

It is giving the Ontario Government plenty of exercise to keep up with the newspaper rumours about its attitude toward the temperance question.

Hon. Manning Doherty warned the U.F.O. that business and politics would not mix. To give the Farmers' Government full credit, it gave no signs of trying to mix business principles with its politics.

Next week is the last full week before Christmas. If your gift buying is not yet completed do it early in the week—and shop in the morning if you can.

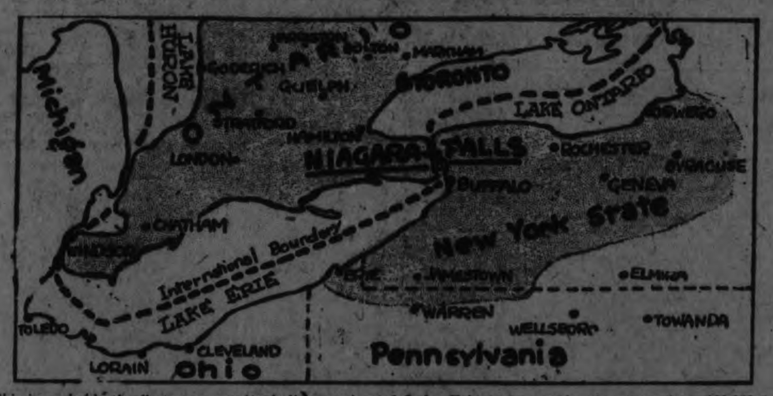
LIGHT AND POWER FROM FALLS



This is probably the first map ever made on which has been indicated the districts in Ontario and in New York State and Pennsylvania served by hydro-elecric energy developed from the Niagara River. The areas, including section of Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, have a combined length of 400 miles and a breadth of 150 miles, and are four times as large as Belgium. The population served reaches nearly four millions. At Niagara Falls, N.Y., plants capable of generating 100,000 h.p. are idle because more water may not be taken under the international treaty. Part of the older plants owned by the Hydro are also idle for the same reason. An effort is impending to have the treaty amended.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 11.—For export this week upwards of 800 head were secured on this market. Export steers sold from $7.50 to $9.15; export heifers $7 to $7.50; cows $5 to $6, and bulls $4.75 to $6.25 a cwt. Fully as many of these cattle will be wanted next week. Choice butchers' cattle were firm and baby beeves contracted for at the Winter Fair were weighed up at from $13 to $17.25 a cwt. Unfinished babies had a poor market at $8 to $8.50 a cwt. Choice handyweight butchers were $7.50 to $8 a cwt.

Any below good handyweight butchers were too plentiful because of arrivals from the west, and medium heifers were difficult to sell at a drop of 25 cents a cwt. With the exception of canners, cows were generally steady and good ones brought up to $5 a cwt. Canners are down 25 cents a cwt. Stockers and feeders cleaned up better than the dealers expected early in the week and prices kept steady. This trade will now fall off. The dealers in milchers and springers report trade brisk at firm prices for the good to choice kind.

The calf market has been high all week and one car only was picked up for Buffalo. Fancy calves have sold at 14 to 15 1-2 cents; good calves 12 to 13 cents and mediums 9 to 11 cents. Heavy western calves brought 5 to 6 cents a pound.

Lambs have strengthened half a dollar a cwt. and choice light ewes and wethers are selling at 15 1-2 cents a pound. Fancy lambs touched 17 1-2 cents and heavier lambs are 14 to 14 1-2 cents. No really choice sheep were marketed during the week.

Hogs have had a firm market and the closing price this week is $12 a cwt f.o.b. Nobody seems to expect that the price will weaken on week-end shipments.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—The tone of the market for all lines of millfeed was firm under a steady demand. A reduction of 1-2c per bushel was made in all grades of oats. The demand was limited and the volume of business small.

Beans were steady at $2.40 per bushel.

There was no actual change in the condition of the local egg situation, prices for all grades being maintained with a fair amount of business passing, there being a steady demand for supplies. The receipts were 238 cases, as compared with 1,098 for the same day last week, and 145 for the corresponding day a year ago.

Butter Market Weaker.

The receipts of butter were 122 packages, as compared with 402 for the same day last week, and 713 for the corresponding day a year ago. The feature of the trade was the weaker feeling that developed in the market and prices were reduced 1c to 1 1-2c per lb., which was attributed to the pressure of some holders to liquidation on account of the recent arrival of Canadian butter from England and the reports that 10,000 to 15,000 packages of Australian and New Zealand butter will here later on in the season. The trade was rather quiet. There is practically no ordinary No. 1 or No. 2 creamery on the market.

EGGS AND POULTRY

OTTAWA, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Canadian storage holdings December 1st, 1925, were 21,746,443 dozens as compared with a 5-year average on that date of 4,559,258 dozens. The turkey market in both Toronto and Montreal is firmer today. Brisk trading is reported from Calgary and at Edmonton, a 3 cent advance in turkey prices has taken place.

Toronto—Fresh specials 80, extras 75, firsts 43, seconds 36. Turkeys firmer with offers from the west higher, No. 1, weighing 10 pounds and up are quoted at 35 to 36, and seconds 30 to 32 f.o.b. Retailers here are quoting 45.

Montreal—Eggs unchanged. Poultry market stronger and turkey prices advanced 2c, with best grades now selling 36 to 38, lighter stock at 33 to 35.

American Poultry Markets.

Boston—Fancy young toms, 48 to 50; hens, 42 to 44; old turkeys, 36 to 38. 4 pound chickens, 32 to 33. 5 pound, 36 to 37; 4 pound fowl, 31 to 32; 5 pound fowl, 33 to 34. Market active and firm.

New York—Dressed turkeys firmer but quiet; toms 44 to 50, hens 43 to 45.

STERLING RATES

Sterling demand $4.84 7-8.
Sterling cables $4.85 1-4.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices underwent a sharp break today as a result of big selling orders which came into the market near the end of the board of trade session, and disclosed a pause in demand. Much of the selling was for houses with Eastern connections and had the effect of bringing into play numerous orders to stop losses at various fixed limits. Wheat closed heavy, 2 1-4 to 3 3-4 cents net lower, new style, December 1.69 and May 164 1-4 to 164 1-2; with corn 1-4 to 1-2c off; oats 1-2 to 7-8c down, and provisions virtually unchanged.

Throughout the day, wheat fluctuated rapidly and had an extreme range of 5 1-2 cents. Argentine advices told of clearing weather, and Liverpool reported offers increasing from Argentina and from Australia as well.

In the end, December delivery of wheat was the weakest month of any. One reason given for this was that No. 2 Red Winter wheat here available for immediate use was bringing only 5 cents over the December price. Meanwhile, speculative buying power for all deliveries appeared to be waning rapidly, and the market received a quick tumble when just before the close a sudden expansion of selling took place. About 750,000 bushels of Canadian wheat was estimated to have been purchased today for shipments to Europe.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY CHRISTMAS MEETING

Decide To Hold Special Prayer Services For Missionaries.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 12. — The Women's Missionary Auxiliary of the United Church held its Christmas meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Percy Stinson, with over 30 members in attendance.

During the business period, which was in charge of the president, Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard, a report was received from the Strangers' Secretary, Mrs. G. W. Sayles, showing a number of newcomers to the village and vicinity visited, some of whom were at the meeting and the majority of whom have promised to join the Auxiliary.

Mrs. W. E. Ball was appointed literature secretary, the new missionary, which combines under one cover the former W.M.S. publications of the three uniting churches, and for which subscriptions are now due, being out under her charge.

An interesting account of the work of Miss Viola Cardwell, missionary to Korea was given by Miss Nellie Finnimore, who also read a personal letter from Miss Cardwell. On motion it was decided to take Miss Cardwell as a subject for special prayer by the Auxiliary, each organization being asked to devote time to individual, daily intercession for one particular worker and her field. Miss Cardwell went out as a missionary of the former Presbyterian Church, but has now come into the Union.

Group D, Mrs. T. H. Aiken, convenor, then took charge of the meeting and the second chapter in the study book, "Building With India," was taken up, the chairman reading a short leaflet, Miss Nellie Hetherington covering, in a most interesting manner, the chapter "India's Handicaps to Progress." Child marriage, unhygenic surroundings, poor and insufficient food, disease, the Purdah system for women, backward material development, religious superstition and ignorance, greedy landlords, the bad habit of hoarding wealth, were a few of the points elaborated upon.

Mrs. Stinson led in the closing prayer which had special reference to the needs of India.

The hostess, assisted by Group D, served refreshments, at the tea hour, when an enjoyable social time was spent, and the leaders of the various met with the President and had a brief business session.

Mrs. J. McKnight and Mrs. F. W. Smith moved and seconded the vote of thanks to Mrs. Stinson, and the members of the croun, for the hospitality enjoyed.

The annual offering for the test fund was taken up and amounted to about ten dollars.

A THOUGHT.

A ONE-WAY STREET.

So many, on life's broad highway,
Do we encounter—grave and gay,
Happy and smiling, serious, sad,
Demure and forward, good and bad,
Loyal and false, refined, uncouth,
Winsome and ugly—ah! in truth,
A curious and a motley throng
Do we find, all the way along.
Some pass us by; so swift their pace,
We'll ne'er o'ertake them in the race,
We pass by others in our flight,
A glance, and they fade from our sight;
And some keep step with us awhile,
Give love for love, and smile for smile,
Oh, many, on life's broad highway,
We talk with, pass the time of day,
But no returning traveler e'er
Shall call a greeting we may hear,
No pilgrim shall we ever meet,
Because life is a one-way street.

MR. JOLICOEUR TELLS HIS EXPERIENCE

Strongly Recommends "Fruit-a-tives" For Kidney Trouble

MR. JOLICOEUR

For years, Mr. Jolicoeur suffered with kidney trouble, headaches, backache, and the heavy, miserable feeling which usually accompanies any weakness or irritation in the kidneys. He tried "Fruit-a-tives" and, in telling the result, his letter says, "After having followed the "Fruit-a-tives" treatment, I have gained thirty-three pounds and I have been well ever since. I am pleased to recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to all those who suffer from Kidney Disease." J. M. Jolicoeur, 318 2nd Ave., Quebec.

"Fruit-a-tives" is one of the wonder discoveries of modern medicine. Made from fresh, ripe oranges, apples, figs and prunes, it acts directly on the kidneys as well as on the liver, bowels and skin. It can be depended upon to relieve kidney trouble and pain in the back. Sold everywhere, 25c. and 50c. a box.

WOODSTOCK PARKS BOARD TO SUPPORT SUPERINTENDENT IN $500 DAMAGE SUIT

Providing City Solicitor Recommends It — Judge Criticized For Unwarranted Remarks of Park Conditions.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 12. (Canadian Press). — Believing that Superintendent Dent of Southside Park was only doing his duty and carrying out instructions when he laid a charge against Charles Burston, of interfering while he was arresting another man for creating a disturbance in the park, the Woodstock Parks Board will defend on his behalf an action brought against Dent for $500 damages by Burston, providing the city solicitor decides that the board can legally do so.

This was decided at a stormy meeting of the board which went into the late hours of Thursday night and at which Judge Wallace was strongly criticized by some members of the Board for the manner in which he dismissed the criminal charge which had been laid against Burston.

At the time of the trial Judge Wallace said he was surprised at the way things were done at Southside Park, and Dr Reval, who is chairman of the park, said that the Judge had no right to make that remark, as he was absolutely ignorant of conditions there. The members of the Board were unanimous in saying that it was their duty to back up the park superintendent and help him in fighting the damage action as much as they legally could.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press).—Settlement was reached Friday in the matter of damages and costs arising out of the suit for libel brought against J. S. Cowper, editor, by Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Baker, in which the latter were awarded $2,000 damages in connection with an article in a weekly paper dealing with the death of Janet Smith, Scottish nurse maid, in their home on July 26, 1924.

Pending handing over by Cowper to counsel for the Bakers of security for "taxed costs" of the suit, action which they instituted to set aside the transfer of his house to his wife's name "as delaying and defrauding creditors," is held in abeyance. When the security is received this action will be dropped.

HEALTH BROKE DOWN.

Could Not Get Sleep For Hours After Going to Bed.

"It is not natural for me to sit down and write a letter of praise of a proprietary medicine as I had always been skeptical as to their virtues." Thus writes Mr. Arthur Sequin, Storthoaks, Sask., who further says:—"But three years ago I opened a general store here in Storthoaks and placed on my shelves a few lines of the best known proprietary medicines. Among these, naturally, were Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. As there were three of my customers who were obtaining good results from taking the pills, and I was in need of a medicine I decided to try them myself.

"I had been suffering from catarrh for years, and my inside work had completely broken down my health. I was coughing all day, suffered from indigestion, and could not sleep until three or four hours after retiring. I started the pills, not with any great confidence, but by the time I had finished the second box I marked much improvement. At the fourth box I felt quite recovered, but continued them for some further time. My cough has left me, the indigestion has disappeared and I now fall asleep almost as soon as I am in bed. In my store now I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to any who are feeling run-down or without energy, as I think they are a blessing to mankind."

If others who may feel skeptical will give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial they will be convinced as was Mr. Seguin. You can get the pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RICH OIL FIELDS OF MOSUL CAUSE LEAGUE DISPUTE

No Announcement of Friday's Negotiations For Mediation at Geneva.

TURKS REMAIN.

League May Assume Direct Control of the Mosul Region.

GENEVA, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press)—Mystery enshrouds the status of the Mosul dispute, nothing definite having come out of efforts to effect mediation, which continued in the league of nations council quarters throughout Friday.

Fethi Bey, who handled the Mosul affair for Turkey when the League Council, meeting at Brussels, fixed the provisional frontier of Mosul, appeared before the Mosul committee of the council to answer questions, as did the British dominion secretary, L. C. Amery.

Out of the many rumors concerning the disposition of the Mosul region, the one which stands out is a suggestion to put Mosul under direct control of the league of nations, without according the mandate to Great Britain, giving the territory a certain form of autonomy. There is a growing impression also that the council may succeed in at least re-opening direct negotiations between Turkey and Great Britain.

GWVA OFFICERS RESIGN IN BODY REQUIRE FUNDS

Adjustment Service Bureau Will Be Curtailed Unless Help Received.

SURVEY AFFAIRS.

Preliminary To Entry Into Proposed Legion, Gen. Turner Says.

OTTAWA, Dec. 12. (Canadian Press).—The resignation of C. G. MacNeil, Dominion secretary-treasurer of the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada, and of the entire staff of the Dominion Command Offices in Ottawa, has been announced. Sir Richard Turner, V.C., Dominion president, stated on Friday that the resignations were offered and have been accepted as preliminary to an effort to adjust the association's affairs in anticipation of its entry into the new united organization of war veterans in Canada.

Provision is being made to continue the more important administrative functions of the Dominion Command Offices but, according to Sir Richard, unless additional revenue is forthcoming this month, its major activity, the work of the veterans' adjustment service bureau, necessarily will be greatly curtailed. This course was decided upon by General Turner after consultation with members of the Dominion Executive, and following a complete survey of the affairs of the association this week. It was the hope of the G.W.V.A. president that the adjustment service bureau might be maintained so that it could be turned over to the new organization as an operating entity. This could yet be done, he asserts, if branches of the association and individuals subscribe sufficient funds for current liabilities and maintenance for at least three months.

According to General Turner, the curtailment of the adjustment service will be felt by disabled veterans and dependents in all parts of the Dominion. Several thousand individual claims for disability and dependents' pensions, treatment orthopaedic appliances, hospital pay and allowances, insurance, appeals, medals, civil service preference and related matters are now in process of adjustment. New cases have developed during 1925 at an average rate of 65 weekly. The more difficult cases are now being brought forward.

BIG OVERDRAFT BANK OF FRANCE

French Treasury is Overdrawn by 26 Billion Francs.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—The biggest overdraft in the world is carried the Bank of France—something like 26 billion Francs against the French treasury.

The existence of an organization able to do this kind of financing is due to the foresight of Napoleon. When he founded the Bank in 1800 he gave it the exclusive privilege of issuing paper money, with the proviso that the French treasury be permitted to draw upon the institution up to the amount of 140 million Francs.

The arrangement proved to be a most convenient and flexible means of tiding over hard passages in the financial history of the country. The amount of the advances—or overdraft, allowed to the government was increased on the renewal of the banks money issuing privilege until, after the war, it approached the enormous sum of a score of billions.

Difficulties of restoration, disappointments on the question of reparations and the disinclination of political parties to take the responsibility of asking the French taxpayer to foot the war bill, swelled it further to 26 billions.

YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE GREAT CONFERENCE

Number of Divines Present at Inspirational Services in Pontypool.

PONTYPOOL, December 11. — One of the Echo Conferences in Cobourg Presbytery in connection with Young Peoples' Societies, was held in Pontypool, on Tuesday, Dec. 8th. The afternoon session was fairly well attended considering the roads and the weather conditions. An address on Devotional and Christian Fellowship entitled "Our Special Task of Winning Others for Christ," was given by Rev. R. M. Patties of Janetville, in a very capable manner which was followed by a discussion by Rev A. Poulter of Bethany on "Reactions and Activities, their value as Training and Achievement." The round Table conference was conducted by Rev. J. E. Griffith of Blackstock.

The recreation problem was brought up and several spirited arguments took place resulting in valuable suggestions given by Rev. A. Wilkinson, Rev. Poulter, Rev. Wallace and others. Several songs were sung, Miss Mildred Delahey being organist.

The afternoon session was brought to a close at 5.00 p.m. when the Ladies' Aid assisted by the local Y.P.U. supplied a sumptuous repast to all present. The evening session was opened at 7.00 p.m with the president C. D Daniels, Campbellford, in the chair.

The choir was composed of members of the U.P.U. Miss Maretta Marien, 1st Vice-President of the League took charge of the meeting. Rev. C. D. Daniel conducted a rousing sing song service for the commencement exercises, and Rev. P. W. Patterson took charge of the devotional period. The choir sang its Epworth League Hymn "Ye Hosts of Christians, Young and Strong."

Mrs. Parker and company entertained the congregation to a couple of darky Jubilee songs. Mrs. Parker is a daughter of Rev. R. A. Bell, superannuated minister of the B.M.E. church and who is now residing in this locality. An address, "Citizenship — Making Canada Christian," was given by Rev. T. Wallace of the Newtonville circuit.

Rev. J. Walker, a returned missionary, gave a lengthy but very interesting talk on his work in China.

The meeting closed at 10 p.m. and everyone went home well satisfied with the conference.

Never Let a Cold Get a Start

Vapors Check a Cold Overnight

There are many ways to treat a cold but only one DIRECT way—with vapors that can be inhaled.

Vapors penetrate immediately into every corner of the air passages and lungs, soothing and healing with every breath.

Vicks is so remarkably successful in treating cold troubles because it acts like a "vapor lamp in salve form."

When rubbed over throat and chest the body heat releases vapors of Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme and Turpentine. At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin, like a poultice or plaster.

This double, direct action often checks the worst cold overnight.

BIBLE SOCIETY MET IN MARMORA

Rev. S. G. Pinnock Gave Addresses on Work in Africa.

MARMORA, Dec. 12—There was a large attendance at the United Church on Wednesday evening on the occasion of the annual meeting of the local auxiliary of the Upper Canada Bible Society. The chair was taken by the secretary, Mr. F. S. Pearce, in the unavoidable absence of the President, Mr. G. B. Airhart.

The meeting commenced with the hymn "How Firm a Foundation" which was followed by the reading of the 19th Psalm by Mr. W. J. Cottrell. Mr. Brock Leonard rendered a very appropriate solo. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mr. G. B. Airhart; Secretary, Mr. F. S. Pearce; Treasurer, Mr. W. J. Cottrell. The latter succeeds Mrs. H. M. Jones who for many years prior to her removal discharged the office most faithfully.

The address of the evening was delivered by the Rev. S. G. Pinnock, secretary of the Society at headquarters in Toronto. The reverend gentleman spent thirty-five years of his life as a missionary in Nigeria. In an address which gripped the attention of all present, Rev. Pinnock described the snake worshippers of Africa, the devil-houses and other forms of heathen degradation. The natives of Nigeria thought of 401 idols. They counted as far as 400 and the extra one represented all the many others. The speaker also pointed out that there was no devil worship but devil homage instead since the devil, having no character, could not be worshipped. He mentioned further that for a period he resided in a city of 150,000 people, where for two years he was the only white man and therefore the constant object of native curiosity. He gave a graphic description of the freeing of twenty-five slaves, but he was thankful to say there were no open slave markets in Africa today. Through the Congregational Church joining the United Church, the speaker pointed out how African missions were brought into closer touch with Canadian support. His concluding remarks lent colour to the work of translating the Scriptures into African languages, undertaken principally by the Bible Society. Notable among recent translations has been that of St. Mark's Gosel by Miss Mary Mozley. Miss Mozley lived but a short while after the completion of her work. As a memorial, her mother has paid for a large number of copies of the translated gospel to be sent out. At the present time they are being borne over the sea to their destination. A collection was taken at the close after which "From Greenland's Icy Mountains" was sung and the benediction pronounced.

OFFICERS CHOSEN BY UNITED CHURCH

Elders, Stewards and Other Officials Elected at Meeting.

ROSENEATH, Dec. 12. — The heavy snowstorm which fell on Tuesday afternoon and evening and also the drop in temperature accounted for the rather small percentage of the congregations at the meeting held for the purpose of electing new officers for the united congregation.

Rev. T. McCord, who has been the Presbyterian pastor, was unable to be present, so that Rev. J. N. Lovelace acted as chairman of the meeting, which opened with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which a short lesson was read from the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. Mr. M. Davey was asked to act as secretary of the meeting.

The members of the session or elders, were appointed, three from each congregation, the term of office being for life. They are Messrs. Robt. Mouncey, David Gray, Robt. Campbell, Geo. Ingham, S. A. Tucker and Wm. Roberts.

The date of the inaugural service was left with the two ministers to decide at their convenience.

The stewards were chosen in the same manner, that is, three from each congregation, namely, Messrs. A. J. Campbell, Andrew Brown and Archie Mouncey from the Presbyterians and Messrs. M. Daney, Wm. Arnold, and C. W. Varcoe from the Methodists. Mr. Andrew Brown was the convenor of the stewards by appointment of the congregation.

The auditors were chosen one from each congregation, Mrs. A. J. Campbell and Mrs. C. W. Varcoe.

The ushers who were appointed were Messrs. Jas. A. Brown, Delbert Varcoe, J. Nichol, and John Baxter.

Mrs. J. Baxter was appointed convenor of the flower committee, with the power to ask the assistance of any she wished.

It was decided on motion to use the envelope system of raising funds and also to try to choose the hymns common to both hymn books until such time as a new one is printed.

The meeting closed with the Doxology and Benediction, after which a social hour was spent, while refreshments were served.

Miss Ethel Parker was operated on at the General Hospital, Cobourg on Tuesday.

Mr. Gordon Parker's little son was brought hom from the hospital much improved.

KNOX CLASSES HOLD BANQUET

Presentation Made to Teachers By Members of A.S.K. and Volunteer Classes.

HAPPY OCCASION.

Knox church was the scene of a happy gathering last night on the occasion of the annual banquet and election of officers for the ensuing year of the A.S.K. and the Volunteer Bible Class. The banquet, which was served in the basement by the social committee of the Volunteer class was a decided success, and it was evident that no pains had been spared by the young ladies concerned to make it so, judging from the loaded tables that greeted the eye upon entering the hall.

After the inner wants of those present had been served, speches were order of the day. A pleasing feature of the banquet was the presence of Mr. Ide, a member of the A.S.K. class in the days before the war. Harvey Henry and D. V. Canning, two former presidents of the class were also present. During the proceedings Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie, the teachers of the two classes, were presented with a set of military brushes and a bag and scarf, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie have served the two classes as teachers for a period of thirteen consecutive years and it was a fitting tribute to their labors that so many should be present. Knox church has always been famous for the interest the young people take in the affairs of the church and this interest is due in no small way to the efforts of these two beloved and untiring teachers.

A.S.K. Class — Hon. President, Andrew McKenzie; President, J. Rev. M. C. Mackinnon; Teacher, Howard Hall; Vice-President, George Wallace; Treasurer, Allan White; Secretary, Hugh Morton; Social Convenor, Ian McCrea.

Volunteer Bible Class—Teacher, Andrew McKenzie; President, Lena Johnston; Vice-President, Zita Johnston; Treasurer, Marion Hill; Secretary, Lily Shearer; Missionary Secretary, Lillian Holyman; Missionary Treasurer, Margaret Shearer; Social Convenor, Dorothy Gillespie.

ACCESSORIES.

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 (United Press).—What is more aluring to a woman than the novelty departments of our stores. If the truth were known these departments make more sales during a day than the costume and millinery departments combined. Each year new little vanities are displayed without which we feel that we can not exist. Ofter it's just a simple little corsage or a uniquely concealed lipstick that causes us to turn over our last dollar bill in exchange for the bauble.

Among the little brilliant pins designed for millinery and brooch purposes are tiny animals and birds of brilliants mounted on pins which screw together. Two wee elephants that can be worn as a scarf pin or hat ornament for instance, are among them.

Also one finds wee buckles of brilliants which are so small as to look like chipped diamonds and these are to be worn on a black ribbon about the wrist. One can buy these ribbon wristlets with clasp attachments and select one's own buckle or medallion.

For the bobbed head, there are small combs which are to be worn at the side of the head to hold the locks out from the face. Some of these are shaped like bowknots in vivid colors and while these are inexpensive they are extremely pretty for evening wear.

The long cord with a tassel of brilliant vari-colored threads which conceals a lip-stick and which can be worn about the neck as a costume necklace is another new novelty. Carved parrot heads with fluffy tail feathers of burnt ostrich are also mounted on cords for the same purpose These, being larger, are tied about the handle of the umbrella acting as a handle strap and an ornament and utility.

Also new are large buttons of beautiful colors which have tops which unscrew and which are fitted with either rouge or powder. One can use two of these ornate buttons on a frock or wrap and have one's make-up ever handy.

The Hungarian Christmas begins on Christmas Eve and lasts two days, all places of business being closed on both Dec. 25 and 26.

DAUGHTER NEEDN'T SEW--AND ANYHOW MOTHER DOESN'T KNOW HOW TO TEACH

Picture of Woman at Sewing Machine is Not Nearly so Attractive as That of Grandmother at Her Spinning Wheel—Girls Have Own Way.

IMPORTANT THOUGHT FOR SWAIN

(By Jeannette.)

"Curlylocks, Curlylocks, will you be mine? You shall neither wash the dishes nor yet feed the swine. But sit on a cushion and sew a fine seam, and feed upon strawberries, sugar and cream."

That was the promise of the old-time lover. His lady was to enjoy a luxurious existence that had in it a good deal of sitting upon a cushion, while sewing a fine seam. A modern lover would know better than to predict such a life for the object of his desire.

"Are girls forgetting how to sew?" is the query of one of those information-seeking gentlemen who see in the trend of modern times a laxity that he thinks may have its source in a weaning-away from old-time manners and methods. He wouldn't like to go back himself, possibly, to the days when men hewed logs from the wilderness and fashioned them into rude houses, but he thinks there never was anything better for the woman than the age when she spun the wool for the family garments.

"When Adam delved and Eve span, who then was the gentleman?" But modern girls, according to those who should know, although they may not concentrate as much attention on sewing as their great-grandmothers did, are far from being inexpert needlewomen. When they set their minds to it, they can turn out some very clever examples of handicraft in this line. Perhaps sewing is not as universal as at one time, nor considered quite as necessary to the gentlewoman's education. Time was when every woman must learn to sew. She might be like the girl who shed tears over dropped stitches in her knitted stocking or invariably turned the sleeves in her dolls' dresses wrong side foremost, but she had to sew, nevertheless. So many hours a day must be spent on seams and gathers and embroideries. Nowadays, they don't handle children in the same manner. If the little girl doesn't like sewing, she doesn't have to learn how. Individuality is recognized to a much greater extent, and, rightly or wrongly, is making a different type of generation.

It's Easier Now.

The ones who do want to sew and like it have boundless opportunities and many contrivances, such as easily-patterned gowns and various sewing-machine attachments, things their forbears never thought of. And these are the ones who turn out clothes in a jiffy, the ones who go home of a night and run up a party frock or a new blouse with no apparent difficulty. They do not necessarily have to be of the calibre of the young thing who lacked a dancing dress and seized inspiration and opportunity in the form of the parlor curtains, which were pinned together for the event and restored to their former function the next day. But they are the type who see a dress and go home and copy it, or buy a pattern and work in out to a larger or smaller size, or try their hand at pretty nearly anything in the dress line, like the local young lady who has made many a lovely suit and dress for herself, and has been known to negotiate successfully even such a difficult assignment as a heavy winter coat for her mother.

Most girls do fancy work. Their hope chests call for a varied assortment of pieces for future homes and they start in at an early age to get them ready. But not everyone can make a dress or even a blouse and have it look like a garment and not a few yards of cloth slung together after a mysterious tussle with thread that shows at the seams and uneven hem lines.

Of Interest To Men.

The rule of thumb that works infallibly with many women comes in handy in most cases, and some women simply won't be bothered with a pattern. They do everything by a sort of instinct that is half mental and half in the ends of their fingers, and they do it well. Then, others baste and trim and measure and perspire over the simplest bit of sewing. It is a faculty, like everything else and if a woman does not like to sew, it will make her nervous to attempt it. For her the solution is the ready-to-wear garment, although in this way she forgoes much pleasure in wearing her own handiwork, a certain amount of individuality is sacrificed in wearing garments that have been turned out possibly by the hundreds, and the expense is certainly greater. The woman who can sew saves a great deal, and her expertness in this regard should be as much a matter of concern to her masculine admirers as her talent along the cooking line.

There is one element about the sewing game that has a modern aspect. That is the fact that mothers do not teach their daughters to sew as they did in other generations. Again individuality enters into the question. If a girl wants to sew, she will not wait for her mother to teach her. She will naturally gravitate to the needle and thread and if her mother doesn't know how to train her, some other older woman will. And if she doesn't like sewing, she will never be a good seamstress anyway, and the result of her efforts will only mean added expense. We know of a young lady whose father held the firm idea that to bake a loaf of bread and knit a sock were prime requisites in the training of any woman. In her youthful days, she salted with many a tear countless pans of soft dough and bedewed with the same briny drops the terribly-turned heels of woollen socks that could never be worn by human foot, although long hours were spent in their remarkable manufacture. The result is that to-day she knows nothing of break-making or of sewing, because she never liked either of them. She buys her clothes ready made and turns her attention to doing things that she likes and wants to do.

It is only another sign of the times, these modern times when specializing and individualizing is the watchword, as contrasted with the days when men and women were molded to a pattern.

The Secrets Of Charm

By Lucrezia Bori

The woman who starts out to attain the firm contour of beauty through physical training finds it a reassuring fact that Nature is always ready to assist the person who shows an inclination to obey her rules.

In other words, the woman who will exercise for health and beauty can be assured that Nature will meet and assist her in her endeavors. She cannot exercise and be unrewarded, for we are always given a reward for exercising. It comes to us in the results of our quickened circulation and our more active interest in everything going on about us.

Raise Your Head Forward and Your Right Knee Up.

Creams and lotions say help our beauty, but they can never substitute for the fundamental thing. They may even gloss over the defects for a time, but they cannot do this for long. Unless our apparent youthfulness and health are built on firm foundations, we cannot expect to keep the hold on them that we should.

Another thing, we cannot neglect to live by the rules of Nature for years, and then suddenly have a change of heart and plunge into active observance of her rules, and be rewarded immediately. We can, assuredly, see our reward coming, for most of us feel better immediately upon exercising—but we must keep it up.

Regular exercise is not, like virtue, its own reward. Many women honestly do not get much pleasure out of regulated indoor exercise, or outdoor exercise either. But they do derive a lasting pleasure from the results of this exercise, and this is its reward. Sparkling eyes and bright cheeks give any woman pleasure, and these come from exercise.

I am going to give you below an excellent exercise to keep your body fit.

Lie flat on your back on the floor. See that you are clad in things that will not restrict your movements. A simple bathing-suit is good. Let your feet be straight out in front of you and have your hands clasped behind your head.

Count one, and raise your head forward and your right knee up against your body.

Holding this count, return your head and knee to starting position, and take a deep inhalation of breath.

At the count of two, raise your head and left knee, exhaling as you replace them. Repeat ten times, and keep it up daily.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorneliffe

SHE DESCRIBES A STRIKING DANCE FROCK.

Madame has been specialising on evening gowns lately.

"As soon as the Winter season gets really in swing, I hardly have time to think of day apparel," Madame remarked to-day.

"It seems to me the clients sleep during the day and wake up to action in the evenings," I answered.

"They do concentrate on what the younger clients call 'fighting clothes'," Madame agreed.

"Any slim young thing should be able to conduct a successful campaign in such a fetching frock as this," I remarked, signifying a dance frock that was being modeled at the moment.

The model who wore it was slim, with sleek black hair. The dress was a succession of soft ripples in flame color, and that was all. The effect was perfect.

"I do consider that creation a decided success," Madame admitted.

The material was crepe Roma, a material which I think is delightful in any simply made dance frock. Its flat smooth surface lends itself perfectly to soft folds and graceful ripples.

A very deep V made a graceful neckline at the back, while the front was also V, slightly less deep.

The skirt was of two circular tiers, and there was a crushed ash of matching material about the waistline.

Just then an enthusiastic young client came up to Madame and asked if she might have the aforementioned frock in several colors.

Madame was delighted, for she thinks the plan of ordering a becoming dress or hat in varied colors is a very good one.

They set to work to pick out the colors. Madame sent an errand girl up to the sample room to bring samples of the crepe Roma.

The girl came back with samples. These were half-yard samples, as Madame has a theory that you can't really tell about a piece of material unless you see a piece bigger than a mere two inches square. She always had big samples, unless the material is imported and very dear, then she lets the client see the entire piece.

This Flame-Colored Crepe Gown Exploits the Circular Mode in Flounces and Skirt.

WARDEN J. L. M'CAMUS PRESENTED WITH GOLD WATCH BY COUNCIL OF NORTHUMBERLAND ON FRIDAY

Personal Incident Was Feature of Final Session—Watch and Chain.

WARDEN'S THANKS.

Report of House of Refuge Committee—Management Praised.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, Dec. 12.—The Counties' Council held its final session of the year Friday morning, the close being marked by an expression in tangible form of the good spirit that has prevailed and the harmonious relations that have existed among the members throughout the year. Warden James L. McCamus, the courteous official who has presided since the beginning of the term with so much dignity and fairness, was presented by his fellow-members with a handsome white gold watch and chain.

When the last item of routine business, the adoption of the report of the finance committee submitted by Reeve Holman of Clarke, the chairman had been disposed of, Deputy-Reeve Wilson of Hope, moved the Council into committee of the whole with Reeve Elliott of Bowmanville in the chair. The latter was a candidate for the wardenship in opposition to Reeve McCamus last January, losing out by one vote.

Presented With Watch.

Addressing the Warden, Reeve Elliott said that the members of the Council felt they could not let the occasion pass without showing their appreciation of the uniform courtesy of their presiding officer and of the efforts he has made to advance the interests of the United Counties not only while he occupied the Warden's chair but during his long term of service as a private member. On behalf of his colleagues, Reeve Elliott asked Warden McCamus to accept a watch and chain with the best wishes of the donors for his future welfare.

The Warden's Reply.

Warden McCamus in a neat reply thanked the members for their kindness and co-operation during the year. He had enjoyed every term of his membership in the Council but the year 1925 had been the best of all. He appreciated the gift, both for its intrinsic value and as an expression of good-will. He promised to be back in January to meet as many of the present members as may be returned, either as a private citizen or in an official capacity.

Warden McCamus congratulated the United Counties on the efficiency and fidelity of their officials, making special mention of County Superintendent Greer, Superintendent McMillan of the House of Refuge and Col. N. F. MacNachtan, counties' clerk and treasurer.

An enlarged picture of ex-Reeve George A. Smith of Port Hope, who was Warden in 1923, was presented to the Council and was ordered hung in the collection of portraits of those who in the past have filled that post of honor.

Poor Not Neglected.

When Reeve Thomas Baker of Darlington, chairman of the Board of Management of the House of Refuge, the other members o which are Warden McCamus and Deputy-Reeve Nelson of Percy, read the annual report of the Board to the Counties' Council there arose an incident which shows that the unfortunate poor are not neglected by those who are charged with the responsibility of their care.

One of the items in the report showed that there had been eight deaths in the institution during the year and that the total amount expended for burials was $80.

Reeve Holdaway of Port Hope took up this point, declaring that the allowance for an interment was too low, that it had been increased from $10 by former Councils, the members of which agreed that a human being was entitled to a better burial than one of the lower animals.

It was explained that the allowance for the burial of an inmate who dies in the institution is now $20. Sometimes the remains are claimed by friends who pay all the funeral expenses and this accounts for the small amount paid out for burials this year. Some time ago inmates were buried in ground belonging to the institution but now they are laid to rest in the cemetery in Cobourg unless the bodies are taken away by relatives.

The House of Refuge.

The United Counties have $60,000 invested in this institution. A farm of 40 acres is attached, and no more land is available. The value of the farm produce this year was $2,936.50, and the livestock is estimated to be worth $1,020.

Cost Per Inmate.

There are at present 72 inmates in the institution, 36 males and the same number of females, one less than on June 1 last. Since that time 14 have been admitted, five were discharged, eight died, and one absconded.

The report states that the average cost of board per day for each inmate was 68.67 cents, on a basis of a total attendance of 23,560 days, less interest on the $60,000 investment.

Praise the Management.

The report concludes with the following complimentary reference to the management:

We wish to express our appreciation of the superintendent and Matron, Mr. and Mrs. McMillan as regards the sanitary conditions of the home and the kindness with which the inmates are treated.

Reeve Baker said that the inmates had been questioned and all seemed to realize that they were kindly treated by the management. The only complaint here was from some of the men that their weekly allowance of tobacco was too scant.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY DECEMBER 13, 14.

Conflicting testimonies are to be found in this day's astrological map. They warn against law, strife, and treachery, and urge that unusual care be taken of the health if good is to be reaped from benefic figures.

Those whose birthday it is may wring success from complicated situations by attention to the health and refraining from law and quarrels, as well as by being on guard against treachery and fraud. A child born on this day should have fine abilities but may be inclined to be rash, quarrelsome and headstrong.

Monday's horoscope is a rather portentious one, warning against accident as well as hazardous conditions through personal indiscretions and unconventionality. Business is also threatened unless all the energies be bent upon keeping in the old and tried lines.

Those whose birthday it is are enjoined to take every precaution to protect themselves in person as well as to avoid hazards in business. They should quietly and discreetly attend to the established order in all affairs. A child born on this day should kept in the routine order of things in all its activities in life, and may be disposed to the irregular and the unconventional as well as the risky.

TARS SMOKE FAGS

Only One-Eighth of Repulse Crew Smoked Pipes.

LONDON, Dec. 12.— British sailors are turning from old raw leaf tobacco, soaked in rum and rolled up in twine, to the cigarette.

When the Prince of Wales made his recent voyage on the Repulse, 1,300,000 cigaretes were sold, according to D. Kennedy, manager of the canteen. There were but 150 pipe smokers among the 1,200 men in the ship's company.

"Sailors follow one another very closely in their choice of smokes," he said. "But the fashion changes mysteriously from time to time. On this voyage of the Repulse those wo did not roll their own cigarettes concentrated on two of the three very popular brands, quite ignoring the third. There was a run on a well-known high class cigarette as soon as the men got shore leave."

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silvar

BETTY SEES AN ODDLY SHAPED BUCKET.

My how Betty did scowl when her Mama called her into the house to get a bucket of water for her. Gocomeback, happened to be passing just then and had to stop and laugh at the expression on her pretty face.

"Gracious, gracious!" he exclaimed running up the walk towards Betty. "Don't repeat the thoughts that are in your mind, they might come true. What in the world has happened to cause all these frowns?"

"Oh, Gocomeback, I just hate to carry water," replied Betty. "I hate the very sight of that old bucket. It's so heavy and clumsy and——"

"Just everything's wrong," chuckled Gocomeback. "Funny, I was just on my way to visit your little brown cousin. Come along, it won't take long and I'm sure you will think differently when you come back home again." Before Betty could ask where they were going, she was whisked through the air and set down in front of a queer little hut, built of bamboo poles, tied together for the framework and covered with palm leaves.

"Africa?" whispered Betty looking around at the funny little huts scattered about.

"Goodness, no," laughed Gocomeback. "You're in the Philippines. This is where your little cousin lives. Now, of course in some parts you'll find houses made of boards. But this is where Carmen lives."

Just then a little brown faced girl with sparkling black eyes danced out the doorway and came running up to Gocomeback and Betty.

"Well, well, Carmen, this is Betty from America," Gocomeback said. "She wanted to see how you folks live."

"Surely," laughed Carmen and she led Betty and Gocomeback into the palm-leaf hut. There was hardly any furniture at all to speak of. The beds were just mats, spread out on the floor, and such a floor. Betty felt dizzy trying to walk across it. It was just strips of bamboo with great big cracks between each strip.

"I was just going for some water," laughed Carmen, "when I saw you coming," and she picked up a long piece of hollow bamboo, taller than she was, and as big around as her neck, and excusing herself a second, she carried it out the doorway.

"What's she going to do with the pole?" questioned Betty. "Does she have to fish the bucket out of the well with it?"

"Goodness, no," laughed Gocomeback. "That's the main reason I brought you here. I wanted to see what kind of a bucket Carmen had to carry every time she went for water That bamboo pole is the only kind of a water bucket they know about in this section of the country. Now, how would you like to carry that queer bucket full of water?"

Betty shook her head and laughed. When she stopped, she found herself sitting on her own porch. Laughing merrily, she jumped up and picking up the water bucket, ran to the well for the water. That was the last time Gocomeback ever heard her grumble about carrying water for her Mama.

PEOPLE THROWN OUT OF CUTTER

Mrs. T. J. Jackson Sustained Broken Collar Bone in Accident.

DAUGHTER HURT.

BETHANY, Dec. 12—While Mrs. T. J. Jackson and two daughters were driving yesterday morning with horse and cutter, they met with rather a peculiar accident. They had gone west on the Eight Line about three miles; Mrs. Jackson, who was driving, went to turn the horse around to return home, and the cutter caught in a rut. In so doing the cutter upset, throwing the occupants out on the hard road; the horse running away home. Mrs. Jackson went to a nearby phone to let the people at home know what had happened, and Mr. Jackson took the same horse back after them. There was no damage done whatever to horse or cutter. Violet, the older girl, received a cut on the forehead, but the doctor was called on their arrival, and found that Mrs. Jackson's collar bone was broken. The babe was unhurt.

ANNUAL RUGBY SUPPER AT GROVE SCHOOL LAUDS SPORTSMANSHIP MEDALS PRESENTED TO WINNERS

MANY TRIBUTES.

Silent Toast to Graduates Who Died in War—Concert By Boys.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 12.—"The Grove" was in festal attire on Wednesday night of the gala event of the fall term, the Annual Football Supper, which was held in the new dining room a large cheery room with beamed ceiling, from which were festooned streamers of green and red, the School colors; the pillars were trimmed with greens and the scene was suggestive of a very joyous festival indeed. More than seventy boys and between forty and fifty adults gathered round the tables at seven o'clock. After the guests had done ample justice to the delicious viands provided, Rev. A. W. Mackenzie proposed the toast to The King, which was honored in the usual way.

The second toast was the Silent Toast, in remembrance of the old boys, who gave their lives for king and country in the Great War.

The toast to The School was proposed by Rev. Walter Cox, who expressed his pleasure at being present on this happy occasion for the first time. The improvements made during the summer have added greatly to the school, which is an up-to-date, well-equipped institution. Buildings, however, do not make schools, one needs the atmosphere and the living inhabitants. The village is fortunate in having the Grove School so near, not only from a business standpoint, but also because it brings us into touch with the coming generation. The School is fortunate in its head master and assistants, whose splendid spirit has done much to make the school what it is.

Rev. A. W. Mackenzie replied to the toast, modestly disclaiming the credit for the high standing of the school. "The school is strong," said Mr. Mackenzie, "through the men who have helped build it up, and Mr. Marling holds first place among them." When the speaker came to Lakefield there was a rather strong antagonism between the village and the school which is a thoroughly English attitude, but we are not English, we are democratic Canadians. Thanks in a great measure to the help of the boys, this old-time spirit has passed away and the relationship between the village and the school to-day is truly Canadian. It is idiocy to perpetuate in this dear land what has been the curse of the old countries. We hope that the boys will always be conscious of living up to standard of Canadianism which measures by standards of manliness only, and in this may make for a united Canada.

One of the compensations of a school master is seeing the old boys come back, as so many did at Thanksgiving, a few weeks ago. It was good for the boys to see how outstanding they are and to see the calibre of boy the school produces. They played games for love of them and not because they had to. This is the first football supper in the new dining room and it marks a new era in the life of the school. This year matriculation work is being taken up and in the athletic side of the school, with more boys there will be better teams. We are gradually trying things more difficult, both in athletics and study.

Toast to The Ladies.

The toast to the Ladies was proposed by Eric Moore, in what was doubtless a very flattering tribute to the fair sex, but being given in German the complimentary inferences could only be imagined by most of the hearers.

Mr. E. R. Tate replied in his inimitable manner, saying that there were compensations for being a clergyman and a schoolmaster, as they are able to talk to and at the ladies without fear of interruption. The speaker thought to cut his speech short and introduce a story on a subject more tangible and less evasive than the ladies, which he accordingly did. Mr. Tate closed by congratulating Mr. Mackenzie on the enlarged and improved quarters which still do not keep pace with their circle of friends.

The toast to The Team was proposed by Mr. T. J. Wood, who reviewed briefly the past year's activities. The team of 1924 was a team of big boys who for years had played together and in their co-operation was their strength, this year the team was composed mainly of boys who were playing in the first team for the first year and in their first game with T.C.S, they were badly beaten, but that was their only defeat. They won the other games, not by their size, but by determination and the spirit inculcated by Mr. Mackenzie—"Get out and play the game." The captain, Pullen, did a great deal in keeping the team together, also Dick Barnard, who, owing to an accident, is having his football supper in bed. "Perhaps the younger boys," said the speaker "thought that I bullied them a good deal to make them get out and play, but if we play hard we work hard and if we play hard and work hard we will live right, as we should live." Mr. Wood closed by thanking the team for "a mighty nice football season."

E. G. Pullen, captain of the team replied to the toast and gave much credit for the teams fine season's record to the efforts of Mr. Wood; and also the efforts of the entire team who co-operated so well. He also thanked Mr. Marling for handling the home games.

The toast to the Old Boys and Absent Friends was proposed by Mr. T. W. B. Marling, who spoke of the unique place the school holds in the hearts of old boys who return regularly and with affection. The speaker has been connected with a good many schools but has never seen such a feeling shown in as great a degree anywhere else. The old boys are all carrying on and doing their best in their walk of life and, although "The Grove" is young as schools go we can point with pride to many of our leading men as old boys. None of them have fallen down or let the school down. Mr. A. M. FitzGerald replied to this toast. It is eleven years since the speaker attended a football supper and then his place was at the table with the team; on subsequent occasions he was out of town and unable to be present.

Hodgins proposed the toast to the New Boys in a brief but witty speech. This toast was replied to by several of the new boys who spoke in several different languages, Earle gave his remarks in Latin, Bolton in Spanish, and Hudson in French.

Medals Presented.

On the conclusion of the toast list Mr. Mackenzie presented the medals won by the boys in the Annual Field Day Sports and in the Autumn Races. The boys in their contests had manifested the generous spirit characteristic of the school.

At the conclusion of the prize list, a very amusing entertainment was put on by Mr. E. de C. Fletcher, assisted by Mr. Wood and some of the boys, the numbers being interspersed with selections by the Orchestra; Eric Fawcett, who, this summer entered the ranks of the Old Boys, presiding at the piano, and Cockburn at the traps.

Goldsborough and Danson ii. contributed solos and a chorus of boys selected from the 2nd Form sang "May God Preserve Thee Canada" and the dear old Christmas carol, "Good King Wenceslas looked out." Messrs. Fletcher, Wood and Loosemore gave an amusing sketch in costume, introducing a couple of topical songs. Mr. Fletcher, with his "More thoughts, More thoughts" secured a real hit. Mr. Wood's amazing bagpipe solo, given in full Highland regalia and assisted (let us whisper it) by Mr. Fletcher's violin behind the scenes, was a winner.

At a late hour the guests dispersed and another Football Supper had become a happy memory with the tinge of sadness which accompanies most happy memories for the absent friends, both boys and adults.

Among the guests present were Mrs. H. A. Mackenzie, Montreal; Mrs. Loosemore, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Macrae and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pullen, of Oakville; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Strickland; Mr. and Mrs. C. YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D., Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

In Atlanta I saw this placard on a street car:

"Careless keeps hospitals busy."

Isn't it so?

The newspapers carry items daily, telling about violent deaths and serious accidents. Most of these are due to carelessness. It may be carelessness of an automobile driver, or of a pedestrian. Nine times out of ten what we call "accidents" are the result of carelessness.

Carelessness, indifference, thoughtlessness—it makes no difference what we call it. A cross-word puzzle expert will give you a dozen names for the thing we are discussing. They all point towards the hospital.

Carelessness keeps hospitals busy not only for the treatment of crushing, slashing, tearing injuries, but also for the care of persons who have diseases from infections due to carelessness. You run a sliver in your finger. That may hurt but it doesn't require hospital care you think. With an unclean knife blade you remove the splinter, but insert in the wound something far worse. The pus germs put into your tissues by this careless act produce results which send you to the hospital and possibly to the graveyard.

Nobody can afford to be careless. Whether you have at stake your money, your reputation or your health, you must give thought to self-preservation.

Absent-mindedness is the excuse given for many an accident. Undoubtedly it is the real reason for many unfortunate events.

Who is to blame for the habit of absent-mindedness? I guess you can call it a habit. At least it is habitual with too many.

Is the parent at fault for the production of a mental state which is described as absent-mindedness? Is it the fault of the teachers who have failed to correct this mental habit?

It must be admitted that chronic digestive trouble, kidney and liver disturbances and other physical causes, may operate to create a sluggishness of body and mind which may be a factor in developing absent-mindedness. But, in my opinion, early training, or rather its neglect, is the chief cause.

The child immersed in his book, automatically answers "Aha" when asked a question. He is hardly conscious of what is said, but he knows some response is required. The same thing happens, over and over again. After a while the child goes about in a sort of trance, doing his tasks more or less unconsciously.

The child should be taught alertness of mind, quick and intelligent response. He should not be indulged softly. He should be trained to use his head on every occasion.

Then when every person is given understanding of how to care for the body, there will be fewer victims of carelessness.

GOLD FILLED TUSK FOUND IN CLAIM

Nuggets Forced Into Cracks of Fossil When Earth Settled.

SEATTLE, Dec. 12.—An authentic fossil tusk of the wooly elephant of the glacial or postglacia period, with gold fillings like a modern tooth, has been presented to the museum of the University of Washington by Edward Squires, who discovered it on a mining claim on Dominion Creek, forty miles from Dawson, Yukon Territory.

The tusk is ten feet long and weighs 250 pounds. The theory of Nathan Kresge, museum caretaker and former Alaskan, is that the relic was there when tons of earth with paystreak settled down, so that gold nuggets were forced into the cracks of the trusks giving the effect of modern gold tooth fillings.

FASCIST LABOR LAW APPROVED

DEBATE CLOSED.

ROME, Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Mussolini, closing the debate in the Chamber of Deputies on the Government's Labor bill Friday, declared that the bill might be considered a war measure, "because I consider the Italian nation in a permanent state of war."

The Premier said that the law, according to which the Government will recognize only Fascist Labor Union and Fascist employers' organization as competent to deal with disputes between capital and labor was intended as a preventive of strikes and lock-outs, which had dissipated the surplus energy of the nation.

This law grants juridical recognition to Fascist trade unions — known by the medieval name of syndicates or corporations—conferring upon them the exclusive right of speaking in the name of the workers' interests.

It provides that in each art, craft, trade or profession two syndicates or corporations shall be established, one representing the interests of capital, the other representing the interests of labor. These two syndicates or corporations in each art, craft, trade or profession are to be juridically recognized by the States as the only organizations empowered to discuss wage agreements and settle disputes arising between capital and labor.

It is, in other words, expedient to attain what the Fascists call trade union unity and what the Opposition calls trade union monopoly.

The chief interest in this law lies in the fact that it is but the first of a long series of legislative measures which will be discussed by the Chamber after the Christmas recess, aiming to destroy the Marxian theory of class war and replacing it with the Fascist theory of class colaboration. It is to be followed, in fact, by laws establishing compulsory arbitration in disputes between capital and labor, and appointing labor magistrates to settle such disputes.

Still later it is proposed to change the constitution of the Senate, whose members, instead of being appointed by royal decree, will be elected by syndicates or corporations. The intention is to make "organizations of producers," as the Fascists call their syndicates or corporations, the controlling political factor in Italy.

At present any Italian citizen who reached the age of 21, even if he cannot read or write, has the right to vote. In the future a citizen will vote only if he can show, by belonging to a syndicate or corporation, that he is a producer or holds a position of responsibility.

PETERBORO' LIFE UNDERWRITERS ANNUAL MEETING AND BANQUET

William May, of Toronto, Spoke on "Business Insurance" to Members.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

New President of the Local Branch of Association is William Boulton.

The annual meeting and banquet of the Peterborough branch of the Life Underwriters of Canada took place in the Empress Hotel last night. Isaac McNabb, the chairman for the occasion, introduced the principal speaker of the evening, in the person of William May, Jr., of Toronto who, the chairman stated, is one of the greatest authorities on business insurance in Canada.

Mr. May, in an address that fully demonstrated his knowledge of the subject and kept his hearers spellbound, stated that in the field of business insurance there can be no rules laid down to work upon, as there were no two businesses alike. He stated that the biggest mistake that most underwriters made was to approach it from the angle of life insurance. A man, he said, to sell business insurance must have a knowledge of the construction and administration of business and told his audience that in Toronto last year there had been four million dollars insurance sold for business purposes alone. He stated that it was the field of insurance that had been the least covered. Life insurance deals with men, he stated, and any business is merely the length and shadow of a man or men. All an underwriter has to do, he said, is to find the nature of a man's contribution to his business and you find out his needs. The trouble is, he said, that the average life insurance man has associated business policies with amounts of a hundred thousand when it can be sold to every man who is venturing his time, brain and money in a business endeavoring to make money.

He showed the evolution of business from the one man business, to the partnership, limited liability company, corporation and finally the closed corporation. He proposed to deal with the one man business which was probably the most common as it was easy to start, there were no restrictions, it grew as the men grew and stated that business insurance in this case was hardly distinguishable from life insurance. To win a man of this type you must talk the language he understands and that is business. The minute you get on his ground you will find that he is interested. The speaker described at some length the different arguments that could be used in a case of this kind. He said that the underwriter should paint the picture of the future made brighter through insurance. It is in every man's heart, he stated, to build something that will last and a little touch to the vanity of a man will accomplish wonders.

The speaker threw the meeting open for questions and the ease and ability with which he answered the many questions fired at him showed that he was a master of his craft. A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by J. L. Allen and seconded by F. Hills.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were confirmed, and the financial report was adopted. W. J. McClelland and H. Taylor were appointed as auditors. Isaac McNabb, the retiring president, presented his report, covering his term of office, and declared the meeting open for the nomination of officers for the year 1925-26. The ballot resulted in the following members of the association being elected for the year 1925-26:

President, William Boulton, Confederation Life; Vice-President, N. Tobin, Metropolitan; Secretary-Treasurer, J. W. Kenmure, Imperial Life. Six members were elected to the executive as follows: J. F. H. Wallace, Sun Life; A. Moffat, Prudential; H. B. Matthews, London Life; L. Davis, North American Life; S. Touchburn, Canada Life; T. Mark, Manufacturers' Life.

Charged With Murder of Woods Superintendent in Office.

NEAR JOLIETTE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press).—The most important development in the Tyhurst murder case to date is scheduled to take place today at Joliette, Que., where two men, who have been held here several days, will be formally arraigned before a magistrate and charged with the crime.

Robert Tyhurst, woods superintendent of the St. Maurice Pulp and Paper Company, was shot while sitting in his office at the little village of St. Michel des Saints a week ago.

Men Threatened

JOILIETTE, Que., Dec. 12 (Canadian Press)—When the Montreal train arrived here this morning with two men who are to be charged with the murder of Robert Tyhurst before Judge Dubeau here this afternoon, hundreds of angry woodsmen stormed the station with cries of "Lynch them, lynch them". The demonstration clearly indicated the popularity of the murdered woosd suprintendent of the St. Maurice Pulp and Paper Company, fatally shot while working in his office at the village of St. Michael Des Santa a week ago last night. The men were hurried to the county jail an dodged within while the mob surged about outside, demanding that they be lynched.

The practice will be held as usual in the G.W.V.A. Hall at 8 o'clock sharp lasting until nine o'clock after which refreshments and a real social hour will be indulged in. Each member is to be present together with his wife or somebody else's or his sweetheart, and merry making will be the order of the evening.

The ladies may come at 8 o'clock also and indulge in cards or games until the rehearsal finishes. The evening will conclude with a variety of dances, even including the old time lancers. Ladies, now's your chance to get your fun out of the M.V.C.

In northern Italy, where it is extremely cold at Christmas time, it became the custom to hang the purses on the mantelpiece, the people believing that St. Nicholas would find his way down the chimney and fill them. Out of the custom of hanging the long purses, so legend goes, grew that of the Christmas stockings.

"It's Best for You and Baby Too"

IRISH LITERATURE LECTURE SUBJECT

Prof. J. F. McDonald, of Toronto, Addressed Women's Canadian Club.

"Irish Literature" was the subject chosen by Prof. J. F. MacDonald, of University College, Toronto, when he spoke to the Women's Canadian Club yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of the Public Library. Professor MacDonald made his second visit to the city yesterday in the capacity of lecturer to the Women's Canadian Club, "Glengarry Days" being his memorable contribution to its programme of last year. Yesterlya he gave his hearers a glimpse of the beauties of Irish literature, not the literature of Dean Swift and Moore, of Bernard Shaw, or Lord Dunsany, but the distinctively Irish school of modern times, who went originally to Celtic sources, written in the ancient Erse, and have brought to the English language and English literature a curious Celtic spirit of pathos and mysticism.

Prof. MacDonald referred to the little one-act dramas of Douglas Hyde, a great Gaelic scholar, "who holds the attention of crowds at the Irish fairs with his curious little dramas, given in the Gaelic, like "The Lost Sin" and "The Wedding," absolutely unlike anything in the English drama, to Lady Gregory and her rollicking little farce, "Spreading the News," to William Butler Yeats, "who has struggled painfully to become a Celtic scholar," and to Geo. Russell, who writes under the initials of "A.E."

The origin of the present Irish movement with regard to literature had its roots in curiously different origins, such as the Sinn Fein "(ourselves alone") organization, and the sudden rise to prominence of the Co-operative societies, who in turn linked themselves with the group led by Douglas Hyde who wanted to bring back the old Irish language, fallen into disuse during the progress of the nineteenth century.

Professor MacDonald read in a fashion that brought out all the beauty and meaning of the little Irish verse, extracts from some of the works of these moderns in the Irish movement. The mysticism and the wonderful imagination of the Celt, he averred, had much to do with the conflict in temperament between him and the Anglo-Saxon. The latter could not see how a man could possibly be happy while living in the "cabeen" of the poor Irish crofter. He imagined that installation of sanitary plumbing and a general cleaning up would be necessary before the owner should think of being happy. But the Irishman did not feel that he was living in a poor hut. He had his dreams and his fairies to make him happy. Life was not at all real to him and he did not see the realities of his existence as they appeared to others. To him, his dream was the reality.

From Russell's "Babylon," one learned of the love of the Irish girl that seemed to her lover just the same as the love of a Babylonian maiden of two thousand years ago, there was the essential pathos and plaintive tone of the Irish poet in Moira O'Neill's "A Grace for Light" and in "Corrymeela" was the homesick longing of the Irish laborer in English fields for his own misty skies. Padriac Colcm's lovely bit, "The Old Woman of the Roads" was also read, and there was the softness of an Irish lullaby in the "husheen" song to the child; "Mary puts 'round him her mantle of blue." There was the glint of the fairies, "the little folks in green," in "The Short Cut to Ross's," and there was the quirk of the Celtic humour in "The Road," by Patrick Chalmers, where the careful lover adjures his sweetheart not to be taking the muddy road, and she answers back "Sure, the saints will be keeping my petticoats clean."

"The Song of the Wandering Angus," was "pure fancy" or pure nonsense, as you wish to regard it, but is colored with vivid light. Angus was the mild god of the Celtic mythology, as Baldu was of the Norse. To Angus, as to Baldur, the traditional life of the gods of Valhalla, "the eating of pork and drinking of beer all night and of fighting all day" had palled, and he sought for happiness in nature and mystic adventures. He was haunted by the dream of perfect beauty, "the silver apples of the moon, the golden apples of the sun," and gave his life to a search for a lost glimpse of it.

The speaker also quoted Yeats' "The Lake Isle of Innisfree," with "its midnights of purple glow and evenings full of linets wings," and demonstrated the profound melancholy of the Celt in the little bit, "The Sorrow of Love."

He spoke also of the companion movement toward emancipation from English influence in the work of the modern Irish dramatists, citing Yeats' "Dierdra," the tale of the celebrated Irish queen whose beauty brought with it suffering and passion and death, and "Cathaleen Ni Houlahan," that figure symbolical of the distressful island, itself. The movement has become crystalized through the inauguration of the Abbey Theatre in Dublin, where Irish dramatists are producing their plays. Of these dramatists, the speaker cited particularly John Synge, the Irishman brought from his home in Poearis, "the skilled literary craftsman," to make an effort to transfer the language of the Irish peasant to its literature. "Uneducated people often speak better than educated folk because they use their words as a medium of thought, rather than to cloak their real meanings."

Synge spent a year on the Arran Islands and listened daily to the speech of those with whom he stayed. His shadow of the Glen," of which a brief, tantalizing bit was given by the professor, was a notable example of the curious use of language made by the people.

To these modernists and their efforts was due the credit for a fresh, richly-ocolored phrasing and a new technique in the drama, a striking away from the old method in which dramatists portrayed only city dwellers, of the upper classes, and a bringing to the stage a new, revitalized color in the production of plays centred about the life and the ways and the language of real people in actual life.

A very hearty vote of thanks was accorded the speaker by the president, Mrs. F. D. Kerr, who was in the chair, and seconded by the audience.

RUMOR DENIED.

Chief Newhall Says Story About F. Whitehouse is Without Truth.

During the past two weeks an insidious rumor has been circulated throughout the city to the effect that Frank Whitehouse, a former Peterborough business man, was convicted and sentenced on a charge of forgery. During the course of an investigation, The Examiner interviewed Police Chief Newhall, who voiced an emphatic denial. He said that when he had first heard the rumor he communicated with the Portsmouth Penitentiary, and officials there said that there had been no such entry. Further than that, Chief Newhall visited the city where Mr. Whitehouse is now located, and the Police Chief there said there was absolutely no truth in the report, and that he had had no conviction of that character within the past four years. He admitted having written to people in Peterborough denying the rumor.

Chief Newhall believes that the rumor was caused by the conviction here of William Lawson, a piano dealer, who was sentenced a few weeks ago.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

SAND NEEDED.

To the Editor of the Evening Examiner:

Will you please allow me a small space in the Examiner to voice my opinion regarding the condition of our city streets.

First, the writer would like to extend appreciation to Inspector Reid of the Police Department for the article in last evening's (Thurrday) paper, regarding conditions of some horses' shoes on the terribly slippery streets at the present time. It is absolutely wicked and a criminal offence for any driver to drive his horse over these streets, with or without a load, improperly shod, or so shod that he can get no footing. It is amazing how many citizens can walk down the street and never notice the nervous strain some horses are under. Horses have nerves as well as people, and if they could speak for themselves, like we can, the chances are they would ask to be left in the stable. There are the commercial horses that have to be on the street every day, and the writer knows that the most of these horses visit the blacksmith shops frequently. But the blacksmith unfortunately or unfortunately, cannot do everything, and the calks are not yet patented that will pierce the pavements on the city streets. The difficulty at the present time cannot be properly overcome by sharp calks, as there is not enough thickness of snow and ice for them to do their work. Each step that is taken the calk penetrates the snow and ice, striking the pavement, and thus dulling it, and at the same time the horse slips and is in great danger of, not only falling, but cutting himself. A few winters ago the American Humane Association offered a $1000 prize to the person who could satisfactorily invent a shoe which would not slip on the pavement. All manner of shoes were made but none proved satisfactory. In some cities in the United States when streets become treacherous, as our Peterboro streets are, they are sanded, very thinly—and this is the only remedy that has proved satisfactory. Why not try sanding in Peterboro? Surely our city fathers would be willing to give this a trial. The city built the streets to improve the city. Why not improve the streets for the horses? It is proved that a small sprinkle of sand will save a pedestrian from falling; why can't our horses be favored the same way when they are doing the city's work? If all humane drivers refuse to take their horses on these streets until sanded, what would happen? If the streets were laid to favor the automobile sanding would still favor them and the horse as well.

The writer saw a villain Thursday, driving a pair of horses along Hunter street East, which had great difficuty in keeping to their feet, and in spite of this fact their driver was whipping them along—too bad, the horses could not have their driver in their place, and given him the same treatment. FOUNDERS CLAIM LEAGUE WORKING Cite Handling of Greco-Bulgar Settlement as Evidence of Success.

HAS AUTHORITY

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

GENEVA (By mail to the United Press).—The League of Nations regards its handling of the recent Greco-Bulgarian conflict as the most classic example to date of how the League ought to be able always to operate.

If it has not always been able in the past to come up to expectations this has been due, not so much to the fact that the fundamental conception of the League was inadequate, but merely because it had the misfortune to go up against some extreme test cases, like the Corfou affair, before it had had time to perfect its own machinery and to establish its authority, according to League supporters here.

League authorities are convinced that the machinery of the League is not only getting rapidly perefected but the authority of the League is becoming steadily established and recognized to an extent that the chances of successful intervention in the future are increasing steadily.

The fact that nearly all of the leading members of the council are now sending their foreign ministers to represent them on that body gives the Council a degree of authority that it never had until the past year.

A semi-official analysis and statement of the handling of the Greco-Bulgarian conflict, issued by the League, states that the principal points established were as follows:

1. The great speed with which the Council can be invoked in an emergency.

2 The trivality of the articles of the convenant for peaceful settlement.

3. The value of publicity in all such international disputes.

4. The availabilty to the League of the military and naval officers of its state member in making investigations on the spot.

5. The willingness of the principal nations to use force in extreme cass to uphold the convenant.

6. The value of the League for the quick liquidation of such a dispute.

TURKS HOPE FOR SETTLEMENT

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 12. (Canadian Press).—If mediation between Great Britain and Turkey in their dispute over Mosul fails, it is understood that the League of Nations Council plans to make a definite frontier decision at its present session, hoping to secure the necessary unanimity.

The present tendency, it is understood, is to render a decision in favor of the British contention that Mosul is part of Irak, which is held under British mandate.

Some hope was expressed to-day that the controversy surrounding the dispute between Turkey and Great Britain over the Mosul boundary in Irak might be satisfactorily liquidated, notwithstanding the fact that the chief Turkish delegate has stated that the Turks have withdrawn from discussions before the League Council.

Direct negotiations between Great Britain and Turkey were thought to be possible owing to the strenuous efforts the Council is making to solve the problem agreeably to both sides.

BISHOP SPOKE AT LEAGUE MEETING

Told Catholic Women of Work in European Countries.

The regular meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held last evening in the assembly hall of St. Alphonsus' Lyceum. The president, Mrs. C. J. Snider, was in the chair, and read an address from the ladies to His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, who was present last night. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson.

The Bishop acknowledged with thanks the complimentary expressions contained in the address from the ladies, and went on to give a brief talk, touching on some of his experiences in his trip abroad, with particular regard to the efforts made in the Old Country for the propagation of the faith. "But nowhere in my travels," he said, "have I found a greater spirit of piety than is manifested in Peterboro."

His Lordship spoke particularly of the work done by Catholic laymen and laywomen in England, where two thousand conversions to the Church were made last year in Westminster diocese alone. He referred to the large pamphlet rack in Westminster Cathedral, which is attended so well by faithful Catholic women, and of the work in public speaking, giving addresses on the beliefs of the church done by members of the Catholic Evidence League.

In France, where atheism is rampant, he came in contact wtih people who make it their mission in life to go about teaching the catechism, and in Italy much good is being done in the way of restoration of religious practices, by the present government.

"What is the individual Catholic doing here?" asked the Bishop. "Has he any hobby of this sort that will bring good to the person next door? Are we disseminating a knowledge of the truth? Are we helping those who are poverty-stricken or ill? Could we not use our cars to take sick people for a ride, not once a year, but often."

Here the Bishop referred to the practice in vogue in the Old Country, where families of wealth make a duty of taking into their homes a deformed or poverty-stricken person and treating him or her as one of the family, doing this to gain a blessing from God for their charity.

"We must remember that our non-Catholic friends do a great deal of good in the name of Social Service. There are boundless opportunities for doing good, not only in actual charitable works, but in being friendly towards each other and our neighbors. But do not let us be contented with simply calling our sick friends on the 'phone and enquiring after them. Let us spend effort and money as well in doing good, and do it for a supernatural motive, for the love of God. Let us be individual in our methods. Let each one adopt her own way of doing good, each in her own sphere."

ALL SAINTS' LADIES' AID FINE BANQUET

Mothers and Daughters of Sunday School Were Out in Force.

One of the most outstanding successes in the line of social affairs in the hostory of the ladies of All Saints' Church was the Mother and Daughter banquet, held last evening in the parish hall of the church. Ladies and their daughters to the number of two hundred and eighty attended the function, which was marked by excellent service and featured by an address given by Miss Connell, of the Church of England Deaconess' Home, in Toronto. Community singing and several pleasing selections by the orchestra of All Saint's' Church also enlivened the evening's programme. The address given by Miss Connell was acknowledged for those present by Mrs. Joseph Adams. Ladies in charge of the banquet were Miss Louise Lacheur and the teachers of the girls' classes.

REDUCTION OF U. S. INHERITANCE TAX UNDER FIRE IN LONG DEBATE

Slash of 50 Per Cent. in Maximum Rate Is Opposed.

TAX STILL NEEDED.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press) — The inheritance tax provision of the revenue reduction bill came under fire in the House again Friday but the five hours of debate, as on previous days, brought considerable support for the measure from spokesmen of both parties.

Representatievs Ramseyer, of Iowa, and Simmons, of Nebraska, republicans, carried on the attack opened Thursday by Representative Frear, Republican, Wisconsin, against the 50 per cent cut in the maximum inheritance rate, and also opposed the provision to give an 80 per cent credit in settlement in the Federal inheritance levy on account of the amount paid on a similar state tax.

Some Omit This Tax

Chairman Green of the ways and means committee which framed the $325,000,000 tax reduction measure replied that the committee had concluded that the states needed revenue from this tax, but with several not imposing any such levy, it was felt that the Federal government should retain control over it and allow the 80 per cent credit.

"For every dollar the taxpayers of Nebraska will benefit by this," Mr. Simmons said, "those in New York benefit $8. We men who represent the agriculture states cannot support this provision of the bill."

Mr. Ramseyer who sponsored the increased inheritance rates carried in the 1924 revenue act, declared the same reasons prevailed today for retention of these rates as existed then for the increase.

Representative Browne, Republican, Wisconsin, opposed repeal of the provision permitting publicity of income returns, but this proposal was strongly defended by Rep. Hill, Republican, Maryland, who also urged greater reductions in the inheritance rates.

ENRIGHT ARRESTED FOR BRUTAL MURDER

Brother of New York Police Comissioner Taken Into Custody.

CORNING, N.Y., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Michael J. Enright, brother of Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright of New York, taken into custody yesterday near Campbell, in connection with the brutal murder of Timothy Shay, a farm laborer, will probably face a charge of first degree murder, according to District Attorney Guy W. Cheney of Corning.

District Attorney Cheney's investigation developed that a drunken brawl had taken place which, officials declare, resulted in the murder. Michael Enright, when questioned, declared that he and Shay were at the farmhouse Wednesday night drinking and that he retired at 8 o'clock leaving Shay alone. When he arose at 7 o'clock Thursday morning he missed Shay and at 10 o'clock found the body, he said, in a ditch about 30 feet from the house. He denied any knowledge of how the murder occurred.

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore, finding herself on a yacht in Long Island Sound after midnight, attempted to leap overboard, but was restrained by one Pooch, a stranger. Then McTish, the skipper, tells Pooch for annoying her. In the bow of the boat Connemara is amazed to find young David Lacy, with whom she had driven from Aunt Celimena's Connecticut home. He had been spilled in an automobile accident and is now in the company of two mysterious characters, "Doc" and "Sweetie."

"Shut up, Doc, you're all wet!" called the lady weakly, sitting up on the deck. This was a true statement, however she meant it.

"Are you all right, Sweetie?" asked the big fellow anxiously.

"K. O.!" responded the girl tersely. "Where's the guy we had with us?"

"I hope he's drowned!" was the unfeeling answer. "The big stiff—he was a Jonah! Hey, who's in charge of this tub?" he added to McTish.

McTish turned to look at Lacy, who, rope in hand, was in controversy with Mr. Pooch.

"Stick out your arms like a nice little boy," suggested Lacy. "I'm going to tie you up in a neat little package and ship you somewhere where you'll be more appreciated!"

Mr. Pooch slowly arose to his feet. He surveyed the slighter man contemptuously and then his roving eyes took in the little group in the bow who were watching the tableu with various emotions. As his glance fell on Connemara, his eyes brightened. Mr. Pooch had a one-track mind.

"Gimme that fifty grand!" he demanded hoarsely, staggering toward her. The big man and his girl companion started and looked at each other significantly.

"Do what you're told!" exclaimed Lacy impatiently—and dropped Mr. Pooch to the deck with a perfectly timed left hook. Immediately stooping, he began the process of tying up his victim.

"Where's that gun?" whispered Doc, shaking Sweetie's arm.

"I lost it when this scow hit us," Sweetie answered—then warned, "don't start nothin' you can't finish, Doc!"

Ignoring her advice, Doc strode over to Connemara and grasped her arm roughly. "So you did get the jack, hey?" he growled. "Well, that makes things easier. Gimme that dough or I'll croak you!"

Lacy reached Connemara's side as though shot from a cannon and while Sweetie's warning shriek was still on the air, his right fist shot out and thudded against Doc's jaw. But Doc did not go down, a la Pooch. Instead, he returned the compliment with much vigor. In another instant the two men were threshing about the rolling deck, while McTish, in response to Mr. Lacy's shouted command held the struggling, clawing, howling Sweetie, with both arms tightly pinioned at her sides. From his prostrate position on the floor, Mr. Pooch watched the proceedings with mournful interest.

A fortunate blow from Lacy, who even to Connemara's inexperienced eyes seemed to be something of a boxer, sent Doc crashing to the deck. The big man's head struck a projection with a resounding and soul-satisfying bump. He lay still and unresisting as Lacy deftly bound him and with the help of McTish rolled him alongside Mr. Pooch. Released during the process, Sweetie leaned against the rail and glared at each in turn.

"If I don't tie you, will you make an attempt to act like a lady?" Lacy asked the girl.

"Leave me and Doc go and we'll call it a night," answered sweetie, apparently succumbing to Mr. Lacy's smile. "Tomorrow's another day!"

"And you may put me ashore also, while you're about it!" broke in Connemara, annoyed at the half-admiring glance Sweetie bestowed on Lacy.

Lacy let out a few more inches on his smile and surveyed both girls thoughtfully.

"I cannot leave you young ladies as abruptly as that," he said. "You have interested me strangely—eh, Sister?—while you, Sweetie, made a decided impression on me back there in the dory!" And he rubbed a noticeable lump on his head gingerly.

"What are you going to do with us?" asked Connemara anxiously. The mocking light in his eyes disturbed her.

"I will decide that later!" he answered mysteriously. "Just now I want to know who you all are and what this inane nonsense is all about!"

"Well, first," smiled Connemara, "you can take this beastly money. That may prevent any further attempts on my life!"

Lacy stared at the bundle of banknotes in her outstretched hand. So did Mr. Pooch and Doc. Mr. Pooch emitted a baffled groan and rolled on his side, as if to hide the scene from his view. Doc, who was swearing with great heartiness, stopped abruptly.

"I don't want this. What is it—how much?" asked Lacy.

"It's more than I'm going to be responsible for," said Connemara firmly. "Please—please—just stick it in your pocket—or, anywhere."

"We—ll," said Lacy, "it's very irregular, but I'm always anxious to do what a lady requests."

He took the money and stuffed it carelessly in the pocket of his wet coat. As he did so out of the darkness came a gruff hail. A shapeless hulk grated against the yacht's side.

CHAPTER IX.
By Sophie Kerr.

McTish and Lacy, Connemara and the Sweetie person, were galvanized into attention and rushed to the rail. Pooch and Doc could do nothing but stretch their necks anxiously in the direction of the hail, and squirm uneasily.

"Ship aho-o-o-y!" sang out Lacy. "Look out, you'll run us down, you poor goofs. What're y'doing? Where's your lights?"

There was silence for a moment, and then the voice, much less gruff, came from the darkness, accented in amazement: "By the great horn spoon, that's Dave Lacy and his old tub, the Bloody Nuisance. Dave, you scoundrel, what are you doing here?"

"Listen—say!" Lacy's voice was just as much amazed, and quite hilariously joyful. "Why, Bob Mer——"

"S-s-s-s-t!" said the other voice, sharply. "Don't call my name! I'm looking for somebody, somebody in a little foolish boat, maybe two of them, sneaking round these waters and being as inconspicuous as possible. Seen anything like that tonight?"

"I've only been aboard a few minutes. I'll ask McTish. What about it, McTish," "And I've been on the lookout too."

"Oh, damn!" went on the unseen voice. "Just my rotten luck. Say, Dave, you going to anchor here?"

"I might, if there was any inducement," said Lacy. "Why don't you come on board? I've got Scotch and rye."

A low groan of naguish burst simultaneously from Doc and Pooch at this announcement.

"I'm going to take a little quiet run round, for half an hour or so, but I'll be back and go you a couple down the hatch," said the voice. "You stick right here, old son, and wait for me. And keep a weather eye out for any little boats with two or three people in 'em. If any such come round, and you can inveigle the folks on board, lay 'em out with a marline spike."

"Who is you talkative laddie buck?" asked McTish sourly, as the boat beside them slipped away quietly into the night.

SUPREME COURT

was not aware of the seriousness of the expedition he set out on, that he had not boarded the Beryl G., when the shots were fired, and that he had "not engaged in a common purpose" in the full sense of the definition.

Story of "Hi-jacking."

The fact that counsel who defended the two accused at the trial had not protested against passages which are now cited as irregularities was commented on several times by the Crown counsel, Mr. Ritchie, who submitted that they seem to have been unimportant at the time, and to have been brought up now merely for purposes of the appeal.

Mr. Ritchie gave a graphic account of the hi-jacking expedition which is said to have been participated in by Baker, Sowash, a man named Charlie Morris, who is also under sentence of death, and Paul Strompkins, the owner and navigator of the "Denman Two," on which the quartette set out on their quest for liquor.

According to the evidence Strompkins was left on board the "Denman Two," on which the quartette set out on their quest for liquor. According to the evidence, Strompkins was left behind on board the "Denman Two" when the other three rowed in a dinghy to the Beryl G. to hold up "the old man and the boy." It was Strompkins who turned king's evidence and gave the police evidence which led to the finding by divers of the bodies of the two Gillises in a hundred fathoms of water off Halibut Island, B.C. The bodies had been tied to a heavy anchor and disembowelled to prevent them rising to the surface. The 180 cases of liquor from the Beryl G. was cached and later picked up by the expedition, which was augmented by Clausen, owner of the Dolphin of Seattle.

The first half of the loot was dumped overboard when the Dolphin was pursued by revenue men in the Straits of Juan de Fuca. The second half was later smuggled successfully into Seattle.

Doodads And Knick Knacks Bedeck Peterborough Autos

But Folk Here Are Decidedly Ulitarian and Like Accessories That Work—Piece of Bric-a-brac Raises Car From the Common Herd.

BUMPERS FORE AND AFT DEMANDED.

The average Peterborough motorist, and his number is legion, likes to see his vehicle decked in many of the frills and furbelows which enterprising accessory dealers have made so conveniently available; but instead of indulging a taste for the expensive little doodads having no particular usefulness, people in this city demand articles which will be an ever-present help in the time of trouble. They choose bumpers, fore and aft, windshield wipers and rear vision mirrors.

Interviews with several motor car jewelry dealers elicited the fact that nearly every car owner has some little trinket attached somewhere on his transport problem. From the lordliest multi-cylindered juggernaut of the landed potentate to the scarified portable scrap heap of the pauper is a long, long, journey but on each sample of rolling stock there is likely to be found some valued bit of bric-a-brac to distinguish it from the common herd. Some cars are bedizened from stem to stern with a garish display of shining finery, while others find sufficient encumbrance in the pendant license plate and achieve destiny with no greater mark of distinction than a nickelled radiator cap.

For magnates who must have a palanquin of distinction there is the body jobber, who is willing to turn out an equippage garbed in any tint from salmon pink to ultra-marine. Such a conveyance may be obtained in period styles or to harmonize with the pet chow, for the slightest whim of the guilded plutocrat is faithfully worked out in style and color. Peterborough notables do not indulge in this hectic effulgence which hall-marks many of the barons across the border, preferring the sombre tones and standard designs which, while not so striking to the eye, have a quiet distinction of their own.

For De Luxe Trippers.

For the de luxe trippers, there are radiator ornaments, lodge emblems and monograms neatly stamped out in sterling silver plate; there are a dozen different kinds of illumination, for it appears that there is no place on a car where a lamp could not be placed and there is even a portable light on the end of a long cord which may be carried about while the motorist peers at his engine or on some lonely road repairs a puncture.

There is a cigarette case for the instrument board from which may be extracted cigarettes already lit and glowing. A spark from the ignition provides the necessary heat while a connection with the exhaust inhales the first draught of smoke. Cigar lighters are also supplied as well as other types of cigarette cases. The opera-goer must have flower vases gracing the interior of his limousine and these are available in every material from glass to hammered bronze. For the lover who likes to cuddle his sweetie while in transit, there are dome lights which may be turned off and roller shades which may be pulled down. The winter driver keeps himself warm and snug by dint of hitching his exhaust to a heater in the floor and the summer driver may be cooled by an arrangement which holds the doors slightly ajar. The drafts are shielded from his person by two wing plates which protrude on either side like fish fins.

The accessory dealer is very solicitous about the vision of Peterborough motorists and has a variety of windshield attachments such as spot lights, wipers and pieces of green celluloid to eliminate glare. The windshield wiper finds its greatest use on a stormy night and its little arm swishes back and forth like a pendulum, keeping a cleared arc on the glass surface. Visors, curving downward from the top of the car are calculated to deflect the rays of the early morning or late evening sun.

Prevent Chills.

For the motorist who dislikes the task of filling and draining the radiator in winter months, and dislikes the corrosive effects of non-freezing solutions, there are several means by which the chill is prevented from reaching the marrow of the motor. A curtain contrivance, linked up with an electric circuit performs the stunt efficiently, and economically, say the dealers.

There is ample provision for the motorist who sees trouble always in the offing. Thief-proof locks to prevent all and sundry from using his car. Spare spark plugs to relieve ignition trouble and the inevitable tire repair kit when the insulation system lays down on the job. There are chains to hold the wheels in subjection and prevent them from leading the unwary driver into the nearest ditch.

In summary it might be said that the motto of the accessory dealer seems—"They shall not pass; they must be satisfied," and he lays in a stock accordingly.

The slightest whim of the most exacting is granted and he who would attempt to use all the little knick-knacks would find that his cherished mount would lose all resemblance of an automobile and look instead, like one's conception of the Nickel District.

WAY CLEARED FOR ARMS CONFERENCE

All Difficulties Connected With Preparatory Committee Are Settled.

GENEVA, December 11. — Canadian Press. — The way was cleared to-day for the League of Nations' international disarmament conference, with the settlement of all difficulties in connection with the formation of the preparatory committee.

Among the many superstitions relating to children born on Christmas Day is a belief that they are able to excel in music. They are also credited with possessing abnormal intelligence.

HE DID IT!

(By the author of "Midnight in Peterborough, or Kissed in the Dark," "The Vicious Villain's Venomous Venge;" "In the Stilly Night He Worked His Still;" and one or two other titles in mind.

"If you don't marry me I shall jump over the bridge!" he said. "I mean it. If you reject me I shall leap over the parapet of the bridge. If you want me to do that, just refuse me; that's all!"

"You wouldn't!" she exclaimed, apprehensively.

"When I say a thing, I mean it—try me!" he replied grimly.

It was almost midnight. He had been visiting on Park street since eight.

"Oh, I can't, I can't," she faltered. "I want to keep you as a brother. You're such a generous brother." She was especially charming that evening in a gown of Truscan orange with a trimming of skins.

"I'll give you one more chance," he said quietly. "Will you?"

"No," she murmured.

He strode from the house, and with long strides went along Park, up Charlotte, along Aylmer to Hunter, and turned east. Surely he could not contemplate a leap from the heights of Hunter street bridge to the depths of the cold river below, through the ice?

His steps got slower and slower after turning into the straightaway. After all—

He put his hands resolutely on the parapet, climbed over—hung poised a shuddering minute, and then dropped. . . . to the surface of ice on Jackson Park creek where it flows under Hunter street.

He had kept his word.

ABOUT YOUR CAR.

By W. Z.

DO YOU JAIL YOUR CAR?

To operate your car in cold weather some few years ago was not even thought of; you would raise your wheels off the ground, drain the water from your radiator, take your battery from its position and carefully store it away in the house in a suitable place, and "jail" your car until the season for driving became more favorable again.

The annoyances, such as hard starting, sluggish circulation, wear and tear, frozen radiators and water pumps, made it expensive and troublesome to run the car in the winter. To-day, one can enjoy winter driving at a moderate cost, and without the old-time troubles.

The closed car provides driving comfort for all seasons of the year, is equipped with heater and foot warmer, deriving its heat from the exhaust, and, assisted greatly by compactness of windshield, doors and top, allowing very little of the outside cold to enter, makes winter driving more popular than ever.

Many anti-freeze solutions are on the market now, and, if kept at the right strength, will fortify your cooling system to such a degree that one does not need give this matter but little attention. Your service station man will test your radiator solution for you in a few minutes' time with a special tester, and from a chart will advise you what temperature of frost it will stand.

Lubricating oil some time back was of such a nature that frost soon turned it into such a solid mass that you found it almost impossible to even budge the engine with the hand crank, and if it was possible to get the engine firing, you became nervous when, five or six minutes later, you observed that your oil gauge, on the instrument board, was not even registering.

Discoveries made recently in oil for winter lubrication that will not become solid at low temperatures, assisted greatly in overcoming any or all troubles in the matter of lubricating the engine efficiently. It is a common thing to see handy oil bottles of pint and quart sizes sitting out in the cold at filling stations, and when shaken by hand will flow just like oil of a heavier grade in the warm weather.

Some motors require a different grade of oil for winter than others. You should not just merely say—"Put a pint of oil in my car; I think it's getting low," but you should ascertain the recommended grade of oil for your particular make of car and season of the year. When you fail to do this you may run into serious expense; your oil pump may be given undue work and break the pump-shaft, oil screen and, perhaps, the oil gauge may be rendered useless by a pressure that was not designed for your engine, not to say what you may do to your battery and starter.

Be sure you're right before you buy your oil, then you won't go wrong. Remember, always, that an unprotected rubbing surface is the cause of a speedy road to the repair shop.

Winter-driving of cars is nothing unusual to-day; it only amounts to a fully charged battery, anti-freeze in the cooling system, the proper kind of lubricating oil and grease recommended for your design of car, and a set of chains for traction and safety.

RACE TRACK TAXES SHOWED DECREASE

Drop of Twelve Thousand Dollars in Revenue Received.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press.)— A comparative statement issued by Hon. W. H. Price to-day shows that the provincial revenue from race track taxes this year amounts to $2,863,392, a decrease of $12,482 from the amount received last year. With decreases in the attendance and the amount of betting reported, the amusement tax receipts and the tax of five per cent. on betting showed corresponding decreases. The statement shows, however, that license fees amounted to $997,500 against $840,000 in 1924.

Assembling An Economic Four Tube Set

The Elkay Selective Receiver Described By Harry J. Marx—List of Parts.

The problem of selecting the proper and best parts for a receiving set is one that requires a little attention. In the list specified below it is recommended that substitution be very carefully considered for all the major units. Such items as jacks, binding posts, rheostats and the like are not so important of course.

List of Parts Required.

One Panel, 7 x 18.
One Binding Post Panel Strip, 1¾ x 17⅝.
One Baseboard, ¾ x 9¾ x 17⅝.
One Elkay Variable Clarifying Selector, Type C.
One Lombardi Variable Condenser, .0005 mfd. with Vernier Control.
One Elkay Vario-Transformer, Type VT-25.
Four Standard Tube Sockets.
One Double Circuit Jack.
One Open Circuit Filament Control Jack.
One Stabilizer, 5,000 to 250,000 ohms.
One Rheostat, 10 ohms.
One Battery Switch.
Two Audio Frequency Transformers.
One By-Pass Condenser, 0.5 mfd.
One Set Four Elkay Filament Control Cartridges with Mounting.
One Fixed Condenser, .002 mfd.
One Grid Condenser with Clips, .00025 mfd.
One Grid Leak, 5 Megohms.
Eight Binding Posts.
Dials and Knobs.
Necessary Wire, Spaghetti, Screws, etc.
Cabinet to suit.

In order to reduce the necessary expense in the purchase of all these parts and also to simplify the selection of good parts, a kit containing all the required units including wire, engraved and drilled panel, binding post panel strip, baseboard, blueprints and instructions but not including the cabinet, have been placed on the market by the Langbef Kaufman Radio Company of New Haven, Connecticut. The complete outfit is ready for the assembly of the apparatus and then the wiring.

Assembly and Wiring.

The assembly of the apparatus on the front panel should present no difficulties. The layout of the baseboard is clearly shown in figure 3, which also gives the picture diagram of the wiring connections to the apparatus. No dimensions are needed for the baseboard layout as there is ample room. It is advisable to put terminal lugs on all the binding posts of the various pieces of apparatus in order to facilitate wiring connections. The baseboard layout shows small circles where holes are drilled close to various terminals in order to run wiring underneath the wooden baseboard. This is the reason why the wiring is shown in some places in dotted lines in figure 3. A heavy black dot is shown where wires are connected together, while loops are shown where no connection is to be made.

All wiring should be made as direct and as short as possible. All soldering should be carefully done and tested in order to make sure of a good electrical connection. All wiring on the under side of the baseboard should be covered with spaghetti as well as the wiring on top where there is any possibility of a short circuit.

Tuning The Set.

The stabilizer is set in about mid-position for wavelengths of about 300 meters, for lower wavelengths turn to the right and higher to the left. Proper adjustment of the stabilizer will prevent all squealing, yet permitting maximum results with the set.

For normal work set the selectivity knob to about the middle position, the volume knob should be a little more than the center or "M" mark. Keep the dials "1" and "2" in about the same relation. They should be turned up and down the scale until a station is heard. The selectivity knob can then be adjusted for clearness and the volume knob set as desired. Stations can be logged and brought in again on the same setting.

If interfergnce is bad, set the clarifier knob toward the side to which the arrow points, but for reception in the daytime turn it back to the other side.

BROADENING OUT IS UNSETTLED

Will Likely Be Interpreted By U.F.O. Local Clubs as They See Fit.

DEBATE CLOSED.

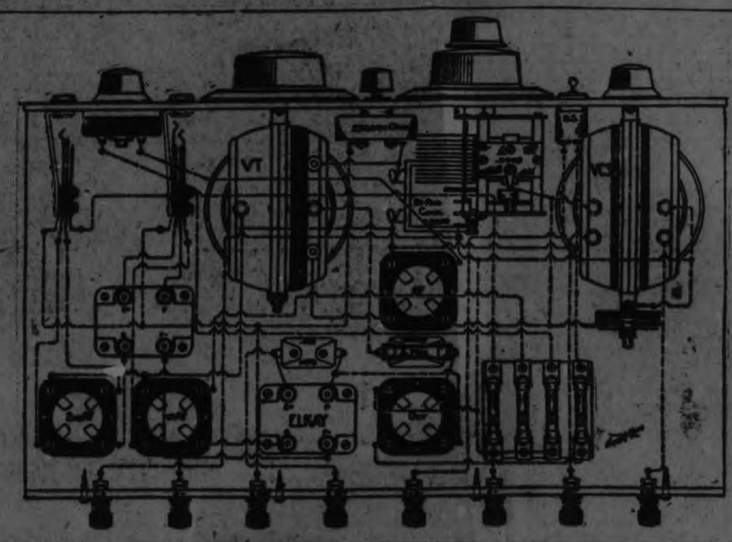
TORONTO, Ont., December 12. — Canadian Press. — Whether political action to be taken by United Farmers of Ontario in the future is to be confined to the farmers themselves or whether it is to embrace all people who care to join in, is s till a mystery after the storm at the close of the annual meeting of the organization here.

The point remains unsettled and among the delegates remaining over in town there is an opinion that the various local riding associations will interpret the political resolution as they see fit.

Without doubt the motion to adjourn which terminated the debate on the broadening out policy of the U.F.O. stopped an all n ht session.

The head office organization of the U.F.O. will accept Mr. Morrison's contention that the resolution for continued and renewed political activity means that such action must be by the farmers themselves, as in 1919.

In many countries of the world there still exists a belief that those born on Christmas Day have the power of healing by the "laying on of hands," and also possess second sight.



Turkey, Gobble Now; Ours Turn Is Coming!

Most Birds That Grace Peterboro Tables Were Well Brought Up in Local Circles.

Unlike their brethren in the larger centres the people of Peterborough don't have to go far to obtain the Christmas turkeys. The local demand is entirely met by the farmers of the district, and sometimes they have enough to ship some to the larger cities. This year, while some people report that their flocks were not up to standard, there has been no report yet of the number being insufficient to supply the citizens of Peterborough with their favorite Christmas repast, and cooks will carry in turkeys and set them before impatient diners in many homes of the city.

Raising turkeys is rather a speculative proposition. The little gobblers seem to have very delicate mechanisms and little is required to start them on the way to an early grave. Cold, damp weather is the worst enemy of the turkey raiser. There is an old saying that a good year for grass-hoppers is a good year for turkeys. No explanation is forthcoming. It may be that the turkeys wax strong and lusty, feasting on the lively insects, or obtain the needed physical exercise in chasing them. Perhaps, again, the weather that is good for the grasshopper is good for the turkey.

The average Peterborough man, when he sits down to the table on Christmas lets the state of the grasshoppers' health worry him not a whit. All that concerns him is whether, after the family preference has been satisfied, he will be able to get a drum stick, or the wishbone, or whatever portion of the fowl seems good unto him, with plenty of stuffing, and a good helping of plum pudding or mince pie or whatever the cook may provide. Grasshoppers may live, or grasshoppers may die, so long as he is able to finance a turkey for his Christmas repast he is content.

The railways near this city have been cut and Peking-Tientsin motor road destroyed in several places.

Boston's most exclusive social organization is the Century Club, composed of an even dozen inmates of a Hebrew home for the aged. The one requirement for membership is that the applicant must be 100 years old.

The wise spinster would rather travel hopefully without arriving than not at all.

Peterborough's Transportation Problem Takes Another Turn

Street Railway About to Give Way to Busses on Many Routes—The First Car.

Since away back beyond the Stone Age, when a man first had the desire to go somewhere, perhaps to a feast or a fight, farther away or more quickly than his feet could carry him, the problem of transportation has faced man. The mule, donkey and the horse served their day, and are still serving it in many places, but they were found wanting and were pushed aside late in the nineteenth century in towns and cities. Now the question is being raised, "Is the street car going to be replaced by the automobile or bus?" This question is heard on the streets of Peterborough, and it wi l soon be answered. The local street railway company are compromising by retaining some street cars and adding large motor buses. The buses are now on order and will soon be in service.

This change in the street railway system here takes minds back to the time when the street car was first introduced in Peterborough.

The First Track.

Back in 1894, a company of local business men, headed by W. H. Bradburn (now M.P.P.), set about to build the first street car line. The track extended from the Auburn to the Exhibition Grounds. It was certainly a Toonerville Trolley Line, for one street car, old No. 8, plied its lonely way, rattling and bouncing up and down George street. Michael Neary was the first conductor and L. Lograndor, the first motorman. It is a safe bet that even then worried mothers warned their children "to watch out for the car" before venturing across the street, and that many a horse was "held tight" while the car went by. Later, other cars were added.

This system lasted for four years, but in 1898, since too many people preferred to walk, the cars stopped running. For four years the tracks lay unused and they became almost buried up. In 1904 the Quaker Oats Company bought out the rights of the first company and again the street cars began operating. This company extended the line to the river and a line was built to the gate of the Canadian General plant. Later, the Jackson Park line was added. In 1914 the Leamore Power Company bought the service and they established a fifteen minute service. In 1916, the Hydro took over the whole line and they brought in the present 10-minute service and a few years later they extended the line to its present limits. At the present time there are nine regular cars.

Faithful Service.

In writing of the street car service one cannot help but remember and mention the long and faithful service some of the employees have given the company and the public in very exacting work. Motorman Donley has been working on the cars for the past twenty years and Jack McCann has been with the car company since its birth.

The local street car men are affiliated with the Union, and the executive of the local union is composed of G. H. Smith, President; J. Collins, vice-President; R. J. Guthrie, Secretary and W. J. Young, Treasurer. All these men have served long periods with the company.

WHITE TERROR RAMPANT IN ALL BALKAN STATES

To Shame of Christian Humanity, Says French Author.

STAMPING OUT REDS.

Military Tribunals Sentence Alleged Reds Without Conclusive Proof.

VIENNA, Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press.)—All the Balkan States, including Hungary, are given up to an inhuman "white terror" to the shame of Christian humanity, said Henri Barbusse, French author, on his return here from a private mission to Vienna to investigate the recent trial at Tater-Bunar of alleged revolutionists.

M. Barbusse in a speech at a public meeting charged that the Rumanian government had been unable to produce documentary proofs that the revolutionaries had acted under instructions from Moscow. He said Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, had the appearance of a graveyard. Any man there giving information concerning prevailing conditions, he added, risked death.

A despatch from Bucharest, December 3, said the secret military tribunal at Shissinau, Rumania, had pronounced sentences against eighty-five Bessarabian peasants accused of having participated in raids made at Tatar-Bunar, allegedly by a Soviet band. Sentences ranging from two to twenty years were imposed on those convicted.

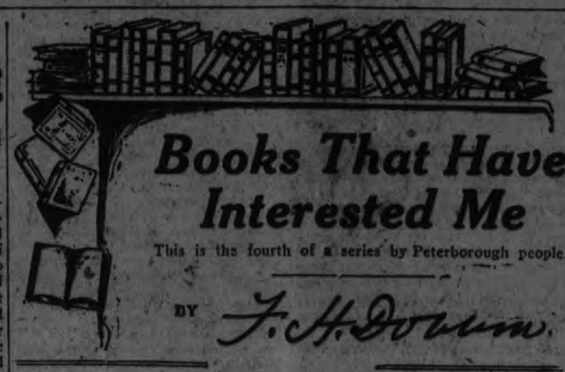
RESERVE JUDGMENT IN TOWNSEND CASE

Appellate Division Heard Appeal From Oshawa, Sentence.

TORONTO, December 12. Canadian Press. — The Appellate Division at Osgoode Hall, has reserved judgment after hearing the appeal of Frederick James Townsend, who was sentenced by Magistrate Hind of Oshawa to three years imprisonment for forgery of a cheque for $4.50 and to one year, to run consecutively, for obtaining goods worth $8.39, on false pretenses. The appeal was presented by F. M. Field, K.C., and was opposed by Colonel Grierson. Crown Prosecutor.

A statement by Townsend was read by Mr. Field. The young man's age was given as 27 and not 24, as formerly stated. Mr. Field suggested that the case would be fully met if his client were allowed out on suspended sentence. In any event Mr. Field thought, one month would have been sufficient.

Col. Grierson stated the accused owed between $600 and $700 in Oshawa. He had declared hat the country owed him a living—and he was going to get it. It was not true that he was not asked before sentence whether he had anything to say.



Books That Have Interested Me

This is the fourth of a series by Peterborough people.

BY F. H. Dowson.

The Examiner has asked a number of men, myself among the number, to write and tell of ten books that have influenced each or other, as the case may be, and influenced the most. As a query the interrogation seems all right, but speculative. To ask as to books that have influenced might be transferred to "interested," with larger results. Men tell of being influenced by this or that book, but I doubt the profundity of the impression. The young boy reader may be fascinated by the story of "Treasure Island," or have been profoundly impressed by the captivating narrative of "Robinson Crusoe," at the time, but these books have made no determining influence on his after life. An impression, if it sinks in deep enough, should in turn exercise an influence, though the passage of years may dim both the impression and influence, if any. As a presumably moral living people, with decent instincts and observances, we should all, with one accord, reply that the Book of Books, the Old Bible has influenced. Is this so well established that we can recognize the results of biblical reading and application? Get your pastor, if he has the time, to carry this enquiry to its logical conclusion, for the columns of The Examiner offer no place for polemical discussion.

The above speculations lead up to my telling of one book that vitally interested me in the years that have gone sliding and slithering down the declivity of Time. No doubt the same book gained the attention of others, now of same years as myself, and living at the time in something of the same environment, which means being incarcerated in the dingy old log or plastered wall school house in the days when, to use the motto of the Irish hedge schoolmaster, "if the mind didn't mark, faith they'd soon mark the back." The administering of corporeal punishment was more than a profession, it was an art. So highly practiced that, if perpetrated to-day, would fill the local police court with cases of assault and battery to profusion.

But to come back to this illustrious book—one I shall never forget; couldn't if I would—never allowed, for more than two years, to even momentarily let it out of sight or mind. It held for me, and others, untold miseries, because of our educational lapses and forgetfulness. It was my personal companion at home, on the street and at school. This, at the time, highly disliked book was the old Fourth Reader.

Its covers of a mean grey cotton; the pages riveted together, an example of permanency to the bookbinding guilds of to-day; about an inch and one-half thick; compiled, printed and bound in Edinburgh, Scotland, and, as the title page flatly and brazenly announced, "for use in the Colonies." I am willing to confess that this book influenced me, for I hold in the galleries of memory, portions of its texts as yet, though much of the contents was a dreary mass of printed pages of little concern to a growing boy, and dealt with things that held for him no interest whatever.

I have not looked on or inside the covers of a copy of the Fourth Reader for the last fifty-five years. One might be found stuffed into some attic or thrown into a corner, but if so, never brought to light. The copy I used was thumbed, scribbled on, inked, ravelled and dejected looking—all done with writing ink, for at the time lead pencils were a luxury and the slate and pencil the usual way of transmitting written notes, remarks or general information; also crude sketches of master and pupils, all penciled on the slate by fingers, backed up a vivid, if hasty, imagination.

I am particular in describing this book for I am perfectly certain we shall never see its like again. A companion atrocity was the Fifth Reader, but I never explored its pages, being quite satisfied that the Fourth Reader brought to me all of trouble that I required. The Fourth Reader was the principal book of study in the Fourth Form, where the teacher taught everything, to his class, in one room, from which there was only one door by which to escape. I think there was a book on grammar, but the study, as taught, seemed one that no reasonable boy could understand. A fearful treatise on arithmetic, with the answers to the problems that we never could solve properly, in a few pages at the end of the volume, and from which we covertly snatched the solutions when needs must. When the Fourth class assembled as the Fourth class, it stayed in the Fourth class room until the tasks of the day were done.

The days of which I write were the days of the old Grammar and Common School, housed in a deceased church that had been worked off on the inexperienced town council by an alert and financially interested board of trustees. The building was at the corner of Hunter and Sheridan streets, perched up on the bank, or side of the street—the years, 1858 to 1860—just at the time when the whole world was waiting with breathless interest for the consummation of the battle (Marquis of Queensbury rules to govern), between John C. Heenan, the American Bebica Boy and doughty Tom Sayers, the pugilistic champion of England, and, for that matter, of the fisti-cuff world. With such momentous affairs in sight, how could any reasonably active boy be expected to study—entirely out of the question. Eventually we suffered for much inattention.

The selections placed in the book for purposes of study were, in the main, well chosen, but made by some one who apparently had the idea that the pupils would all be about the ages of twenty-six, or thereabouts. Good, solid, intellectual food, but put before the wrong congregation. About the middle of the book came a History of the Israelites. I am not sure whether the House of Judah or the House of Israel went to bat first in the deplorative narrative. For about thirty pages there was a general genealogical succession of the kings that prevailed during a couple of hundred years—men and rulers of a sort, and with such fearful names as Jehoahaz, Zerubbabel, Mulchijah, together with Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, and his fellow-conspirator, Sennacherib, the pirate who "came down like a wolf on the fold," as told in verse and narrative. These names and scores of others we were expected to memorize, state succession of reign and action, and pronounce all with unfailing regularity. This part of the book was an educational nightmare.

A few pages taught the elements of mechanics, and there were pictures of the five mechanical powers, the inclined plane, the lever, the pulley, the wedge and the screw, the only pictures in the book. Over towards the end of these selections was snugged in the only bright spot in a desert of dismal relation, "The Vision of Mirza," that entrancing story from, I think, the Arabian Nights Entertainment.

The narrative is a well renowned classic and prevails unto the present day in many books of study and recitation.

The closing thirty pages of the book contained selected poems, few of which a boy of ten years of age could appreciate, but which none the less, reflected credit on the wisdom, taste and discernment of those who prepared the selections. These poems we were required to commit to memory, and I frankly state that all that I retain in memory of poetry of the better sort is what was hammered into our heads during three years of enforced application! Teacher Fairbairn, a Scot of the Scotch, and red-headed to boot, a genius in deft application of the taws (a sort of Russian knout), and Teacher Patterson, an artist in the application of a flexible and sinuous cane, strove with us, and inculcated perfect recita- "or our backs would pay a penalty. Patterson's energy and persistence, removed from Peterborough, car. into the seat of the Lieut. Gover. e Province of Manitoba. Mr. Patt ter a specially furious flagellation ion was resigned.

I remember, appearance of the pages and can locate the opening stanzas of the poems as being at the op, middle or bottom of each page, so well does memory define these things. The introduction to this section of the book was headed "Selected Poems of Interest," a whole page being given to the brief announcement. Above and below the title was scrawled with pen and ink uncouth drawings and random notes.

I quote a fragment from each poem that those who read may say, "I remember, I remember." Now, memory is a curious thing and often needs to be provoked in order to act. Something stays dormant in the brain until memory is jogged and recollection brings forward the incident or story, and which emphasizes the familiar "that reminds me," so much esteemed by those who have contracted the habit of speaking in public. So I quote a line or so from each poem that memory may get to work.

In supposition I have placed the Fourth Reader beside the machine and shall turn the pages and write that which comes to view as the pages follow.

"The stately homes of England,
How beautiful they stand," and the attendant reference to the more homely scene

"The cottage homes of England
Around the hearth by night."

Some reflective philosopher soliloquizes, filling a half page with:

"The clock strikes one,
We take no note of Time
But from its loss,
To give it then a tongue,
Is wise in man."

Byron's majestic eulogy of the mighty deep, in resonant phrases:

"Roll on, thou deep and dark blue ocean, roll,
Three thousand fleets sweep over thee in vain."

Who can forget the sweeping cadences of:

"The Assyrian came down like a wolf on the fold,
And his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold."

Gray's immortal elegy, written in a country churchyard, supplies a couplet:

"The curfew tolls the knell of 'parting day,
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea."

And that apt phrase, probably the best quoted in the English language, "The path of glory leads but to the grave."

Then a queer, fantastic creation and invocation, as offered to the mummy shown in Belzoni's exhibition (in London):

"And thou hast walked about, how strange a story,
In Thebes streets ten thousand years ago
When the Memnonium was in all its glory."

A battle piece, tragic and sorrowful:

"On Linden, when the sun was low,
All silent lay the untrodden snow."

Ten stanzas from Colridge's Ancient Mariner, followed:

"All day she lay upon the deep
And knew not drift nor motion,
As idle as a painted ship
Upon a painted ocean."

Is there a school boy or girl, who quit school forty years ago, who does not remember

"A soldier of the Legion Lay dying in Algiers."?

It was there on the printed page, bringing to the boyish reader visions of romance, fighting, the glamour of war and the penalty of participation.

Then is offered, as an admonition, that while sleep may be excellent, slumber at untimely times is a thing to be reproved:

"'Tis the voice of the sluggard,
I've heard him complain."

Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," with the opening line of:

"The night was dark and the way was cold."

"Not a drum was heard nor a funeral note
As his corpse from the ramparts hurried."

And in succession as the pages are turned comes Campbell's noble lines expressing a zenith of loyalty to and admiration for his native land, Scotland:

"Breathes there a man, with soul so dead,
Who never to himself has said,
This is my own, my native land."

The old soldier tells of the tragedy and triumph of the Battle of Blenheim, in short line verse, thus:

"'Twas on a summer evening,
Old Caspar's work was done,
And he beside his cottage door
Was sitting in the sun,
Beside him sported on the green,
His little grandchild Whilimeg."

One of the finest of descriptive poems depicting the allied English French and Turkish forces drawn up in battle array, awaiting the onset of the heights of the Alma, in the Crimean war, an inspiration for that historic painting, "The Thin Red Line," was the poem.

"The Islemen of the West." Just a reference to the English:

"Who are these mighty Islesmen,
Who hold the keys of earth,
And plant beside the crescent moon
The banner of their birth?"

Then a plaintive appeal, done in simple but appropriate verse, "Who Is Thy Neighbour?":

"Thy neighbour is the weary soul,
Tired in thought and limb."

Filling in to complete a page, was that battle hymn of the Clansmen, "Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled," and the spirited lines of "The Battle of the Baltic," with another of Dibdin's songs of the frigate and the Wooden Walls of Old England.

Not to forget Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome, in:

"For Rome in Roman quarrels,
Spared neither lands nor gold,
Nor life, nor wife in Roman strife
In the brave days of old."

I have quoted from memory sufficient to identify selection and theme. The wording may be incorrect, in spots, but the fragments may serve to recall the book and the boys.

Woman Commits Battery On a Trio of U.S. Policemen

KANSAS CITY, Kans., Dec. 12. —(United Press.)— Five policemen attempted to raid the home of Mrs. Mary Sunday on Monday and on Tuesday three of them were nursing injuries in the hospital.

At first two officers, suspecting liquor in the Sunday house, entered and found a pint. They called for the wagon which brought three more patrolmen and in the melee which ensued three were badly scratched and bitten by the woman, arrested and bound over under $1,000 bond.

"Oh, I Cannot Eat. There is Not a Thing that I Want"

"BUT you will never gain strength if you do not eat."

"No, I suppose not."

"What did the Doctor say?"

"He blames it all on my nerves; says my nervous system is exhausted and that I have nervous indigestion."

"Does he think you will soon be better?"

"No; he says I will have to be patient and let my digestive system rest and my nerves gradually regain vigor."

"Well, I know what I would do."

"What is that?"

"I would start in right now with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I have been nursing on so many cases just like yours and have seen so many restored by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that I am sure it is just what you need to build up your nerves and make you well."

"I have heard lots of my friends tell about using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when they get run down, but it never occurred to me to try it myself."

"Well, I certainly would try it if I were you. I have never seen such results as a treatment for the nerves from any other medicine."

"If you will go around to the drug store and get me a box I will start in right now. Goodness knows, I need something to build up the nervous system so that I can eat and sleep and get some strength."

"All right, I will do that, and I know you will thank me for suggesting it."

"How I Upset His Dog House"

An Insurance Story From Real Life

"IT was during our college days away back in the closing years of the last century," writes Rev. L. W. Parker of Parrsboro, N.S., in the Mutualist, "that I went into the room of a classmate and found him in hot argument with his chum. On religious grounds my friend objected to taking out an insurance policy.

"I was appealed to and took part in the discussion.

"Something I said caught my friend off his guard. He admitted the moral necessity of fire and marine insurance, while contending that our lives should be entirely entrusted to Providence. Once the admission as to fire and marine insurance was made, however, the way was easy and he was soon floundering for foothold in his defense.

"A few days later he came to me and, true to his honest soul, admitted defeat.

"'How you caught me I do not know,' he said, 'but you upset my dog house in two minutes.'"

Years went by. Mr. Parker's friend was accidentally drowned. He went to visit the bereaved people. An invalid sister and the old folks were alone in their grief. They had toiled to put their only boy through college. While looking over his old friend's books he heard the daughter say to her father, "Ask Mr. Parker about it." Hearing his name he turned to where they were sitting at a table upon which were spread some papers, and among them they had found a life insurance policy.

"No one will ever know the satisfaction I had in the thought that when I 'upset the dog house' that day in my chum's room I opened the way for these old people who had suffered, to receive over thirteen hundred dollars in a just way. The old folks are gone. The sister also. I have passed through the little village many times since, but never without a feeling of gratitude that I was permitted to have a small part in making the evening of their lives a little more comfortable."

December 12th THE JUNIOR EXAMINER For Boys & Girls

A Surprise Coming

Dear Boys and Girls:

I will have a pleasant surprise for you after Christmas, but I am not going to tell you yet what it will be. In fact, I shall tell first of all those who have written to me. Then after I have sent them letters I shall announce it through The Junior Examiner.

The story of Lohengrin is completed to-day. How did you like it? I think it one of the nicest little stories I have ever read.

On another page of this paper you will find a story called "The Gift." This is a splendid story about a little boy and his Christmas present, which you will enjoy.

Are you clipping out The Junior Examiner? I am saving it every week and it will make a nice book in time. Buy a five-cent exercise book and paste The Junior Examiner on the pages.

Some boys and girls have written to tell me what they want Santa to bring them, and I am passing on the letters to him. I hope he has enough to go around.

—Uncle John.

WHAT MAKES A TRAIN GO

"What makes the train go?" a boy asks me in a very nice letter, and the question takes us back a very long time into the past. It takes us, in fact, to a kettle boiling on a stove and a man who started thinking for himself about the steam, and wondering what could be done with it.

The first real railway was opened just one hundred years ago last September, the engine being built by George Stephenson. The first engines built on this side of the Atlantic (in 1832) weighed four to six tons; today many weigh fifty and sixty times as much and can pull loads of thousands of tons.

The locomotive moves because water heated by the fire in the furnace is changed into steam, which expands or enlarges so fast that can push aside anything that can be moved. So, when it is let into one of the cylinders by the valve, it pushes the rod called the piston forward, when the rear valve is opened, or backward, when the front valve is opened. This is what makes the engine move.

Are You Clever?

ANSWERS TO LAST WEEK'S PROBLEMS.

1. This is not so easy as the first how many stamps were left when Jack had taken his share. Seeing that Frank had one more than half, Harry must have had one less than half. You know that Harry had three, therefore four must have been half the number that Harry and Frank divided. Four is the half of eight, so that Frank had five, which is one more than half of eight. Now, we must find how many Jack had. Jack's share was one more than half of the total number, and therefore the number divided by Frank and Harry must have been one fewer than half of the total. Frank and Harry's share came to eight, as we have seen; and the half of the total quantity, being one more than eight, was nine. Jack had ten, which is one more than half of the total quantity, and there were thus eighteen stamps altogether.

2. If a man says that he has no brothers and sisters, his father would have only one son—himself. Thus, if what he says is put in simple language, it is: "That man's father is myself." The picture was that of his own son.

Belief in witchcraft is not dead. In England only a few months ago a man was sentenced to a month's imprisonment for assaulting a woman by thrusting a long pin into hr arm. The accused admitted the offence, but declared that the woman had bewitched his pig. To draw blood fro ma witch, he said, was the only way to outwit her.

The Story Of Lohengrin, Knight of the Holy Grail

The Junior Examiner two-part story.

PART II.

Synopsis: An evil-minded knight, Frederick, accuses Elsa, of taking her brother away to lose him so that she might inherit the Duchy of Brabant. Elsa tells of a beautiful knight, and asks King Henry of Saxony to have the trumpeters call him. Down the river comes a boat, drawn by a white swan, bearing the knight, who defeats Frederick but spares his life. Now go on with the story.

"Victory lies with the knight," decreed the King. "Tomorrow Frederick and Ortrud, his wife, must leave this realm forever."

Then was there great shouting and joy. The soldiers carried the knight to the castle upon his shield, and Elsa upon the King's. Everyone began to discuss preparations for the wedding, which would take place the following day. Frederick and Ortrud slunk away un-noticed into the night.

But bitter thoughts were rising in their breasts, and they resolved to revenge themselves against the King and Elsa and the knight.

"Did you hear the knight make Elsa promise never to ask him his name?" said Ortrud. "It must be that some great unhappiness will come upon them if she does."

"I want them to be unhappy," snarled Frederick. "Go and tempt her to break her word."

Ortrud crept to Elsa's house, and artfully suggested to her that the reason the knight wished to remain unknown was because he had done something dishonorable. But Elsa would not listen to her.

"I trust him absolutely," she said.

"Then I must resort to witchcraft," muttered Ortrud, as she stole defeated away. "I'll weave spells to make her doubt him and question him."

Next day was the wedding day; and the morning dawned clear and sunny. The whole town was in a whirl of excitement. Pages and minstrels and serving men ran hither and thither, and outside the Cathedral a large crowd gathered to watch the bride and bridegroom arrive. At last, preceded by heralds and accompanied by Court ladies, came Elsa in her golden wedding dress. Then followed the King with the unknown knight. Ortrud and Frederick, who were hiding behind one of the pillars of the cathedral, attempted to stop the ceremony. But in vain. The happy pair were married.

But Ortrud's spells were beginning to work. "Am I never to speak of your name?" asked Elsa to her husband a little later; "or learn the name of your country?"

"My country is one of great joy and light," answered he. "But I pray you not to question me."

A sort of madness descended on Elsa. "Tell me your name!" she cried. "I must know it. Tell me! Tell me!"

At that moment the door burst open. In rushed Frederick, armed with four soldiers, determined to make the last attempt on his enemy's life. But the knight, with one blow of his sword, killed him as he advanced, and his followers ran, terrified, away.

Then the knight turned to Elsa. "You have broken your promise," said he. "And now I must leave you forever."

The King, Elsa and many lords and ladies gathered in the meadow to bid the knight a sad farewell. Far up the river the white swan could be seen bringing the boat back to him.

The knight spoke: "Now that I go from you," he said, "I may tell you who I am. My name is Lohengrin, and I come from Montsalvat. There I and other knights like me, guard the Holy Grail day and night, and leave it only to help the oppressed and to champion the weak ones. The Grail was given to us by angels, and while we keep it we have purity and courage. Sometimes a dove from heaven descends upon it, and then our hearts are glad."

Lohengrin turned to Elsa, "Before I go I will give you back your brother, who has been the victim of the wicked Ortrud's enchantments." So saying, he stretched out his hand to the swan. The swan sank, and in its place rose Godfrey, strong and ruddy.

"Take my sword," said Lohengrin to him. "It will give victory in battles. Take my golden horn, which will bring help in time of danger. And take this ring to remind you of one who has loved and fought for your sister."

Lohengrin stepped into the boat, and the white dove of the Holy Grail fluttered down from heaven, took the cord in its bill, and drew the little craft slowly upstream.

Away, away, it went, 'till the knight's silver armour grew dim in the distance. Then it rounded a bend in the river and was lost to sight.

Hints That May Help You To Choose Your Presents

Have you seen the lovely things that are in the stores for Christmas buying? They are beautiful things this year, seemingly daintier even than in other seasons.

If you want to remind a friend that a letter is due you, here is some of the new ragged-edge stationery with gilded borders or one of the new big boxes of writing materials, the sort that opens up like a book and comes in pastel shades.

Toilet accessories are always welcome. A delicate new French odor comes in a flat bottle with a double bordering of black checks in enamel, a gay box with splashes of red on its bright gilt top holds a Japanese lady in green enamel, with haughty eyebrows and an accommodating head that unscrews for the bestowal of your favorite perfume in her little frame. Little red leather purse cases enclose tiny bottle of scent, and there are small brass cylinders that also act as cases for various types of perfume.

A lovely orange-colored case holds an oval bottle of pale pink powder, flanked by a cylindrical bottle of tawny scent and another has a complete outfit of perfume, toilet water, lipstick and vanity case. In a brass holder that resembles nothing so much as a pocket flask is an innocent talcum powder.

If you long for an old-time drink, you can get an imitation syrup in tiny tinfoil-wrapped chocolate bottles, labelled "rum" and "brandy." Biting off the head gives you the opportunity to quaff the fluid within. Or you can buy a big glass bottle of dark liquor whose title of "Cherry Brandy" is marred by the addition of "Substitute" in parentheses.

For the smoker there are huge jars of a favorite mixture, with a heavy glass top, or a cigarette holder that resembles "Adrian golf" balls, with dice emblems on a white ground.

There are new compacts in a "glove" size, double affairs containing a tiny mirror and compartments for rouge and powder.

For miladi's use there are dainty things; a fitted dressing case with a complete set of the lovely new pearl and amber ware; a marvellous green silk interior to another case that holds a French ivory set fo the new type, the backs covered with transparent celluloid that has had silver dust stippled upon it. You may purchase this set in gold too, or in a gold stripe. Or buy her an outfit or tortoiseshell, with the light shining through its clear brown.

In the florists' windows are Christmas goods; rosy-red cyclamens, little Jerusalem cherry trees and miniature evergreens sprinkled with crystal dust and the bright pinks of oleander blossoms.

In a window is a pink pearl bracelet, like a fairy gift, or a tea set in the glory of soft greyish-blue lustre, a cake plate with a dainty design like frostwork on a window, or a brass book rest, with the Guatama Buddha brooding over the mystery of life.

For the kiddies, there is something new in an electric train that reverses itself automatically by simply shutting off the electric power, and rattle blocks that are amusing and instructive, for they rattle as they form educational effects. Or there is a tandem pair of tiny black French poodles, astride a bar, a sporty gentleman driving a striped zebra, or an Indian chieftain in yellow, with red head feather, riding a cayuse to war. Felix the Cat, the jaunty feline of the movies, is here too, immortalized in black tin, with white whiskers and eyeballs.

Something distinctively Canadian are the fountain pens made in Toronto, which come in pretty colors and compare favorably with the American product that has been generally bought on this side.

Nature Misses Her Cue In Making Up For War.

More Boys Should be Born to Make Up for War Wastage—Peterboro Has More Girls.

Nature is supposed to work on rules that are immutable, and she (for, like most institutions of importance, Nature is always referred to as "she") does not err either. One of the most important ufnctions of Nature is to replenish the earth. Men may die and provide food for hungry worms, but the mill that produced them goes on, turning out more examples of humanity who will in time also come under the scythe of the Grim Reaper and join the vast army of shadowy folk who wait on another shore, or, according to transmigrationists, make a busy way along other planets to a final redemption and a happy eternity.

After a war, Nature is supposed to send along more boy babies. Up to the present war and its cannon fodder have been supplied mainly from masculine ranks, so men are needed at its conclusion.

In Peterboro, Nature evidently slipped up. In 1918, which, up to November, was a war year, this city had a total of 219 male births and 224 females. In the two years following, it continued along a lax course which permitted more little girls to arrive in the world in this particular district than there were boys. In 1919, 222 male births were recorded and 233 females and in 1920, 255 boys and 267 girls.

The two years immediately following started in to make up for this laxity by providing, in 1921, 284 boys and 270 girls, and in 1922, 278 boys and 270 girls. In 9123, however, the girls again gained the upper hand and outstripped the boys by 10, with a total of 280 ladies added to the city's population, and 270 men. In 1924, there were 276 boys born and 256 girls.

The first new arrival in Peterboro in the year following the war, 1919, was Francis Forth, who came on New Year's Day. The next day, a little boy and two girls, William Robert King, Dorothy Constance Boyd and Marjorie Muriel Grady, divided the honors, and on January 3rd, three little ladies arrived, Elizabeth May Carpenter, Esme Lucy Hitchins and Madonna Rosaline Hurtubise.

TOO TOUGH FOR THAT.

Aptness in repartee amongst London slum dwellers, and the following, told by Thomas Burke, the author of "Limehouse Nights," is one of the best.

A woman was buying meat at a street stall, and a previous purchase from the same butcher had evidently not given her satisfaction.

"I want a pahnd o' steak," she said, "and I want steak as we can put our teeth into."

"Yes, ma'am!" said the butcher soothingly.

"Yus!" replied the woman. "The bit o' steak you sold me Saturday was that tough I could 'ave soled my 'usband's boots wiv it."

"Well, why didn't you?" replied the butcher airily.

Quick as a flash came the retort: "So I would if I cold 'ave got the tacks to go through it."

CRIMES TRACED BY MARKS ON BULLETS

New Instrument Reveals Flaws in Gun Barrels That Leave Telltale Clues.

Bullets figuring prominently in the trials of criminal cases sometimes will reveal upon their surfaces abnormalities that may have been caused by defects within the gun barrels through which they have passed. Such a point was at issue in the recent murder trial of Gerald Chapman, and there was considerable difference of opinion as to the actual cause of certain markings on bullets in evidence. An examination of the gun barrel to settle the matter could have been carried out adequately only by sawing it in two lengthwise, and thus destroying its value as evidence.

Future questions of this kind need not be left unanswered, says the January "Popular Science Monthly," for even during the Chapman trial a group of New York arms experts—Charles E. Waite, Major Calvin H. Goddard, Philip O. Gravelle, and John H. Fisher—were working upon an invention that solves the difficulty without the least injury to the firearm. Recently they completed a remarkable instrument called a "helixometer," which makes it possible to examine through a microscope every portion of the inside of a revolver or rifle barrel. At the end of a tube inserted in the barrel is a tiny lens and a microscopically small electric light bulb. With these it is possible to examine the interior of the barrel for flaws that might be reproduced on a bullet fired through it.

Through long research Waite has established the fact that no two rifled revolver barrels ever are exactly alike. Although made with exactly the same tools, the minute grooves and elevations in the rifling of the barrels will, he says, always mark the bullets fired from the barrels in such a way that his machine always can identify them beyond question.

A second instrument developed for the identification of bullets consists of two complete microscopes connected by a prismatic arrangement so that the two images seen through them can be made to overlap. A bullet taken from a murder victim is mounted beneath the microscope and a sample bullet shot from the suspected gun is mounted beneath the other. Strong light is thrown on both bullets in such a way that the infinitely small scratches and grooves produced by minute irregularities within the barrels are brought into prominent relief. By turning both bullets carefully, it is possible to compare the markings on one bullet with those on the other, and if it is found that they correspond exactly, doubt as to whether the fatal bullet came from the suspect's gun is dispelled.

To Make CHRISTMAS Merry

We told you Thanksgiving was coming, and it did. That shows you can depend on what we say. And now we are putting out the information that these rumors about Christmas being almost here are correct?

What are you going to give your wife for Christmas? Has she made up your mind on this subject yet? Don't let her do it. Be a rugged character and choose her gift yourself.

Buy your wife a nice soft-rubber rolling pin. Or maybe she would enjoy a new washing machine. How about a vacuum cleaner for her? She can chase you with a broom, but not with a vacuum cleaner. Maybe you could give her an electric iron. Electric irons are attached to the socket by their wires so cannot be thrown as easily as an ordinary flat iron. Nothing is too good for the sweet little woman. Make her happy this Christmas.

If you haven't got a wife maybe it is because you are a wife yourself. If that is the case, the chances are you have a husband. Very well, what will you give your husband for Christmas?

How about giving your husband a fit? Or you could give him a black eye? Has he had the measles? If he has, then you can give him the mumps for Christmas.

Maybe you are one of these women who are not mad at their husbands. Believe it or not, there are such women in this old world. Then how about giving him a beautiful set of silverware for Christmas? Perhaps he has silverware. Then you could buy him a pair of overalls, or a new coal scuttle, or a sewing basket, or a tea wagon.

You don't have to follow our advice unless you want to follow it. We don't want to do anything wrong. We are just trying to be a little sunbeam in a dreary world and help people with their shopping.

If you are a young lady what will you give your young men for Christmas? They must have some visible signs of your great affection. They can't take a kiss down town and show it to the gang, not unless you use too much rouge.

Have you one who is just too foolish for words? Then give him a fever blister, and it will keep you from having to slap him.

And, if you are a young man, what will you give your girl for Christmas? How about a lipstick? Give her a lipstick and you may get part of it back when she thanks you for it.

No matter if you are a boy, man, child, girl, woman, ignoramus, bank robber, book agent, politician or bill collector—no matter who you are, you must send Christmas cards. Who sent you unexpected cards last Christmas? Get even this year by sending them cards.

How about your enemies? Don't neglect them this Christmas. Give them saxophones, or folding beds, or bum radio outfits, or cheap cigars or move next door to them and buy yourself a phonograph or a player piano.

How about the stenographers? Buy them ten or fifteen boxes of chewing gum and a couple of spelling books.

Grouches need Christmas presents just the same as human beings. Buy one a box of dynamite caps and label it "candy."

After your husband has selected the children's toys get some more so they will have something to play with Christmas morning.

You can make the merchants happy by finishing paying for the presents you bought from them last Christmas, but this is considered too expensive for most of us.

You don't have to give the street car conductor a present. Skirts are so short now his life is happy enough.

Other suggestions are practically as follows:

Rich man: Special telephone so his son can call him up from the jail.

Poor Man: A suit of clothes which will last as long as its vest.

Beggar Man: The help he needs to make himself capable of earning a living.

Thief: A bad foot so he can get caught and spend the cold winter in a steam heated jail.

Doctor: Patients who have sense enough to get sick during the day instead of three o'clock in the morning.

Lawyer: A wife who can tell when he is lying.

Indian Chief: A few oil wells or a job in the movies.

We know what taxpayers would like to give politicians for Christmas, but we can't tell you because it isn't polite to write cuss words before lady readers.

Don't forget the dog this Christmas. Give him a couple of cats for chasing purposes.

Merry Christmas.

SWAN BOAT OWNER TO PAY DAMAGES

Chief Justice Meredith Finds That Boat Was Unsuitable.

TORONTO, Dec. 12. (Canadian Press). — For the deaths of Mrs. Watts and seven children in the sinking of the swanboat at Pinafore Lake, St. Thomas, last summer, Chief Justice Meredith has allowed judgment for $2,075 against Stoner, proprietor of the little picnic craft. Stoner is also required to pay all the costs except those incurred by adding the city of St. Thomas as defendants, the action against the city being dismissed.

Chief Justice Meredith finds that the boat was unfitted for its purpose.

OR WORDS TO THAT EFFECT

A spinster was shocked at the language used by two men repairing telegraph wires close to her house.

She wrote to the company on the matter, and the foreman was asked to report.

This he did in the following way: "Me and Bill were on this job. I was up the telephone pole, and accidentally let the hot lead fall on Bill. It went down his neck. Then he said: 'You really must be more careful, Harry.'"

America's largest Japanese-language school, erected at a cost of $100,000, has just been dedicated in San Francisco.

The Gift

By Cecilia M. Caldwell, Madoc.

ALFRED CONNELL lived in a substantial brick house on the outskirts of a backwoods village. It was two days before Christmas, and Alf had a big problem to solve. How could he get a penny to buy the Christmas present for his mother, on which he had set his heart?

Alf did not look like a poor little boy, but money was scarce in the brick house. Alf could count on one hand the number of cents he had owned in his six years of life. His father had a growing hardware business, but when one has a growing family as well one has no money for luxuries, or small boys.

In those days—twenty-five years before the Great War—small boys did not expect much. A copper was a large sum which took fully fifteen minutes to spend, for could one not have five marble candies for it or two all-day suckers?

But Alf needed not only one copper but two! He walked slowly down the path to the gate, sinking in the new-fallen snow to his fat little knees. An odd, roly-poly figure in his many winter wrappings he was, as he waded to his neighbour's door.

"Well, Alf," said Mrs. Brown, coming to the door. "You're out playing early this morning, I suppose. Having holidays now, eh?"

"Yes," said Alf with an eager look in his blue eyes. "Could I shovel your path for you, Mrs. Brown?"

"Why, my dear child, you're not big enough to shovel a path," cried Mrs. Brown. Then, seeing the look of disappointment on the child's face, she added kindly:

"Here's a cookie for you. Now run away and play. I'm busy baking this morning."

She shut the door, and Alf waded back down the un-shovelled walk, the tears ready to roll down his rosy cheeks. He looked sorrowfully at the cookie. He couldn't give his mother a cookie for Christmas, and he was sure he didn't want to eat it himself, but he did eat it and felt more cheerful. It gave him courage to cross the road and knock timidly at Mrs. Ketchum's door. He was afraid of Mrs. Ketchum. She was a hard-favored woman, lean and gaunt with years of toil. She spoke in a harsh voice:

"Well, young-un, what do you want? Hurry up, now. I've no time to waste on brats."

"If you please," said Alf, in a very small voice. "Could I shovel a path for you?"

"A path! It's work you're after, is it? Well, if you're workin' you can't get into mischief. The shovel's in the wood-shed." And she slammed the door.

Joyfully Alf sped for the shovel and set to work with a will. He was a strong little fellow, but oh, how long the path was. The handle was too big for his hands, his back ached and his arms grew sore. The diamond-sparkling snow blinded his eyes, but he worked on. At noon he came back breathless, rosy and triumphant. He had shovelled the path! To be sure it was a narrow, crooked little path with barely room for a man to set one foot ahead of the other, but to Alf it was a wonderful highway. It was more beautiful in his eyes than any broad, deeply-shovelled path done by a mere man. This time he knocked with a firm proud hand.

"What do you want now?" demanded the woman, answering his knock.

"I've finished the path," said Alfred with a little ring in his voice.

"Been at it all mornin', have you," said Mrs. Ketchum, peering out of the window. "Well, I s'pose it's better than nothin'. Ketchum can widen it when he comes home to-night. Here's an apple for you," and shoving a hard, red apple into Alf's unwilling hand, she closed the door.

This time the tears did roll down the chubby cheeks. Alf had been taught that he must never ask anyone for money and he knew he could not now, not even for his mother's Christmas present, but his small soul revolted at the injustice of the cooking apple. He turned back, opened the door, and laying the apple on the table, said in a choked voice:

"I don't want the apple, thank you," and sped down the path.

"Well, I'll be jing-swizzled!" exclaimed the woman to herself. "What's the matter with the kid?"

"I wonder what's the matter with Alf," said his mother anxiously the next morning. "He's hardly eaten anything since yesterday noon."

"To-morrow will be Christmas," Alf was saying to himself, and I've nothing to give my mother."

DESPERATELY he went to all the houses he knew, but no one had time to bother with little boys. At last he thought of Marjorie's mother. Marjorie was the little girl who sat in front of him at school, and once he had been at a party in her house. She lived at the opposite end of the village, but Alf was used to long distances, and with hope beating high, set off as fast as his short legs could carry him.

"Good-morning, Alf," said Marjorie's mother in a surprised voice. "Are you lost?"

"No, thank you," said Alf politely. "I came to see if there was anything I could do for you."

Marjorie's mother, though still more surprised and a little amused, gravely considered the question.

"Why, yes, Alf," she said at last. "You come in and have dinner with Marjorie, and then you may both go on an errand for me."

"I couldn't stay to dinner without telling mother," said Alf, out of the wisdom of past experience. "But I could come back afterwards and do the errand," he added hopefully.

"No," said Marjorie's mother. "It's too far, Alf, but go down to the store and ask your father. He can tell your motherwhen he goes home."

Alf enjoyed his dinner with Marjorie, but he had no mind to play afterward. He was aching to go on the errand, for the thought of the penny to be earned lay heavy on his heart. At last Marjorie's mother said:

"Now, children, get your wraps on and take this parcel over to old Mrs. Willard for me. Be sure you don't drop it, and go there first. When you have done that you may go down town and buy two loaves of bread. Here's the money, Marjorie. Put it in your little purse, and here's a copper for each of you. You may spend it while you are down town."

A copper! Alf's heart sank, for of what use was a copper when the desired gift cost a penny?

All the rest of the afternoon Alf was busily thinking how he could possibly earn another cent, but no one seemed to want anything done. He helped Marjorie carry the bread home, and then came back to the main street. Crowds of belated Christmas shoppers were rushing in and out of the gaily decorated stores. Sleigh-bells jingled merrily, and Christmas greetings rang through the frosty air from the family in the old-fashioned box sleigh to the group of friends chatting on the street. Everyone was happy, and laden down with bundles, everyone but Alf.

At five o'clock he turned homewards, one cent still clutched tightly inside his mitten, and his little heart bursting with grief. He could not, he reasoned, give his mother anything so common as candy marbles or all-day suckers, and what else could one buy for a cent? If he just had one cent more he could buy a——

Just then he saw something gleaming in the well-trodden snow. He stooped down. It was a bright, shiny new cent!

A rush of thoughts and confused emotions flooded Alf's honest brain. Was the cent his? Could he keep it, or must he give it up? It was dusk, and the way was long and cold, but he turned back and made his way quickly to his father's store. Father was not coming home to supper to-night. There were customers in the store, so Alf waited patiently until his father saw him.

"Alf!" exclaimed that weary man sharply. "What are you doing here at this time of the night? You deserve a whipping my lad, staying away from home all day long."

Alf's lip trembled, but he said bravely: "I came back to tell you that I found a cent."

"You found a cent," repeated his father in amazement, holding out his hand mechanically.

Alf folded his fingers tightly over the cent.

"Could I keep it," he stammered, "or would you——would you have to advertise it?"

The father stared down at his small son. Something in the boy's voice reached him through thick layers of business cares and worries. He realized that to this small palpitating piece of humanity the cent was of unusual value.

"Advertise it?" he said with a laugh. "No, you may keep it, son, but you get home out of this as fast as you can," he added more sharply, the sense of responsibility settling quickly back on his shoulders again. "It's dark now, and you shouldn't——"

But Alf was already out of hearing. Fearful lest he should be prevented from waiting to spend the dearly-earned penny, he shot out of the store and disappeared in the crowd.

CHRISTMAS morning dawned bright and clear. Alf awakened early and lay waiting for the light to come. He stretched his stiff little muscles, and smiled happily. He slipped out of bed, got a tiny parcel out of its hiding place, and stole quietly into his mother's room.

"Mother," he whispered, "Are you awake?"

"Yes, dear," she answered. "Did Santa bring you what you wanted?"

"Oh, did Santa come?" cried Alf, almost forgetting his precious parcel for the moment. His mother had said she was afraid Santa couldn't come to their house this year.

"Didn't you find your stocking?" she answered.

"No, but I'll go and look in a minute," said Alf. Then, climbing up on the bed: "Mother, here's a Christmas present for you."

"Darling!" said his mother, and hugged him and his gift—the highest ambition of his childish mind—a sugar-heart!

Engineering Department Has Big Variety Of Work

All Construction Work is Under Charge of This Section, Working on Instructions of Council.

The Engineering Department of the city, working under the direct instructions of the City Council, has a great variety of work to perform and supervise.

The Department has charge of the construction and maintenance of all permanent pavements, gravel and other roadways; the construction and maintenance of all sidewalks; the construction and maintenance of all sewers and storm drains and the construction and maintenance of all the small bridges in the city. In addition to the above the trimming and cutting down of trees on the streets of the city is done as well as is possible with a very limited appropriation; weeds and grass are cut; culverts are cleaned out and other work done.

In summer the stone roads are oiled by the Department and in winter the sidewalks are cleaned of snow and as far as possible sanded when conditions require this to be done. Snow is also removed from the roadways in the central part of the city. Except in the centre of the city the snow ploughing is done by contract under the direction of the Department.

The location of all poles erected on the streets by the Bell Telephone Co., the Utilities Commission and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission is checked up and approved by the Department.

Sewer connections which are blocked on the street are dug up and put in working order.

Pavement Construction.

In connection with permanent pavements, there is a large amount of work to be done in the preparation of plans and specifications covering the work so that tenders may be called for. At present the policy of the Council is to do this class of work by contract, with the exception of the necessary storm drains, which are built by day labor and in certain cases the concrete curbs and gutters. The crushed gravel roads are all built by the Department. The city owns and operates its own gravel pit and plant for crushing and screening all the gravel that is used. This pit, which is located in Ashburnham, has been a very paying investment for the city.

All sanitary sewers and storm drains are built by the Department. Only once in the last fifteen years has the city called for tenders on sewers. On this occasion the Department's estimate was over $120,000 below the nearest contractors' price and the work was done considerably under the estimate.

Of late years all the small bridges and culverts have been built by day labor and the costs have been very reasonable. The Hunter Street bridge was built on a cost plus a fixed sum basis and the Engineering Department had no jurisdiction over the construction.

Sidewalks, both concrete and wood, are all built by day labor. Practically no wooden walks are being built now, all new construction being in concrete.

The erection of illuminated signs and gasoline tanks and pumps is done under the supervision and inspection of the City Engineer, who is also Building Inspector.

Much Office Work.

The computation of costs and the preparation of the assessment rolls for the work done under the Local Improvement Act is all done by the Engineering Department. This involves a large amount of work both in the field and office as the actual frontages of all properties abutting on the work must be measured in order to determine the proper charges.

Complete sets of books are kept so that a check can be made on all expenditures and the cost of each individual job or class of work can be easily and closely determined at any time.

The new sewage disposal plant, now nearly completed, was entirely designed in the Engineer's office, thereby saving the city several thousand dollars as this is a class of work for which most cities retain a consulting engineer.

Utility Commission Tells, Etc., Etc.

During 1922 the Flour Mill proper was completely overhauled and rearranged and a considerable portion of the machinery from the Pickering Plant (which had been dismantled) was installed in addition to the machinery which was in the Mill during 1919 to 1922. The complete reconstructed mill was started about the end of November 1922 and the operation of producing flour was commenced on December 1st, 1922.

That the meter installation was working correctly is well illustrated by the readings for the months of October, November and December 1922.

October, 86 h.p.—Feed plant and elevator only operating.

December, 402 h.p. — Complete mill operating in the production of flour and feed.

On July 12th, 1923, this Westinghouse Meter was destroyed by lightning, and it was replaced by a meter of a different type, namely a Lincoln Sangamo Meter. Before the the Lincoln meter was installed it was, following the regulations, tested by the Commission's Meter Department and by the Government Inspector, and the results of the tests showed that it was accurate. It was sealed, installed on the pole on Dalhousie Street and locked as the previous meter had been, and was also, after installation, submitted to the same tests to ascertain that it was recording correctly, after having been placed in position.

The readings from this Lincoln Meter corresponded with the readings from the Westinghouse meter, and so far from indicating any doubt of the accuracy of the Westinghouse meter, the new meter confirmed it, as is illustrated by the following comparison of the readings of the two meters:

1923	Westinghouse Meter	Lincoln Meter
April	334 h.p.
May	344 h.p.
June	344 h.p.
August		280 h.p.
September		292 h.p.
October		297 h.p.

In May, 1924, because of the continued agitation, the meter was brought in for two days and again tested by the Commission's Meter Department, and it was again tested in place after restoration to the pole and shown to be working accurately. In the same month, the Campbell Company's Mill having been placed on a separate circuit direct from the new sub station, an ammeter test was made in the sub station and these readings confirmed the readings of the meter on the pole, upon which the Campbell Company was charged.

Upon the request of the City Council, the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario made an investigation of the matter, and in their report to the City Council, dated October 17th, 1924, after outlining the situation, stated,—"In conclusion, we can find nothing to indicate that the meters were inaccurate, and it is our considered opinion that the power supplied to the Campbell Milling Company, during the period from January, 1919, to December, 1923, was correctly measured and correctly billed."

The contemporaneous records and reports and Government Inspector's certificates of all these inspections are in the hands of the Commission and open for examination.

The results of the tests made, owing to the agitation, and of the destruction of the Westinghouse meter in 1923, and the substitution of a meter of a different type, is that the Commission has a continuous record and check of the instruments by which the Campbell Company's power was measured, such as is seldom to be had. This record and check is much fuller than is required, or made by any power distributing company in the ordinary course of its business. This record shows that the instruments were accurate in themselves and properly installed.

For every horse power of power which it is shown by these meters to have been used, the Campbell Company has paid.

There is no possible way by which power could have entered the Campbell Company's plant without going through the meters.

These are the facts which satisfy the Commission that the Campbell Company has used no power which it has not paid for.

There is nothing new about the information given above. It has always been available for anyone interested. It will be remembered that on June 3rd, 1924, the Commission held a public meeting. At this meeting all the above information was given by witnesses. These witnesses could have been questioned by anyone who chose, and the Commission invited those who thought that the Campbell Company had paid less than it should have paid, to ask any question, or to bring forward any evidence they saw fit.

The Commission has done nothing to prevent further investigation. On the contrary, the Commission's counsel, on their instructions, informed the Court in the proceedings taken by the Council, that the Commission welcomed the proposed investigation before His Honour Judge Huycke, and preferred that it should take place, in order to put an end to ignorant misstatements.

That the load demand on this bill was and is variable and that these variations were accurately recorded by the metering equipment is further proved by the demands recorded during the years 1924 and 1925, as follows:

January	439 H.P.
February	166 H.P.
March	161 H.P.
April	314 H.P.
May	393 H.P.
June	67 H.P.
July	67 H.P.
August	58 H.P.
September	313 H.P.
October	328 H.P.
November	388.6 H.P.
December	262.5 H.P.
1925.
January	417.54 H.P.
February	429.34 H.P.
March	424.34 H.P.
April	446.22 H.P.
May	393.16 H.P.
June	52.39 H.P.
July	52.39 H.P.
August	91.66 H.P.
September	313.56 H.P.
October	376.27 H.P.
November	385.92 H.P.

The Commission hope that this renewed public statement of the facts will satisfy those to whom the Commission is responsible for the conduct of its business, that the Campbell Company has paid fully for all the power that it has received.

Taxes on the South Side Street Just One Third Those on North

But Dwellers on City Side of Lanadowne Street Have Some Advantages Over Those on North Monaghan —Sidewalk is Not Only Badge of Superiority.

LIGHT AND SCHOOLS COST DIFFERENT

Sensations of Land Ownership More Easily Acquired in Country, But Air is Just as Sweet on Both Sides —Don't Pack Up Yet.

John Jackson lives on the north side of Lansdowne Street in the city of Peterborough and each year contributes $81.54 for the upkeep of sewers, schools and sidewalks—the price of citizenship. Jack Johnson lives across the street from him in a house which is possibly just a little bigger and having slightly more spacious grounds. Jack's taxes are $29.23, an amount approximately one-third of that which John charges to overhead. How come?

The explanation is simple. John lives in Peterborough and Jack has a lot with a house on it in the township of North Monaghan. John each morning shakes the sleep from his eyes and gazes across the intervening roadway to the place where Jack has his being at a cost $52.31 lower than the urban dweller.

The average Peterborough citizen when hearing of this might be persuaded to strike camp and flee post haste to North Monaghan with all portable goods and chattels aboard the trusted flivver. But stay, brother, and hearken whilst the subject receives more ample consideration.

The boundary line existing between the urban and rural districts is by no means imaginary; on the other hand, there is no very marked distinction such that a stranger on passing from the city to the township would exclaim: "Aha, so this is North Monaghan!" Indeed, the gravitation from the bustle of traffic-thronged streets to the sequestered calm of country lanes is so gradual that it would be hard for one to say that in one certain place the city ends and the country begins.

Impressions Possible.

On hearing the name, Township of North Monaghan, one naturally calls to mind a tract of land checkered by tree-lined fences and studded with occasional farm buildings—possibly there are patches of forest, sinuous streams and over all the clear, untarnished blue of the sky, indicating an abundance of pure air. The name of a city conjures up an impression of squatting, matted buildings—tall stacks emitting great quantities of carbon dioxide with a consequent atmosphere of gloom.

There is no line of cleavage on Lansdowne Street, for the south side appears to be just as urbane as the north half. The air above the payer of small taxes is just as pure—or impure—as that which the Peterborough citizen takes into his system. The fact that here is no sidewalk on the North Monaghan half signifies nothing as there are other streets within the corporation which are also destitute of pedestrian accommodation. On the face of it, therefore, it would seem that the life of a North Monaghan family having its habitat on Lansdowne Street should be one paean of praise. Electric wires lead into the houses, indicating light and the myriad other conveniences which the Hydro-headed monster makes possible. A street car line is accessible to the majority, permitting rapid trips to the city. Although there is no sidewalk on the township side, everyone knows why the hen crossed the road and, anyway, what is a matter of eighty feet to a determined person? So at first glance the citizens of Peterborough would be justified in their envy of North Monaghan dwellers.

Looking Into the Matter.

Actuated by the urge of discovery, which is essentially a newspaper attribute, The Examiner went down to the border line to find out why some people insisted in living in Peterborough when they apparently might subsist more economically in North Monaghan.

The investigator visited two homes, those of John Jackson and Jack Johnson—and by the way, those names, while they might possibly be found in the yellow-backed social register, are not those of the persons interviewed—and he found that matters balanced quite evenly, so no one need leave the home of his fathers to pursue some phantom chimera of a decreased tax burden.

John Jackson, the "city feller," said that he liked to live in Peterborough. No equivocation was apparent in that statement. He further declared that the advantages of residence within the corporation far outweighed any difference in taxation. He had the advantage of sending his daughters to the collegiate institute and the fifty dollars which the township man was forced to expend for that purpose (if he did succeed in obtaining tuition for his children there), the Peterborough citizen could keep stowed away safely in his wallet. In addition, the township domicile is not jinked up with the sewer, a factor which keeps rent at a minimum figure for the ultra modern person will have his sanitary conveniences if they are available. Also, John said, while Jack's gas rates were the same as his, the monthly bill for electric energy which Jack received was much more staggering and, he quaintly added, according to the published intentions of the Utilities Commission that comparative promises to find itself a superlative before many more moons wax and wane. "Those," concluded Mr. Jackson, "are some of my reasons for being quite satisfied to live where I do."

The Story's Other Side.

Thus enlightened, the investigator crossed the street to see Mr. Johnson. Mr. Johnson has no children going to school, so he didn't give three hoots in Inferno about that question. Jack did pine for a sewer connection, however, and declared that life would be complete if he had the modern conveniences, so prized by northern neighbors, in his home. He intimated that a water line was installed but that the precious fluid passed through a contraption which measured every cubic inch, carefully recording the results for future reference. Electric rates were high and going higher so it would seem that in the course of a year his $52.31, saved from the clutches of the tax collector, would be snatched up by others equally unscrupulous. "They'll get it some way," he deplored.

Jack said that a man could buy three lots in Monaghan township, build his house on the middle one and keep the other two for breathing space or garden truck, possibly both. He declared that the taxes on such a quantity of real estate would be no more than those extorted from the city dweller for his meagre holding and that the poise so noticeable in landed potentates might thus be obtained at small expense. One could labor under the delusion that he was living in the wilds of Canada and yet have a city at his beck and call.

Had a Chance One Time.

Jack declared that one time people living in that district had a chance to share the burden of citizenship with their northern neighbours but ruend down the proposition. The siren appeal of sidewalks, sewers and schools failed to impinge on the consciousness of township folk and they preferred to pay the lower rate and perform the three days of statute labor demanded for the purpose of maintaining the labyrinth of lesser roads. Thus they resented the threatened clasp of the city, preferring to dabble their toes in the civic stream rather than plunge boldly into an untried element. "It is possible," Jack said, "that some now regret that hesitant attitude but it is certain that many others love the greater freedom of the township, especially when the markets and merchants of a great city are convenient." He admitted that, as time passed and expansion was essential, objections would in all likelihood be over-ruled and a populous part of North Monaghan would be added to the city of Peterborough.

At present, he declared a spirit of the greatest co-operation and friendliness was apparent in all inter-relationships and the junction when formed should be a happy one. While it might seem strange at first to North Monaghan people to pay out an additional two-thirds for purposes of taxation still the advantages to be derived would act as the well-known counterpoise, "for value received."

Gold Medal For C. N. R.

Another testimony of the excellence of the Canadian National Railways' exhibits is the receipt of a gold model from the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, 1925, enclosed in a handsome silver case for their exhibits in the Railways building this year. One of the most attractive exhibits at this exhibition each year is the Canadian National Railways and many complimentary expressions have been received by the Company from visitors from all parts of the World. The medal just received has a portrait, in bas relief, of the Premier of Ontario on one side and on the reverse side a vista of the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

Peterborough's Underworld Isn't Hampered By The Law

Because Activities Are Beneficial to City—Not Segregated, But Spread Out.

(By J. T.)

A tale of the underworld has a fascination for most of us and many reputable citizens if a person could read their thoughts would find therein embedded a strong desire to see the underworld of some large city. The underworld of a city is usually connected with the criminal classes, streets and districts where crimes take place with the regular frequency of meal hours and where criminals concoct their dastardly plans for the murders, hold-ups and robberies that confront us every time we pick up a newspaper. Who has not heard of the underworld of the larger cities in the world, the places where it is not safe for a casual visitor to go around without some means of protection and where the rule to mind your own business reigns supreme? The average moving picture show features the underworld with its accompanying gun men, yegg men, confidence men at almost every show so the only thing that remains is for a person to see the underworld as it really is.

The citizens of Peterborough would, doubtless, be shocked if they were told that they had an underworld right at their own doors. This they have, and to make matters worse it spreads through out the entire length and breadth of the city, but instead of being the happy hunting grounds of crooks and criminals it houses several of the modern utilities that go towards the making of a modern city. Where, not so many years ago a ramble through the streets of Peterborough revealed many unsightly wires strung from pole to pole along the main streets, to-day they have disappeared and as far as one can see on the surface nothing has taken their place.

What is There.

The average citizen going about his daily business and thinking of his own little problems takes these things for granted and so long as they do not interfere with his daily routine gives them very little attention. The removal of these overhead wires is a decided advantage to a city as it assists with the removal of the accompanying poles, in enabling a city to present a more attractive appearance to the eye. The Bell Telephone Company prides itself on the fact that where modern ideas and inventions can be used to advantage for the benefit of the public and the communities which they serve, they will use them, irrespective of cost. Underneath the streets of Peterborough they have at present equipment valued at many thousands of dollars. It consists mainly of cables containing the wires that make telephone conversations possible. It extends from their office on Hunter Street throughout the whole city and comprises some five miles of duct containing up to nine cables covering the business section of the city using eighteen miles of cable. Each of these cables contains an average of two hundred single wires which, if placed end to end, would give the staggering total of seventy-one hundred miles. In connection with this underground system they maintain fifty-five man-holes, the average size of which is six feet square. They are sunk seven feet below the surface of the street and enable linemen to repair the existing cables or insert more cables if the necessity should arise, the ducts being built with a sufficient capacity to accommodate the anticipated growth of the city for years to come.

Next in line come the water mains, ranging in size from twenty-inch pipes to four-inch pipes, and which comprise a total of forty-nine miles.

The next greatest mileage is that of sewer pipes of which there is forty-one miles and running them close come the gas mians with a total of forty miles. In the business section of the city the fire department has over two miles of underground cable in connection with its fire alarm system.

The foregoing figures while they may appear excessive, when compared with the area that Peterborough covers, have all been given by people who are connected with the different departments concerned and were compiled from files which they had at their disposal. The utilities concerned are a vital factor in the well-being of the city, standing as they do, for the convenience, health, comfort and protection of the citizens.

Birth date: (day) .....(month) .....(year) .....

Would the following date be an auspicious one for me to enter into an important transaction or engagement?

(day) .....(month) .....(year) .....

R. E. D.—You will succeed by cleverness rather than by mental force. You are amiable and kind hearted, though inclined to be thoughtless and lax in study or work. You are a favorite socially and can pass yourself well in any company, but you are not a "lady's man." Your nerves are healthy and your physical condition good, but there is a retrogression of late, showing the force of slackness or habit. You can imitate others well, but do not show evidence of originality, and your powers of perception are limited. You will probably succeed in a mechanical trade rather than in clerical or financial business. You have no great thirst for knowledge, and should cultivate a more scholarly outlook. Laughter and pleasure must soon give way to solid thinking and planning if you are to attain the success to which your mental and physical powers entitle you. Develop depth of character. Do not apply force to gain any end on the day you name, but use diplomacy. Next year will see a turning point in your career—choose carefully. Your color is brick.

A. E. I.—Your powers of perception are exceptionally well developed. You know a great many people by sight whose names are unknown to you; you seldom forget forms, looks, and faces once seen. You could do well in drawing. You have excellent planning power and constructive skill, excelling in mechanism. With a little better developed creativeness and concentrativeness you would excel as an inventor. You have not the power of mind to control others, and any attempt will result in failure. Don't play lone wolf; associate yourself carefully with others. You are strong in physique and mentality, and have the rare male virtue of constancy developed to an unusual extent, so that the "one" woman claims all of your heart and mind. You are inclined to count the world well lost for love, but should cultivate sociability. You get on well with men, and you are even-tempered. To be well rounded-out you require a broader education, and with this you would do well in an executive position. In fact, yours is a strong reading. Don't mar it by self-pride. Your colors are brown and grey.

M. A. S.—The artist in you has subjugated all else, although you are exceptionally well equipped mentally for the venture of life. You have understanding of others and your sympathy is always ready. You will have great achievement, but not material. It is, with you, art for art's sake. It is a curious coincidence that Rembrandt, the golden painter, was born in the same month and with just the same characteristics that you have. Rembrandt made everything appear to melt from golden light into dark brown shadows. "Softness" was the keynote of his paintings, and I believe from indications it is of yours. You are intolerant of routine, and dislike the bum-drum life of home, factory, or office, wherever you work. Those who know you regard you highly, but you should cultivate a more careful manner of expression and a wider knowledge of everyday affairs in order to be really interesting. Do not let your artist's mind exclude all else. New successes will be yours next year. Learn to laugh at petty annoyances and avoid worry. Love will come to you suddenly, but you must choose carefully one who will be in tune with your temperament! Your color is dark brown.

S. E. N.—You would succeed in a business career, though you would probably not like the drudgery that first steps in that line entail. You have a charming manner, that is marred at times by anger or moodiness, which you must overcome. Remember that these do more to destroy beauty than any other forces. You take life too seriously. Get out of yourself, and mix with others in the happy abandon of youth—and carry the same spirit with you every day. You will succeed in material things. Cultivate the habit of having a place for everything, and keep things there. Put into everything you do the best of which you are capable. You have musical ability, though not highly developed. You are sensitive to exciting causes, and rather easily roused, but not carried away by excitement. You have good self-command, except when angry, and would act with coolness and forethought. You are capable of strong love, and have much tenderness and attachment, but will not love passionately. Travel would be a good developing agency for you. Your colors are steel and dark blue. The day you mention is not one on which to take important steps, but plans might be laid then for future events.

D. A. S.—Yours has not been an easy life up to now, but you have smiled through. Sorrow, work, and bereavement have left their marks on your character, but you are fundamentally better today than you were ten years ago. That is life's refining process. You think life has no illusions, no surprises, left for you to experience; that is one of life's little tricks. Your own experiences have given you ready feeling for others, and you like to do good turns when you can. You have charm, and are not easily aroused to anger. You like to get things done and out of the way quickly, but would succeed better if you took time to study the most efficient way of doing them. Don't wait for things to happen—go out and meet them; assert yourself. A proverb says life owes every individual a certain amount of joy and sorrow. You seem to have had more than your share of trouble—though there was much sweet mixed with the bitter—now see that you get what is owed you of pleasure. I do not see any definite indication of change on the date you mention. It may revive old memories. Make no promises on that day (Sunday). Care for your health, which you are inclined to neglect.

J. A. C.—Happy girl! Are you ever downhearted or "put out" by anything? You should not be, with your characteristics. If there is a bit of brightness in the darkest day, you can find it. You might be called "Official Cloud Turner"—always looking at the bright side, the silver lining. You have creative power and should be able to make dainty clothes from sight. Your fingers are quick and agile, and you have an aptitude for detail that should stand by you if you enter business. There is a danger that you will develop shallowness, unless you counteract that joyous tendency with some deep interest. Love will come to you in time, but just now take up some study—music or art. Read only healthy books, not morbid novels. I do not mean heavy books—"Wild Geese" and "Emily Climbs" are the type you would enjoy without injuring that tender nature of yours. Don't form unworthy friendships. On the day you mention you will be agreeably surprised. Don't take any chances, however—grasp any opportunity that opens. Your colors are blue, cream and silver.

Brown Eyes.—You did not send your name.

Lonesome I.—You did not mention the date of your birth; please send it.

Becky.—You did not mention the date of your birth. Please send it.

Samson.—I do not "read fortunes by the horoscope." My system is scientifically correct. Send your full name and birthdate.

PAID TO SLEEP ON

The foreman of a gang of railwaymen had more than his share of Irish wit.

One day he was walking along his section of the line when he found one of his men fast asleep in the shade of a hedge.

Eyeing the man, with a smile, he said:

'Slape on, ye idle spaleen, slape on. So long as ye slape ye've got a job, but when ye wake up ye're out of work!"

REGINA PATS, WESTERN JUNIOR RUGBY CHAMPIONS, IN MONTREAL TO-DAY FOR FINAL OF SEASON

First Time Junior Canadian Championship of Grid Game Decided.

HOPE FOR THE WEST.

Trophy Given By "The Regina Morning Leader" For Annual Playoff.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press).—Regina Pats and Montreal Amateur Athletic Association are playing for a hitherto uncontested honor and for a brand new trophy when they stepped out on the M.A.A.A. field today to battle for the Dominion Championship in Junior rugby.

East is meeting West for the first time in the Junior class, and the prize is a handsome trophy donated by The Morning Leader, published in the home of the Western champions, Regina Pats. The cup, which will be awarded to the victors, was officially accepted by the Canadian Rugby Football Union as the emblem of Junior gridiron supremacy throughout the Dominion.

It is the hope of The Regina Leader, donors of the trophy, that the final will become an annual event The game was arranged this year on short notice, and the Westerners travelled here without a guarantee. The C.R.F.U. has not yet recognized the Junior championship as a scheduled event, provides for no guarantee of expenses. In the West, at least, the Juniors are getting a bigger share of public patronage each season and the donors hope to foster the coming stars by offering the cup as an inducement to have the Junior classic retained as an annual fixture.

Hope in Their Juniors.

Regina Pats, already holding the Canadian Junior Hockey Championship, are in Montreal, because their home-town supporters believed them worthy of a chance at broader honors. They swept through all Western opposition to a clear-cut victory over the best on the Prairies, piling up a total of 88 points to 20 scored against them. Regina believed that the club might redeem the West's rather sorry reputation in football—due to repeated defeats in the Senior division—and leading business men led a campaign that raised the necessary funds 36 hours after the Eastern champions had declared their willingness to contest the Canadian championship.

The news of the donation of a trophy by Regina publishers was received with joy by both Montreal and Regina gridders. The game looms up as a new angle of the East versus West controversy, and interest will be even keener now that there is a tangible reward in sight and the prospect of the honor being contested annually in years to come.

The Regina team arrived here Friday.

In the afternoon the Pets went to the McGill Stadium and held a light workout to get the stiffness out of their joints following the long train journey. The Western champs have a husky-looking squad, the average weight being 168 pounds.

PETES AND PRESTON.

Real Game Monday Night in S. P. A. Series.

TORONTO, Dec. 12. — Preston and Peterboro will offer a real game for the fans on Monday evening. Talbot and Ashley on the defence will have their trouble in competing with the McLeod and Parker team. "Gunner" Arnott had a real good night in the Parkdale game, his speed even surprised his own personal friends. Ware and Clark form a very fast wing team, and matched against the Bailey-Ranger combine of Peterboro should receive its acid test so far this season. Skelly, Kreason and Groh with Julke made up the Preston sub list the other night, and they proved to be no weaklings. The Peterboro and Preston clubs appear well matched, and the fans are in for a grand old battle when these two meet Monday evening.

PIRATES WON IN ROUGH GAME

Defeated Boston Bruins 5-3 in Thrilling Battle

AT PITTSBURGH.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press)—In a betterly fought battle replete with thrills and spills and roughness which cropepd out at the close of the game the Pittsburgh hockey team defeated Boston Bruins last night 5 to 3. The final period was well under way when Odie Cleghorn, captain and manager of the Pirate sextette, dumped the disc into the mesh for the score which decided the game.

OSHAWA BEATEN BY LARGE SCORE

St. Mary's Ran in Eleven Goals and Shut Out Oshawa.

GOOD TEAM WORK.

TORONTO, Dec. 12—(Canadian Press)—St. Mary's continued its undefeated march in the Junior S.P.A. last night, eliminating Oshawa from the hunt for the pre season silverware by an 11 to 0 victory at the arena before a good crowd The play of the Irish clan was far superior to the Easterners, the Saints front line playing dazzling combination which completely baffled the Oshawa six from start to finish.

BERLENBACH IS STILL CHAMPION

Defeated Jack Delaney By Narrow Margin in Bout For Title.

BOTH WERE FLOORED.

The champion won the judge's verdict by a narrow margin in a furious battle in which both fighters went down for the count during the fierce encounter. The champion measured his length when Delaney landed squarely with a mule kicking right to the jaw in the fourth round. The challenger went down in the twelfth when Berlenbach's bone crushing left found its mark. Twenty-three thousand spectators jamemd the new arena to see the match.

SENATORS PLAYING MAROONS TO-NIGHT

Leaders in the N. H. L. Start Their Road Games.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press).—Ottawa Senators play their first "road" game of the season against the Montreal Maroons at the Forum tonight, and will enter the contest with a record of three straight shutouts. But in meeting the local team they will be facing for the second time this season the only National Hockey League sextette which has scored against them. The two goals on Ottawa's debit side were tallied by Bade Siebert, of the Montreal team, in the opening game of the winter campaign at the Capital, when Ottawa won out 3 to 2.

The game tonight brings together two teams battling for first place in the standing. Ottawa are out in front, having won one more game than the Maroons, and will thus need a victory to maintain undisputed leadership in the campaign, for a victory for Montreal will place the Maroons on even terms with the Senators at the top of the pack.

Canadiens in Toronto.

Canadiens left this morning for Toronto, where they will meet the St. Pats tonight. Canadiens have not been showing their best form in early games, and in St. Pats meet a team which have been equally handicapped in getting settled down for the season. The Irish team is generally hard to beat on its home ice, but has been somewhat in and out so far this year.

NEW YORK PLAYERS ILL WITH PTOMAINE

Burch Recovers, But Simpson and Forbes Sick.

OTTAWA, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press).— Tommy Gorman's New York Americans leave here today for New York, where they will open up their home schedule with a game against Montreal Canadiens on Tuesday night. Although several of the squad are on the sick list, it is expected that all will be fit and ready for their first home encounter. After travelling two thousand miles and engaging in four road games, three members of the team suffered ptomaine poisoning — Simpson, Forbes and Burch being the players affected. Burch is recovered and Simpson and Forbes will be fit in a few days.

"Crutchy" Morrison is another casualty with water on one of his knees.

Manager Gorman is reported to have wired to the Pacific Coast for reinforcement. Roy Rickey is a player he is seeking but nothing definite could be learned as to the prospects for the Gothamites securing his transfer.

INSIDE GOLF.

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

By CHESTER HORTON

When the clubhead is swung forward into the ball it exerts a very definite pull against the player as its speed accelerates. This pull creates a "crowding" sensation about the arms and shoulders with the golfer who has not schooled himself in giving the club sufficient time to swing properly through this part of the swing.

Here many golfers make a common mistake, too. Just as this pull on them begins, they think to add still more power to the blow by pressing, and so they rear up on their toes, aiming to swat the ball a gosh-almighty wallop. This rearing up—or, more specifically, this plain pressing, elevates the clubhead slightly out of its true path and a succession of topper balls results. Just at the point where the clubhead begins to pull is the place to be particularly careful that you give the club time to swing. It takes a fraction of a second for the club actually to swing through, and it must be given this time. By all means do not try to force it. Let it go—and it will naturally accelerate itself. Then, on the bottom of the arc, force the hands, or wrists.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Me and the City Council and a few more birds from this burg saw the Petes and the Kitchener dutchmen hook up in Toronto Wed. night, and, believe me, those sharp-shooting westerners give our athaletes a tough argument. If our corpulent Mister Dwyer hadn't of made more stops than a letter-carrier on the day before Christmas, the serious would be over so far as the Petes is concerned.

The fiacas was more full of thrills than a movie serial, and some of the Aldermen got nearly as excited as they did last summer over Sunday swimming. Believe me, Mister Sporting Editor, the Toronto arena on amateur hockey nights is no place for a guy with a weak heart, because there is so many vast open spaces among the seats when the Simon pures play that if a bird was to collapse the chances is they'd never find them until the next pro. game. You gotta walk half a mile to get into an argument there in these S.p.A. games.

Last week I said several things about the Petes not being going right, and I ain't got no reason yet to take it back, although there was some improvement Wed. The defensive end is good enough, but the attack needs to develope a punch or the boys is going to have a whale of a time winning their group this year. Accurate shooting never was a strong point among the Petes, and just now their pegging at the nets is horrible. Wed. night those Kitchener lads levelled them at Mister Dwyer like a bunch of rifle shots, while half of the Petes' shots wouldn't of bwroke a window, and the other ½ was fired at some of the customers up in the cheaper pews. They ain't no record of anybody ever scoring a goal on a shot over the top of the screen.

STRENGTHEN THE ATTACK.

More team work, less bunching and an improvement in shooting will turn the Petes into a real championship threat. As Mister Rodden, who condecends to write a few lines for the Globe when he ain't refereeing or coaching, says, they will not be many goals score on our lads this season, and if they improve their attack they will be hard to beat.

This Kitchener outfit has been thrust into this group, which, after seeing them in action Wed., ain't exactly good news. It always was a tough argument for any man's team to beat them dutchmen at home, and the Petes sure had enough trouble to beat them in Toronto. They showed our fellows more inside hockey in them seventy-minutes than they glimpsed all last season, and it ain't going to be no Charleston to head those babies to the tape in the group race.

MONDAY'S BATTLE.

Mon. night the Petes battle with Preston, which has eliminated Osgoode Hall and Parkdale from the S.p.A. serious, and our lads'll have to be at their best to beat them Riversides, what with old Dad Ashley and Ride-'em Cowboy Talbot on the defence and some birds like Arnott and Clarke on the forward line, which is real poison when they get inside the blue line. Mister Wright saw them perform Thurs. night, so he should ought to have the Petes hipped as to what they is up against and have the boys all ready to step on the gas Mon. The Petes can turn the trick all right, but they'll have to play real hockey to do it.

The visit each fall of the Western football champions is a good bit of business for the railways, but beyond that and giving the lads a chance to see Canada first, the East vs. West clash is a annual washout. About the only thing them Western teams has showed is a press agent that ought to be working for a movie star. He pictures the lads from the West as a bunch of man-eaters, ready to devour anything in their path, 10-second backfield men and wings that hit the line hard enough to jolt a elephant. Up to date the only thing the Westerners has eat up is their expense account, the lineplungers hit nothing hard but the ground, and the one time the halves did a hundred yards in 10 seconds was on the train coming down.

A MEMORY TEST.

The annual meeting of the Central Ontario Baseball League this week lost a great chance when the magnates failed to provide for a memory test for the league umpires. When those high-salaried birds that guess them on the bases or behind the plate just naturally can't remember ground rules for a couple of hours, like what happened at Kingston, it is about up to the Central moguls either to pay for a correspondence school course in memory for its staff or get some guys that can remember. The one thing the average umps never forgets is to call around for his money.

Baseball fans'll be sorry to hear that Mister Al. Heckman is to be only a ¼-time pitcher with the Petes next season. The blonde box artist is now engaged in selling weiners and long clear for his firm in the wilds of the Lindsay district each week, and he won't likely be able to play more'n the Sat. games with the Petes. Looks like young Mister Hardill better get his right lunch-hook oiled up early, for there seems to be some prospect of work in front of him.

The Central League officials is anxious to get the scorers' reports more quickly. They oughta to be anxious, too, about seeing that the scoring is more accurate. All some of the birds in this league had to do to get a three-bagger last season was to run to third base—it didn't matter how they got there. It got so that I was looking to see some guy given a double when he only got to first base on the ground that he could of made second if he tried to.

Sportfully yrs.,
A. WISE CRACKER.

ROSENEATH NEWS

ROSENEATH, Dec. 9.—A most successful and happy event was held Friday afternoon and evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pollock when a number of their friends and neighbours responded to an invitation to assist at a quilting bee. Two quilts were finished during the afternoon, after which tables were arranged for a bounteous spread of delicious luncheon. A few more friends were invited for the evening when progressive euchre was played, the following winning the prizes: Ladies' first, Mrs. Jas. Cook; Ladies' Consolation, Mrs. John Garneau; Gentleman's first, Mr. H. Mann; Gentleman's consolation, Mr. John Garneau. Refreshments were again served at the close of the game, when a most enjoyable hour was spent in community singing. The guests departed before midnight, every one having spent a happy time.

Mrs. Claud Insely returned to Healey Falls Saturday after spending a week with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Pollock.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Spencer have gone to Peterborough where the former has secured a position.

Mr. and Mrs. John Waters are leaving soon to spend the winter with their daughter, Mrs. Henry Cook, who resides south of Campbellford.

NORHAM NEWS

NORHAM, Dec. 9.—Over one hundred men from Campbellford, Meyersburg, Morganston, Warkworth, Codrington and Norham attended the sale of wood held two miles south of Percy Boom on the farm of Mr. Samuel Clark of Cobourg, on Friday afternoon. The bidding was brisk and the prices realized were good. The wood was all dry, four foot in length and the purchaser had to do the hauling. Body hardwood sold from $7.00 to $7.50 per cord. Hardwood slabs from $6.75 to $7.25 per cord and pine slabs from $4.25 to $4.75 per cord.

Mr. William and Miss Eva Platt of Toronto recently presented their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Platt, with a new gramaphone.

Mr. Fletcher Peterson has been confined to his bed for several days as the result of an injury he received while working in the barn.

Mr. Roy Peterson has been unable to work for a few days as the result of injuring his hand on a bolt and being threatened with blood poisoning.

EBBER CAME BACK, IS CHAMPION AGAIN

Veteran Bantam Beat Vic Foley in Bout at Toronto.

TORONTO, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press)—And they say they can't come back. Bobby Eber, former bantamweight champion of Canada, knocked the old adage into the scrap heap at the same time as he knocked the crown off Vic Foley's head the Coliseum last night in a ten round engagement which had the title at stake and in doing so Ebber gave his admirers more than they really expected to get from him. He was the Ebber of old, plus a little bit more, but he had to be to get the decision over the rugged little fighter from the coast who took the title from Howard Marberry after the latter had lifted it and took it west nearly twelve months ago.

DEBT OF BEAUTY OWED HOLLAND

"Flower Garden of the World"—Raises Bulbs For Nations.

SELL SHIPLOADS.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Holland is rapidly becoming the flower garden of the world. With the exception of tropical countries where no bulbs can grow, there is no spot in the world which does not yearly receive bulbs from there.

What American lovers of flowers owe to the enterprise of the Dutch it is impossible by the mere narration of facts and figures to portray. Half the gardens in America, more than half the gardens of England and the great percentage of those in Germany, France, Sweden, Denmark, Canada, Norway and Finland bear eloquent testimony to the wondrous beauty of the tulip and hyacinth fields of Holland which are their replenishing centre.

Many shiploads of bulbs recently have been pulling out of the port of Rotterdam. Never before has the port been so busy dispatching future floral ambassadors abroad. It is the sequel to the international shows that have been held during the year, starting with the great spring exhibition at Haarlem. And, once clear of the English Channel, by far the greater number of these ships have been heading across the Atlantic to one or other of the American ports.

Exports Increase.

Next to Great Britain, the United States is Hollands best bulb customer and so great has the demand this year proved that Hollands exports for August alone show a jump of nearly 300 per cent compared with last year.

Britain, up to the moment, has had 3,697 tons shipped across. This quantity represents a cost value and turnover to the producers of $2,451,250. And more are under way, for the greatr part of the bulbs exported from Holland are dispatched during August and September.

More Americans than ever before visited Holland this year. Their attendance at the shows were phenomenal and at the same time the closer alliance between seedsmen in the States and farmers in Holland was evidenced by the direct interest of the former through actual representation at and participation in the shows.

The Dutch clearly seem to have attained what they have long been aiming at. A real and effective market for their bulbs in America. The present, however, is but the beginning of the development. The more their tulips and hyacinths give be uty and fragrance to the gardens of America, the greater will be the demand. And there is this essential factor to be taken into consideration: The Dutch find it more profitable to send their bulbs to the United States than any other part of the world.

Best Customer.

America in this respect is Holland's best customer because, although the seedsmen of the States have so far this year only imported 3,269 tons of bulbs, against Great Britains 4,282 tons. Americans are paying the Dutch $40,000 odd more than the British, in spite of the thousand tons difference.

Tulips and hyacinths are embedded in Dutch history as well as Dutch soil. In their perfection of today they carry overseas a story of romance as well as commerce; a story of centuries of struggle and experiment to give to the world blossoms unrivalled in their artistic beauty, coloring and fragrance. From father to son have the secrets of the industry been handed down. Thus today the bulb farmers of Holland can in many cases boast direct lineal descent from pioneers of the industry three centuries back.

It was in the Sixteenth Century that the original tulips and hyacinths were brought over to the Netherlands from the East. The tulip was the first bulb regularly taken into cultivation, and even in the Seventeenth Century was eagerly sought by collectors. This bulb, in fact, became the object of wild speculation, which finally culminated in the great "Tulip Swindle" of 1637, through which many persons were ruined.

Since 1750 the cultivation and export of bulbs has been carried on regularly, though the industry did not attain to any real dimensions before the last decades of the Nineteenth Century.

TRENT RIVER NEWS.

ROSENEATH, Dec. 9.—Mrs. E. Brisbin has returned home after a visit with her daughter in Peterboro.

Mr. Campbell, Dartford, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Black on Sunday.

Mrs. (Rev.) Lovelace and daughters have returned home after a visit with relatives in Napanee.

There are still a few cases of measles throughout the community.

The Women's Institute meeting was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Archie Campbell, with a fairly good attendance. The programme was very interesting and much enjoyed by those present.

The shooting match which was to be held on Saturday last was postponed, owing to the heavy rainfall. It is expected to take place next Saturday.

The box social and dance held on Friday night under the auspices of the L.O.L. was a real success. Mr. W. J. Jibb auctioned the nicely decorated boxes. His good humored manner made many a laugh and brought each box to a fairly good price. This part of the evening was very pleasant and amusing. After lunch the floor was cleared for the dance, which lasted until the wee sma' hours in the morning. Proceeds of the evening amounted to $60.00.

A few from here were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Curtis, Fenella, who entertained their friends at their home on Friday evening.

Clarence Parker, who was taken suddenly ill and taken to the General Hospital, Cobourg, is doing nicely.

Owing to the stormy night and bad roads, only a few from here took in the reception tendered Milton E. Maybee, M.P., at Campbellford last Friday night.

Rev. Lovelace will conduct the services in the United Church here while Rev. McCord is in charge of Harwood, Gre's Landing and Plainville.

Bowling

AT K. OF C. ALLEYS.

Ladies' teams bowling at the Knights of Columbus Alleys last evening were the Reg'ler Fellers (Miss Florence Giroux, captain), who took three games from the Daisies (Miss Geraldine Collins, captain), and the Marigolds (Miss Norah Shevlin, captain), who won two games out of three from the West Ends (Mrs. J. J. Doris, captain). Miss Florence Giroux had three nice scores of 183, 151 and 134, Miss Norah Shevlin made 160 and Miss K. Garden, of the Marigolds, 159.

Ladies' teams bowling at the Knights of Columbus alleys Thursday evening were the Wrens (Miss Myra Moloney, captain), who took three games from the Owls (Miss Katharine McDonald, captain), and the Buttercups (Miss Margaret O'Toole, captain), who took two games out of three from the Orioles (Miss Alma Fontaine, captain). Two members of the Orioles' team had nice scores, Miss Agnes Lynch rolling 183 and Miss Alma Fontaine 181.

In the report of the games played on Wednesday evening at the Knights of Columbus Alleys, an error was made in the names handed The Examiner. The Tulips (Miss Josephine Hunt, captain) took two games from the Poppies (Miss Katie Radey, captain) instead of the reverse, as recorded in Thursday night's paper.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE.

At the Water Street alleys last night Bell Telephone climbed into a triple tie for second place by taking three from Raybestos. Gray rolled high three with 607, and nice singles were turned in by White 202, Elliott 233, Resko 203, Rogers 260 and Gray 201 and 234.

Victims Land Development Scheme, Chicago Folk Stranded Bought Little Farms and Found Them Out in Sand Wastes

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich., Dec. 12.—(United Press.)—Fifteen Chicago families are stranded out in the great open spaces near Peacock, Mich., where men are human wrecks and hunger has made the hand-clasp weaker.

The pioneer have seen their dreams of "that little place in the country" crash down in ruins about them. The colony is made up of city folks who bought farms from a land development company, foresook their homes in the city and set out to bask in bountiful rural life. The land proved to be barren sand wastes and the men were not even able to eke out the barest living for their families. The colony is destitute and starving, and the recent cold has added to the hardships.

The local Salvation Army, hearing of the plight, has dispatched food and clothing to the sufferers and is making an investigation to learn more particulars.

P.C.I. COMMENCEMENT

Yesterday afternoon the Commencement Exercises of the P.C.I. were held in the Assembly Hall of the school. The large auditorium was well filled with pupils and friends of the school who had gathered to congratulate the successful pupils and wish them success in their new studies and vocations. The P.C.I. had one of the largest graduating classes in its history in 1924, and it upheld the high standard of the school, being successful on 84 per cent. of the papers written on as compared to 78.4 per cent. for the average of the whole province.

The whole tenor of the speeches made was to deplore the lack of accommodation of the school and the great need of an addition to the scheel to take care of the commercial department, technical department and a gymnasium. J. A. McKone, chairman of the Board of Education, who acted as chairman at the Exercises, in his address, said that the teachers' work is under a handicap in P.C.I. The girls go to the Y.W.C.A. for their games, while the boys must go to the Y.M.C.A. for all their physical culture, and the Commercial Department, he said, is housed in a condemned building. How a teacher can be expected to put across what they should is unknown, yet the school had stood higher in its percentage of successful pupils than the province as a whole. He also spoke feelingly of L. J. Pettit, a teacher on the staff for long years, who is ill.

Dr. J. J. Craig, chairman of the Property Committee of the Board of Education, in presenting the commercial diplomas, said that with the unfavorable conditions under which the students are working, if they keep their good health, it speaks more for the strong bodies than for their environment. He sincerely hoped the City Council would see fit to grant the Board money in order to correct existing conditions.

J. F. Strickland, a member of the Board, in presenting Nicholls Scholarships, lauded Mrs. Nicholls' memory for the fine work she had done for the city.

The following won Nicholls Scholarships: Upper School—William Yelland and Kathleen McKinnon; Senior Middle School—Jean Gilman and Helen Stuart; Junior Middle School—Jacob Law and Dorothy Hooey; Senior Lower School—Helen Burns and Kenneth Wilson; Junior Lower School—Margaret McCulloch and Dorothy Henry.

Reverend J. W. Gordon, in presenting the Graduation Diplomas, alvised his youthful audience to read good books if they were to gain the most from life.

Miss MacIntosh, a member of the staff, presented the girls' athletic prizes, and H. R. H. Kenner presented the boys' prizes. The senior champion of the school is Carl Wood, while the junior is Donald Rathbone.

C. S. Browne, Rugby coach of the school team, was presented with a token of his services by this year's team.

Mr. Kenner selected William Yelland as "best boy" in the school. The honoring of the "best boy," chosen by the Principal from the pupils on the four sides of development, scholarship, character, leadership and athletics is done annually.

A splendid valedictory address, written by Kathleen McKinnon, now attending Toronto University, was read by Edith Killaly.

The musical part of the programme was of a very high and entertaining order. Miss Agnes Logan played a piano solo splendidly, and Arnold Spencer gave a violin solo, accompanied by Miss Logan. The whole student body sang two choruses. The boys' chorus featured with its usual rollicking songs.

After the programme the graduating class and the staff served tea in the library. The library was daintily decorated with flowers, gay ribbons, and Chinese lanterns.

WILL BE GOOD GAME.

Manager Ed. Wright has arranged for a challenge game of hockey with the Toronto Varsity team, holders of last year's O.H.A. and Inter-Collegiate Championship, the game to take place in Peterborough between the 20th and 24th of December, when the team leaves on its trip to play the American colleges.

BOBBED CHYSANTHEMUMS APPEAR.

LONDON, Dec. 12.— Bobbed and shingled and curled chrysanthemums made their appearance in the National Chrysanthemum Society's show to the great disgust of lovers of unassisted nature.

Some of the chrysanthemums were even kept in curl papers and the big shaggy blossom as large as the head of a football-player were given permanent waves and otherwise manipulated to fool the judges.

Theatre

AT THE ROYAL.

"I'LL SHOW YOU THE TOWN" BRINGS SPASMS AT ROYAL.

Audience Didn't Know Whether to Laugh or Cry—So They Compromised—And Roared.

"I'll Show You the Town," the Universal-Jewel feature starring Reginald Denny, now playing at the Royal Theatre, is a shrieking comedy lirium which revolves around a revolving bed with the revolver owned by the husband of the pretty wife whom the innocent college professor has shut-up in the bed so that she wouldn't catch cold in her thin pyjamas.

This more or less intricate situation, however, is clearly told with lightning-like rapidity with little or no let-up in whole hearted "laughs." The trouble started when Alec Dupree, an obliging college professor, played by Reginald Denny, innocently murmured: "I'll Show You the Town." His statement involved him in an "affair" with three women, each of whom had pressed him to act as her guide and escort on a sight-seeing tour of the metropolis. All would have been happy had the "affair" ended where it started.

"I'll Show You the Town" is adapted from Elmer Davis' popular story of the same name. Denny is supported by a notable cast.

AT THE CAPITOL

SURELY "THE FRESHMAN" IS HAROLD LLOYD'S BEST.

Look at it any way you wish, you'll have to admit after you have seen Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, "The Freshman," now showing at the Capitol Theatre, that this world-renowned star has hit the top of the comedy field. Ever since "The Freshman" opened here, the audiences have been kept in a continual uproar. If this is not the funniest picture Lloyd has ever made, then this reviewer's funny bone is not working.

"BEAUTIFUL CITY" IS DRAMATIC GEM.

Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Cish Cast as Film Lovers.

"The Beautiful City," a First National picture, starring Richard Barthelmess, which begins a run at the Capitol Theatre Monday, is a dramatic gem of the first water.

Too often we have seen pictures which were mere "puffs," the stories hollow and uninteresting and lacking in the suspense which keeps the spectator keyed up to a high pitch of interest.

But "The Beautiful City" has seldom been equalled for dramatic strength and power. There are no millionaires mansions, no huge cabaret sets, no gay revels. But there is real life portrayed on the silver sheet; real human beings are portrayed by the cast, and their actions are logical and gripping.

We recommend this picture without reservation. It is refreshingly human and a credit to the motion picture art.

AT THE REGENT

TOP-NOTCH CAST ASSEMBLED FOR "PRETTY LADIES."

ZaSu Pitts, Tom Moore, Lilyan Tashman and Roy D'Arcy in the Principal Roles.

An all-star cast, including several of the most famous artists of the screen, will be seen in Monta Bell's "Pretty Ladies," the Metro-Goldwyn Mayer production, which comes to the silver sheet of the Regent Theatre on Monday, and which was adapted by Alice D. G. Miller from an original story written by Adela Rogers St. Johns.

The leading roles are taekn by Za Su Pitts and Tom Moore. One of the screen's best leading men, is a member of the supporting cast, as is Norma Shearer, featured player of so many Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. Roy D'Arcy, who will soon be seen as the Crown Prince in "The Merry Widow," plays the role of a man about town, while George K. Arthur, famous as a comedian, has one of the principal parts.

As an extra feature, Ann Pennington, well known musical comedy star, is seen doing the Charleston in "Pretty Ladies."

Copy Of Weber's Grand Mass Is Discovered In Salzburg

VIENNA, Dec. 12.—The voluminous score of a mass, bearing the name of Carlo Maria di Weber, found in Salzburg by a young Vienna scientist, Dr. Konstantin Schneider, has turned out to be a fair copy of the "Grand Mass," which Weber himself had regarded as lost.

This work, as it appears from a dedicatory letter attached to the manuscript, was written in Munich in 1799, and was dedicated by the youthful composer to the Prince Archbishop of Salzburg, on May 3rd, 1802.

The mass, which is the principal work of the composer's youth and was called by Weber "Missa Solemne," is written for four voices, with great orchestra and organ. It gives the impression that the youthful master desired to demonstrate his talent in every direction. Each phrase has a special theme, which was not Weber's custom in later years.

HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION MET

Central Association Decided to Change Date of Annual Meeting.

An open meeting of the Central Home and School Association was held last evening in the kindergarten room of the school, with a good attendance. A brief business session was held, when a report was given of work done in the case of several needy families. It was decided to change the date of the annual meeting from May to February, and also to change the day of the monthly meeting from the second Friday to the second Thursday of the month, this to be in practice for the balance of the term.

After the business session, an enjoyable programme was given, with an interesting and instructive address by Rev. J. E. Todd, who spoke on the necessity of encouraging children to look for higher education and to instill high ambitions in their minds. Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. H. T. Doig, a pianoforte selection by Hugh McCullough, and violin numbers by Robert Wyllie, with accompaniments by Mrs. G. Evans.

Refreshments were served by Mesdames Stanton and Spencer.

The president, Mrs. E. H. Howson, was in the chair.

PRICE OF EGGS ANNOYS VENDOR

Toronto Price Not Obtainable on Local Market To-day.

BUYERS NUMEROUS.

There was a large crowd of buyers on the farmers' market this morning, the basket section having more than its usual quota of men and women intent on purchases for the Sunday dinner.

One of the vendors was bewailing the fact that eggs in Toronto were selling at a dollar a dozen, while a nickel apiece could hardly be got in Peterboro. But the buyers were not registering any sorrow over the fact. Eggs were priced at 55 and 60 cents a dozen this morning, and butter sold all the way from 40 to 50 cents a pound. Good-looking chickens were 20 and 23 cents a pound, with 25 cents as a top price. Ducks were 25 cents, geese 23 and 25 cents, with some enormous specimens on view; and turkeys were 35 and 40 cents a pound.

"If I could afford it, I would buy it, but I am nearer the grave than a banquet," said a portly gentleman with a pink face, eyeing longingly a nice fat duck laid out carefully on the counter in front of him.

Woollen socks, home-made cooking, artificial flowers in wax and painted flowers in long vases, jars of horseradish and red beet pickle, were among some of the commodities offered for sale upstairs this morning, and in the entrance below, there was a nice display of pretty things in reed work.

At the fish mans stall, a discussion went on as to the manner of ascertaining the difference between various types of salmon fish, and a lady hesitating over the advisability of purchasing a piece near the tail received some sage advice from two nearby gentlemen. Salmon trout was 15 and 18 cents a pound; fillets 20 cents, and fresh sea herring 4 for a quarter.

Potatoes were $2.75 a bag this morning. Pork was 20 and 22 cents a pound, and lamb 22 and 25 cents. Apples were as plentiful as ever; Tomlin Sweets and Russets selling for $1.25 a bag and Snows at 75 a bushel. Anjou pears were 50 cents a peck.

Barred Rocks in a crate were $1.50 apiece; wood ranged all the way from $8 to $12 a load, and a vendor of Christmas trees offered them at 15 and 25 cents each.

S. Stapleton. The home-made cooking sale was in charge of Mrs. Jas. Fanning, Mrs. S. F. M. Touchburn, and Mrs. G. Hall. Decorations were carried out with pink 'mums and a yellow color scheme, with yellow flowers and yellow candles, made the tea-table very attractive. During the afternoon, an enjoyable musical programme was given, with vocal solos by Mrs. Claire Stuart, Mrs. Gerald McClelland, and violin selections by Mrs. Claude Wade of Toronto. Accompanists were the Misses Marjorie Turner and Gladys Graham.

Hill Ascent Trial To Local Motorists

Motorists were given a golden opportunity to test the efficacy of chains by an attempt to negotiate Hunter street hill this morning. Some whose business demanded them to make the ascent, managed to do so without difficulty by dint of getting a racing start at the bottom; others, however, managed to get part way up and were forced to slide back to the bottom ignominiously. It resembled the attempt of the fabled youth to climb the glass mountain.

One man in a large car, observing that he could not "make it," tried to back down gracefully, but the chained wheels failed to grip the icy surface and, sliding from the crown of the road, he bumped violently into the curb.

Another reached the goal only after much racing of the motor and spinning of mailed wheels after a period of some minutes.

IN MEMORIAM.

SIMPSON.—In loving memory of our little darling, Marguerite Doreen Simpson, who was called to rest Dec. 13th, 1922.

"Three years have passed since our darling left us,
Our grief no tongue can tell,
But Jesus took her in His arms
To Heaven, where all is well.

We loved her, Oh we loved her,
But Jesus loved her best;
God give us grace to meet her
In that sweet Home of Rest."

IN MEMORIAM

COONEY—In loving memory of our dear daughter, Viola, who passed away, December 12, 1924.
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought her death so near.
The silent grief that's in our hearts,
No human life can trace
For many an aching heart is hid
Behind a smiling face.
The golden gates were open; a gentle voice said come, and with farewell words unspoken she calmly entered home.
—Sadly missed by Father, Mother and family.

GRAIN ELEVATOR AT FRASERVILLE AND THREE C.N.R. FREIGHT CARS ON SIDING DESTROYED EARLY SUNDAY

Flames Swathed Building in Hot Embrace and Held Off Villagers—40,000 Bushels of Grain in Blazing Holocaust.

BUILDING OWNED BY JOHN DOUGLAS

Peterboro Fire Engine Played Dual Streams on Embers For Period of Four Hours—Origin of Fire Unknown.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

The red menace of fire stung Frazerville folk to action on Saturday night, when for some reason, at present unknown the main elevator, belonging to John Douglas, of 591 Water Street resolved itself into a blazing holocaust. Wind driven, the flames rapidly swathed the entire building in their hot embrace, so that it was impossible for the people to do anything to save the building. Three box cars on the siding were burned, leaving their twisted framewosk on the trucks. At four oclock yesterday, after repeated calls had been sent in, Chief Gimblett ordered out the steamer and taking six men with him arrived at the scene. Of the tall building which formerly stood on the Port Hope line of the C.N.R., nothing remained but a huge smouldering heap of grain.

Although the steamer had seen but little action in the years since the Quaker Oats fire, it performed nobly, feeding two hose lines to capacity. After playing the dual stream on the embers for a period of nearly four hours, the men returned to the city, leaving a mass of smoking ruins in which red embers still glowed furtively.

Mr. Douglas when asked the value and amount of grain in the building, said that he could make no accurate statement. He declared that on the property, including two elevators, there was insurance to the extent of $65,000, but he could not state the exact amount covering the burned elevator. He declared that all of the wheat contained had been sold and would have been taken out of the building within a few days. Two empty cars and a third partially unloaded were burned on the siding. They had contained peas.

Foreman Saw It First.

R. J. Delehaye, the foreman of the plant and who lives near the elevators, told The Examiner that his attention was first attracted by the sound of a mighty roaring. "The wind was blowing a hurricane at the time," he said, "but this noise sounded different. I went out on the stoop and at once saw that the west cupola was a mass of flames. It was twenty past eleven. I rushed down to the place at once, but knew that it would be impossible to save it." When asked for his opinion as to the cause he said he had no idea how the blaze started. There had been no fire in the office stove the day previous.

Mr. Delehaye said that in the elevator there were 25,800 bushels of wheat; 15,000 bushels of peas, and alsike to the value of from $10,000 to $15,000.

Mr. Douglas said that the elevator was one of the best equipped plants in Ontario, as he had recently installed some of the latest designs of machines for the work. Among the modern contrivances were hopper scales for weighing outgoing grain. There was also a pea grader, which was reputed to have been the only one of its kind in the Dominion.

Mr. Douglas said that the building was about 92 feet in length and had a capacity of 50,000 bushels. He believed that the fire originated from sparks set free by a freight engine. One passed, he declared, about 10.30 and as there was a door open at a height of 50 feet from the ground, he thought the spark might have flown through the aperture, alighted in some grain dust, and caused a fire instantly.

Flames Attracted Many.

Mrs. M. Graham is an elderly lady who lives in a white house within 75 feet of the building, and said she was awakened about 11.30. She declared that her house was saved only by the fact that there was a northwest wind blowing Otherwise the building so close to the track would have burned also.

Earl Johnston, who lives about 150 yards east of the elevator, fell from the roof of his house while endeavoring to wet the shingles by pouring pails of water over them. He was not seriously hurt, but the house was in grave danger all through the night.

As the fire progressed, crowds collected attracted in spite of the blizzard by the brilliance of the blaze. One car of people from Millbrook was lost in the storm and it was only by obtaining bearings from the blaze while on a hilltop that those in the auto found the right road.

Bright as Noon.

One man, R. J. Wilan, said he lived four miles from the fire, yet the brilliance in his yard was such that he could have picked up a pin. He declared that the flames were shooting out of the west cupola which was 60 feet from the ground level.

When the men from the Peterborough Fire Department arrived, they found only a mighty heap of grain with, here and there, a jagged tongue of flame spurting forth. The steamer was at once fired and as soon as sufficient pressure was obtained began sucking water from a small pond which had been dug out in preparation. Two lines of hose were used, one on each side of the building at first, and then both of them were used on the north-westerly portion of the blaze. As long as water lasted two steady streams were poured on the parching grain. All the while a fierce wind tended to keep the blaze alive, in spite of the water. Later snow began to descend adding to the discomfort of men who had labored in the opposing heat and cold for four hours.

The steamer was loaded on a flat car at the C.N.R. station with a block and tackle arrangement. It was securely braced with sleepers and from the position in which it was first placed it pumped the water on the flames. The firemen went to the scene of the fire in a special coach, while Chief Gimblett arrived in his speedy advance car.

A. Beausoliel, traffice manager for this district, placed the value of the three box cars at $10,000.00.

REPORTS DENIED BY TWO NATIONS

Japan and Russia Not Anxious to Cause Crisis in Manchuria.

NO INTERFERENCE.

TOKIO, Dec. 14. — (Canadian Press).—Although Manchuria appears to be torn by civil strife, which it seems possible may involve Japan and Russia, it is evident from the official statements of the representatives of both countries that neither is anxious to press matters to a critical point. Ambassador Kopp, Soviet envoy to Tokio, denies a report emanating originally from Moscow that he has been instructed to protest against the reinforcement of Japanese troops in Manchuria, while Premier Kato and Foreign Minister Shidesara reiterate that Japan is continuing her policy of non-interference although she has troops ready to send if Japanese lives or property are endangered.

Hunters Hunting Hounds; Dogs Failed To Return

MARMORA, Dec. 14—These are the days when even hounds have to be hounded up. Search is being instituted for several in this district who failed to report to headquarters on the cessation of hostilities in the hunting field.

COBOURG MAN FACES CHARGE OF ASSAULT

Will Be Tried For Attack on Watchman One Night Recently.

COBOURG, Dec. 14.—The beating up of James Butler, a respected citizen, early one morning recently, as he was returning to his home after being on duty all night as watchman at the Arlington Hotel, was the reason for a charge of assault with intent to do bodliy harm being made against Thomas O'Grady. The matter came up for preliminary hearing before Magistrate Floyd. The case awakened a large amount of interest. W. F. Kerr appeared for the Crown, and T. F. Hall, K.C., was counsel for O'Grady, who elected to be tried by the Judge without a jury. Bail was fixed at $2,000. It is understood he is to come up on December 16.

COAST GUARD MAKES STEADY PROGRESS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14. (Canadian Press).—The coastguard is making "steady and gratifying progress" in breaking up rum-running and "will drive this menace from the United States shores in due time," Rear-Admiral F. C. Billard, coastguard commandent, declared in his annual report, but he warned that it must be prepared for a trying task for years to come."

FRENCH PUBLIC SHOWING SIGNS FINANCIAL PANIC

Rushing to Convert Money Into House, Jewels, Etc.

FRANC FALLING.

Finance Bills Are Disliked By Members Of All Parties.

PARIS, Dec. 14. — (Canadian Press).—France's financial plight daily grows worse and the public is beginning to show signs of something like a panic which is being heightened by a series of sharp drops in the value of the franc on the exchange market. That coin now stands at a lower level than it ever has reached before, and every Frenchman who is in possession of any quantity of them is hastening to convert the money into something tangible—houses, diamonds and even raw gold and platinum.

Minister of Finance Loucheur's seven bills with which he hopes to bridge the financial situation seemingly are disliked by everybody, irrespective of political creed. One thing seems certain, that M. Loucheur's principal bill, the revenue bill, which is in the hands of the Finance Committee of the Chamber, will not pass as it stands.

One of the children, Jack Ferguson, nine years, succumbed to his injuries in the General Hospital.

DUEL AVERTED.

"Old Fool" Epithet Slip of Tongue.

VIENNA, Dec. 14.— (Canadian Press.)—The threatened duel between Dr. Hainisch, president of the Austrian Republic and Alfred Guertler, former finance minister, has been averted. Chancellor Zipel, leader of the party to which Guertler belongs, immediately tendered his apologies to the president.

DEPUTY OFFICER DURING ELECTION SENT FOR TRIAL

P. A. Robb, of Brule, in the Peace River Riding, is Committed.

ON TWO COUNTS.

Some of Charges Preferred Against Him Are Dismissed.

EDMONTON, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—The trial of P. A. Robb, deputy returning officer at Brule, in the Peace River riding, on charges arising out of the conduct of the recent Federal election in that constituency, is expected to take place at the January Assizes. At Brule, on Friday, upon the conclusion of the preliminary hearing, the presiding magistrate remanded Robb for trial on bail of $2,000 upon two of the five charges preferred against him. These two counts were to the effect that the accused had fraudulently put into the ballot box papers other than those he was lawfully entitled to put in, and that he put, otherwise than is authorized by the Election Act, his name on papers purporting to be, or capable of being, taken as ballot papers.

There was no evidence to show, the court held, that, as alleged in other counts, Robb had committed forgery, destroyed ballot papers or a pack of ballot papers. These three charges were dismissed, being in addition to similar dismissals afforded the accused in the morning when he was charged along with Wilcox and Burch to have used as genuine, papers that he knew to be forged.

MANY SLAYINGS OVER WEEK END

Three Died on Saturday and Four on Sunday in Chicago and Vicinity.

POLICEMAN KILLED.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Killers wrote a heavy record on the police annals of Chicago and vicinity over the week-end.

The mysterious slaying of a family of three near Batavia, Saturday night, remained unsolved as guns and knives Sunday brought death to four, including one policeman.

With an abandoned automobile which was expected to yield fingerprints, the most promising clue, authorities of the neighboring counties are undecided whether the slaying of Henry Jeske, a bank clerk; his wife, Eva, and six-year-old son, Ralph, was the work of robbers or of a degenerate seeking revenge.

Two former convicts, resting in a River Forest roadhouse after an afternoon haul, shot it out with a policeman who attempted to question them.

Ed Pflaume, a motor cycle officer, was fatally wounded. As he fell another policeman shot and killed one of the robbers, who later was identified as James Johnston, sought in connection with the robbery of the State Bank of McHinery of $18,775, on October 24. His companion, wounded in the arm, escaped through a cornfield. He was identified to the police as William J. White, who received a discharge on parole from Joliet Penitentiary last April.

A feud between rival bootleggers was believed responsible for the slaying of Frank Along. His wife said he was fired at when he answered the door bell. A fight in a south side candy shop resulted in the death of Ralph Hawkinson and the serious injury of a companion.

STORE ROBBED.

Two Gun Man Took $30 From Dominion Store Branch in Toronto.

TORONTO, Dec. 14. (Canadian Press).—Armed with two revolvers, an unidentified man held up and robbed the Dominion Stores, Church Street, Saturday night. He got away with $30 after compelling John Huey, manager of the place, and his wife to stand against the wall with their arms in the air.

PERSIANS NAME REZA KHAN SHAH

Will Take Oath of Office on Tuesday—Succeeds Exiled Ahmed Kajar.

WAS ONCE HOSTLER.

TEHERAN, Persia, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—The Constituent Assembly yesterday transferred the Crown of Persia to Reza Khan Pehlevi, once a hostler in the Cossack stables, and then dissolved. Reza will take oath before the Mejliss, or National Assembly on Tuesday, and will hold his first public court on Wednesday.

The Constituent Assembly on Saturday unanimously approved amendments to the constitution under which Reza Khan was to be named Shah to replace the deposed Ahmed Kajor, who is an exile in France. Under the change in the constitution the new dynasty will take Reza's family name of Pehlevi, and the eldest son of the Shah becomes Crown Prince.

TRIPLE MURDER OF BANK CLERK, WIFE AND SON

Shot on Return to Lonely Farm House After Christmas Shipping.

SATURDAY NIGHT

Bodies Found by Hired Man —Car Recovered in West Chicago.

AURORA, Ill., December 14. Canadian Press. — Few clues were found on Sunday by investigators of the triple murder Saturday night of Henry Jeske, a young bank clerk, his wife, Eva, and six year old son, Ralph, as they returned to their lonely farm house, near Batavia, Ills., after Christmas shopping.

Their automobile, in which the slayer fled, after leaving the bullet-pierced bodies of Jeske and the boy in the yard, and Mrs. Jeske in the living room, was found on Sunday morning in West Chicago, Ills., five miles away. It was covered with blood splashes. Search was made on it for fingerprint traces.

A finding of murder by persons unknown was returned by the coroner's jury which recommended that a large reward be offered for the slayer.

The jury questioned Harvey Hall, 18, the Jeske hired man, who found the bodies as he returned home about 10.30 o'clock. He accounted for his presence in Batavia during the evening and a check up by the authorities exonerated him from any connection with the killing.

May have been Burglar.

In support of their theory that the slayer was a burglar, who had been surprised by the arrival of the family, the investigators found the latch broken on the living room window, and a bullet hole in the front door frame. A dresser drawer had been ransacked, and its contents strewn about, but a child's savings bank containing a few dollars and some jewelry of small value had not been touched. The telephone had been disconnected and wires pulled down leading to a radio antenna on the roof.

25 PERSONS CHLOROFORMED AND FIVE HOMES RANSACKED BY GANG OF ROBBERS WHO LEFT NO TRACE

Bandits Gone When Victims Recovered Consciousness —Loot Worth $1,300.

NO CLUE FOUND

Robbers Left Windows Open to Insure Recovery From Drug.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Sheriff's deputies last night, after an all-day search, were without clues as to the identity of robbers who on Saturday invaded the village of Bradley, near here, chloroformed 25 persons and escaped with money and jewellery valued at $1,300.

The robbers confined their activities to five families. At the home of David Landers five were chloroformed; six in the house of Dewey Lyons; four in the home of Joseph Daranek; three in David Harbison's home, and seven in the home of Julius Legross. Officials last night were continuing their investigation of places where the bandits might have obtained the chloroform. Entering the homes, the robbers put their victims under the influence of the anaesthetic, and for several hours deliberately and systematically ransacked the five houses. A number of the homes were entered by means of skeleton keys.

Some of the victims recovered consciousness around noon and notified officers here, who proceeded to the mining village. A number of those put under the anaesthetic still were sleeping when the officers arrived.

All the victims had fully recovered Sunday, reports said, and had suffered no illness. The robbers in each home opened windows so as to insure recovery from the effects of the chloroform.

At the Legross home Mrs. Legross told officers she saw a strange man standing over her bed with what she termed a fumigator. She soon became unconscious and was unable to give any description of the man. At the other homes, persons said they saw robbers enter their homes, but before they could leave their beds they were put to sleep with towels saturated with choloroform.

LAKE STEAMER HAD ROUGH TRIP

Ran Into Very Heavy Weather in Lake Huron on Thursday.

CARGO DAMAGED.

MIDLAND, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press)—Running into very heavy weather in Lake Huron, the steamer Belvoir had a rough time and was five days making the trip from the head of the lakes. On Thursday morning about eleven o'clock the vessel experienced the roughest weather of the trip and heavy seas striking her forward forced water through a hawse pipe, wrecking the crew's quarters, the men losing all their personal belongings. Captain Heffernan put back to Detour and four or five thousand bushels were taken off in order to put the vessel on an even keel. She arrived here yesterday and after discharging left at 11.45 p.m. for Collingwood dry dock. She is a canal size and the quantity of her cargo was damaged.

In Peterborough Churches

MURRAY STREET BAPTIST

Gordon Crofoot of the famous McMaster Evangelistic band spoke to a mass meeting of men yesterday afternoon. The Church was well filled for the occasion. Mr. Crofoot took as his subject, "Looking back toward the Cross." The speaker described in detail the famous painting "The Return from Calvary" and brought the attention of his audience to the four foremost figures in the picture. The light shines through and brings before our eyes the smallest cross. On the face of John there is a deep look of sorrow. What was in his mind as he looked at the cross? He was spoken of as the beloved disciple. It was John to whom the Master said "Son, behold thy mother." John was always one of the three that were with Jesus in his crucial moments. John wrote three great works, the Gospel, Epistles and we believe he wrote Revelations. It is John who gives us the picture of the greatness of the person that was on the Cross. Unlike the other Gospels the gospel of John starts at the beginning of things. John saw Christ as a man—where is there a greater picture of man than that found in the thirteenth chapter of John—Jesus washing his disciples' feet. Christ stooping to be the servant of man in order that he might come into fellowship with us. You cannot read the gospel without realizing that there never was a more wonderful man than our Lord. Jesus Christ always saw the soul of man as those who could become servants of God. His death was more than that of a martyr—it was to take away the sin of the world. He died that men might live and live apart from their sin. Some of us have not a great idea of sin but John knew. The greatness of the power of the Cross is that God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life. Unless a person can see in the Cross Jesus suffering for the world, he cannot come to God.

ST. PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN.

For his morning subject, Rev. Wm. Allan chose the first verse of the Twenty-third Psalm, "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want."

He said that people love the Psalm because it reflects every possible mood, that it describes the feelings of those in the depths and at the peaks. It has an appeal to all ages. Those who are young find inspiration in its promise. Those who are old find comfort.

The message is no new production, said the speaker, for centuries had passed since David, as harpist, calmed Saul's turbulent nature with sweet music. Changes have taken place since that Psalm was voiced. The harp, banner and palace of David are no more; there is no remnant remaining of his Bible; all material things have passed into oblivion. What has kept the Psalm alive? Surely, Rev. Mr. Allan said, it was because God was in it. If an individual wishes success, he should know that his only hope of victory was to incorporate God in his efforts.

The verse deals with the question of relationship. It is neither hypothetical nor abstract, but is vital and real. It does not say: "The Lord might, or shall be, my Shepherd," but it does say, "The Lord is my Shepherd." To-day all Christians can claim the fact of relationship but in the days when David lived only the high priests could mention the name of God; others left a blank space in their writings, not daring to mention His name. They did not dare then to claim relationship.

People to-day are sheep by the renewing of their natures. Being sheep they are prone to wander, and may do so until they become lost. There is no person who can throw stones at any others for all are fallible. Humans have the intelligence to hew out a way for themselves but they need protection, both temporal and physical. It is not because of individual forethought that some are free of disease. All are beholden to the superintending pow of Jesus.

The shepherd would neglect his own creature comforts to take care of his sheep. Anyone who might be hired to do so would not have their interests at heart. Jesus is not a hireling and He has all the shepherd's skill and power of diagnosis, said the speaker.

The Psalm said, "They shall not want." David did not catalogue the possible wants, but the simple statement covered all temporal needs. God has not promised confectionery, down beds or rosy paths, but He has promised a sufficiency of bread and water—and it would possibly be better for them if people ate more of the staples and less of the palate-tickling foods.

A sheep is a restless animal. It will lie down only when it is weary or satisfied. What a picture of contentment is drawn by the Psalmist, who represents the sheep as lying down in green pastures.

The Psalm is like two English birds, said Mr. Allan. It resembles the lark, which sings the more sweetly at the greater heights. The music stops when the bird's feet touch the earth. Thus the voice of the Christian becomes stilled who descends in the mud of mundane things. Also the Psalm is like the nightingale, which sings in the darkest night as the fearless Christian is encouraged while passing through the shadowy valley of death.

Following the sermon, the congregation partook of the elements of communion.

ST. GEORGE'S ANGLICAN.

Rev. J. L. Hughes preached the third of a series of sermons on the four last things at the evening service at St. George's Anglican Church yesterday. The four are death, judgment, hell and heaven, and last night the subject was hell. The text was Mark, 9:47 and 48, "If thine eyes offend thee pluck it out; it is better for thee to enter into the Kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire; where their worm dieth knot, and the fire is not quenched."

Mr. Hughes said that the subject was not a popular one, even among clergymen, in these days, as it is customary to make church going attractive, and many people don't believe in hell. The text is from the words of Christ himself, and He seems to confirm the old Jewish belief of Sheol, or the grave, where the dead remain, and Gehenna, or the place of punishment. "Unfortunately," said the speaker, "both words have been translated by the one word, 'hell'," and he gave instances of each word in a number of texts.

Punishment on earth, said the speaker, is retributive, while God's punishment is meant for the restoration of the sinner, although sometimes, when it makes him blaspheme, it becomes retributive. It all depends on two things, the holiness of God, and man's freedom of will. Men won't accept the punishments of God and blaspheme, and are cast into torment. The word translated 'Eternal' has caused many arguments, and is taken to mean an indefinite period, and it is not known whether it is to have any end.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

"Who art Thou?" was the text taken from the first chapter of the Gospel according to St. John, and forming the basis of the sermons preached at the morning Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday by Rev. P. Butler, the reverend speaker enlarging on the attributes which should mark the Christian who answers to this question.

"Christians are those who profess the doctrines of Christ, and, either actually or by desire, belong to the true Church of Christ. St. Paul says: "God hath predestined us unto the adoption of sons, through Jesus Christ." We were born children of the devil, because of our origin through Adam, but by baptism we undergo a spiritual regeneration which makes us children of God. And if we are sons of God, we are heirs also to His kingdom, with a right to be nourished and cherished and protected by our Father. Christ says that our union with God is the same as His own union with His Father. As Pope Leo said: "This is the blessing that surpasses all blessings; the right to call God Father," and that is our first and main prerogative.

"The second prerogative of a Christian is that he is a member of Jesus Christ. The spiritual body of Christ is His Church, so that by being members of the Church you are also members of the spiritual Body of Jesus Christ, and you are directed by Him as the head of that body. This prerogative causes a great difference to exist between you and those who are not members of His Church, as you are privileged in the means of grace and truth which are a part of Christ Himself

"The third attribute of a Christian is that he is the temple of the Holy Ghost. St. Paul says: 'Know you not that your bodies are the temples of God and that the Holy Ghost dwells therein.' It is natural in human life that a man who feels himself more worthy than others should try to let others know about it, but if those who watch you closely from day to day were to analyze their impressions of you from your daily conduct, would they be likely to doubt your assumption of being a real Christian?"

St. Louis of France and the great Emperor Theodosius, said Father Butler, put more emphasis on the importance of their title to Christian than their regal titles. "We cannot all do as St. Sebastian did, and have the words 'I am a Christian' burnt on our breasts, but we can all give an example of true Christianity to those about us, and live up to the dignity of a Christian which separates the true follower of Christ from all others."

Reference was made by Father Butler to the ceremony taking place in St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, last night, when three young men from St. Francis Xavier Mission Seminary said their last farewells on the occasion of their departure to the foreign mission fields in China. In the past, individual priests have gone out to China to follow up this work, but this is the first time in the history of Canada that a group of young men have taken the step which separates them from their homes and people, to labor among the heathen in far-off lands.

KNOX UNITED.

At the Communion service in the morning the sermon was on the sacrifice of God the Father. "He had yet one, a bloved son; He sent Him." "He that spared not His own son, but delivered Him up for us all." Back of Bethlehem, with its Infant Redeemer so humbly cradled, was the sacrifice of the Father. We cannot overmagnify the sacrifice of the Son as He gave His body to be broken and His blood to be shed for the remission of sins, but let us not forget that the Father gave the son. We should never forget the sacrifices made by our soldiers in the Great War, but let us not forget the sacrifices made by mothers and fathers who gave their boys for the cause. The Father and the Son were one, their lives knit together. Think of the sufferings of sympathy, on the Father's part, in addition to the prior surrender. The pang of sympathy is often greater than the actual suffering itself. It is easier to fight than to remain passively behind. The pain of wounds in fierce combat may be nothing compared to the dull heartache back home. We think too little of the Father's part. It is the groundwork of our faith, as it was Paul's. "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him freely give us all things?" Why, then, be consumed with cares and worry?

In the evening, the sermon was on Jesus, "the man nobody knows," as Bruce Barton writes of Him: "A long time with you, yet has't thou not known me, Philip!" Often Jesus was not known. Of course the world, though made by Him, did not know Him. But even among His disciples, He was not known as He really was. In every department of knowledge the great leaders who are years ahead of their fellows, remain unknown until long afterwards. But Jesus was long centuries ahead of His fellows. So they knew Him not. Others are fast superseded and soon left far behind. Jesus is never superseded. Back to Jesus is a false cry, a well-meaning. Jesus is still centuries ahead. It is "On to Jesus: "Ten thousand years misunderstood!"

The cry of our age is the cry rights! The rights of man! Everybody's right, etc. In Bethlehem emptied Himself of the glory which He had with the Father. He gave up His rights. His watchword was duty! Obedience to the Father will.

"But the King of Heaven Who made them all,
Is fair and gentle, and very small
He lies in the straw by the oxen stall,
Let us think of Him to-day."

He told of the good Samaritan, men helping folk not their own. The world still fails to comprehend His. A good resolution for the New Year is that we recognize our faulty comprehension of His life and Person and that we "fallow on to know the Lord."

Tennyson, prompted by the coming of the New Year bells, wrote:

"Ring out wild bells to the wild sky,
The flying cloud, the frosty light etc."

"Ring in the valiant man and free
The larger heart, the kindlier hand
Ring out the darkness of the land
Ring in the Christ that is to be
"Let us follow on to know the Lord!"

WESTERN GRAIN DEPRECIATED BY RAINY WEATHER

Grading Tough and Damp After 40 Per Cent. of Inspections.

EXPORTS ACTIVE.

Stocks at Head of Lakes Rather Low—Commission's Report.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press.)—Following is the report of E. A. Russell, statistician of the Board of Grain Commissioners, on the movement of western grain crops in November, 1925:

"A complete change in the weather throughout the Prairie Provinces early in the month to a period of dry weather and milder temperatures enabled outdoor work to be resumed and grain lying in the fields to be threshed. Marketings at country points, which had fallen off, immediately began to rise and a record movement to the terminals set in. The effect on the soaking the grain received in the fields during October has been all too evident in the large proportion grading tough and damp. At times over forty per cent. of the daily inspections, and the lowering of grades.

"Apparently about the second week of the month European importers began to lose confidence in the sense of security in regard to native supplies, supplemented by imports from Russia and the Danubian countries, being sufficient for the near future, and justifying a holding-off policy until the prospects of the Australian and Argentine crops became more evident. With home stocks extremely low and no further supplies available from Russia, more active purchasing of Canadian wheat became an urgent necessity. With barely 25,000,000 bushels of wheat at lower lake or Atlantic seaboard ports, every effort was made to move forward as much as possible before the close of navigation to supply immediate requirements and to provide for purchases during the winter.

"Shipments from countries other than North America have been so small that until the new Argentine crop is available, Canadian supplies must be relied upon to furnish most of the export shipments until at least the middle of January.

Close of Navigation.

"It is anticipated that, subsequent to the week ending Nov. 14 at least some 50 to 100,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat will be required at eastern points to furish supplies for home and United States' mills and for export. Up to December 8th, shipment from Fort William and Port Arthur, plus stocks at eastern points November 14, totalled 78,000,000 bushels, but shipments during the last four days of the season of navigation, which closed Dec. 12, should add another 10,000,000 bushels, leaving wheat stocks at the head of the lakes fairly low. Whether these shipments will need to be supplemented by a substantial rail movement during the latter end of the winter season depends entirely upon how rapidly export shipments are made; but the rate at which wheat has been going into consumptive channels for the past month indicates further supplies will be needed before the opening of the 1926 season of navigation.

Vancouver Shipments.

"Shipments via Vancouver will probably increase substantially, provided ocean freight rates are not too high. A month ago tonnage was offering at 25/ and 27/6 with a fair volume available at the latter rate. Shippers, apparently, held off until the space was obtainable at distress rates with the consequence that no forward bookings were made and tonnage became scarce. Rates are now firm at 35/ for December and January shipments.

"Lake freight rates were very low for the first two weeks of November at 2 cents per bushel wheat basis, to bay ports, 1 5-8 cents to 2 cents to Buffalo and 8 1-2 cents to Montreal. Between Nov. 14 and Nov. 18, when a brisk demand for space commenced, rates rose to 3 cents to bay ports and Buffalo, and 10 cents to Montreal, remaining around that figure for the balance of the month.

"Car inspection for November were: Wheat 54,197; oats 4,232; barley, 4,792; flax, 1,552; rye, 563."

MUSSOLINI TO DIE.

PARIS, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press)—The year 1926 is going to be a comparatively quiet one, according to two Parisian prophets, Mme. Fraya, a Basque, and Raymond, a Hungarian, whose forecasts are printed in The Petit Journl. Their principal item of news is that Premier Mussolini will lose his power in Italy and die a year later. Mme. Fraya prophesies violent times in Italy at the overthrow. Several successful trans-Atlantic flights are seen, as well as unanticipated air developments. Raymond says regular trans-Atlantic air service will begin in two years. Mme. Fraya asserts cancer and tuberculosis will be conquered in 1926.

JERSEY COW MAKES BUTTER FAT RECORD

524 Pounds in 305 New Mark For Her Class.

OTTAWA, Ont., December 14. Canadian Press. — Exceeding the former champion's record by seven pounds of butter fat. the senior yearling Jersey heifer, "Farleigh St. Mames Retta," owned and developed by the Dominion Experimental Station at Summerland, British Columbia, has just established a new world's record for her breed and age, it was announced Sunday at the Central Experimental Farm here. The record was made under the rules of the Canadian Record of Performance and the scoring is based on fat production.

"Farleigh St. Mames Retta," calved at the age of one year and 345 days. Her record is announced as 9,013 pounds of milk and 524 pounds of fat in 305 days, as compared with a record of 10,532 pounds of milk and 507 pounds of fat in the 305 day period by the former champion "Golden Lad's Josephine 2nd," owned by Sherman Nursery Company, Iowa.

The rules of the Canadian record of performance require that she freshen within 400 days of her previous date, which requirement she will easily fulfill, it is stated.

Girl's Decision To Bob Hair Upheld As Legal Father Forbidden By Judge To Sue Barber For Assault

PARIS, Dec. 14.—(United Press).—A learned judge of Dijon, after meditating at great length and consulting divers legal authorities, has ruled that a minor female child can go to a barber shop and have her hair cut, and that the barber that administers unto her does not commit assault in cutting her hair and is not liable to damages.

The case made scissors snip with indignation all over France. Little Mlle. Falaise, seventeen, wanted to be in the mode so she went to M. Soret, coiffeur, and paid him the proper fee for cutting off her long, flowing, golden-hued curls.

She went proudly home, but at sight of her shaved neck her father was stricken with grief and indignation. He sued the coiffeur for assault and damages on the grounds that his daughter was a minor and incapable of guiding her own destiny when and how she should have her hair cut.

The Barbers' Federation of France rushed to M. Soret's defense and built up a strong case around the rights and duties of a tonsorial practitioner. They argued that if a girl cannot decide when she should have her hair cut, no more can a boy decide to have the fuz shaved off his face, and if this state of things was to come about, they wuold have to ask as many questions as an old-time American bartender over the twenty-one age limit.

The judge listened to many witnesses and digested all evidence pro and con the cut. Photographs of Mademoiselle "before" were exhibited in court, and she was exhibited as "after." The judge took the case under advisement and has finally handed down the decision that the barber was in his rights in serving the girl without asking for a parents certificate of consent. The father was directed to pay the costs of the action.

L.T.B. LODGE HAD CHURCH PARADE

Annual Service This Year Was Held at Baptist Church.

IMPRESSIVE SERMON.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 14.—Members of the True Blue Lodge of Campbellford, and of the Ladies Lodge, held their annual church parade Sunday, the edifice chosen this year being the Baptist church, where the pastor, Rev. Edward D. Ford delivered a sermon which can hardly fail to make the brethren more proud of the work in which they are engaged and to inspire them with the ambition to make still greater effort.

The text chosen by Mr. Forde was found in the book of Nehemiah 6:3, "I am doing a great work and cannot come down."

Nehemiah, governor of Jerusalem, was rebuilding the walls of that city, and restoring it to its former greatness. The enemies of the Jews, the armies of Samaria, were encamped near the city, and the leaders sent four messages to Nehemiah to come out to effect a compromise, but four times the governor sent back an answer in the words of the text. The work in which he was engaged could not be given up. No compromise was to be considered.

Nehemiah, the speaker said, was filled with the same spirit as that of a True Blue. The True Blue of today belong to the same order as Nehemiah, the nobility of God. These were four early scenes in the life of the Governor of Jerusalem which prepared him for the sending of such a message. He had been cup bearer to Xerxes, the Persian king and had gained the confidence of that monarch. When the Jews asked for a leader to save them from their enemies and to restore the walls of their city, Nehemiah was not only chosen for that task but was appointed governor of the Persian provinces by Xerxes. He was well fitted for the task as he was an architect as well as a general.

Men Like Nehemiah.

"Would to God," said the preacher, "that we had more public men of the stamp of Nehemiah. If we had more people like him we would have more men in authority like him. There are, however, many Christian people like him, people who have with unselfish interest, set out to rebuild the walls of their particular Jerusalem and to reconstruct one social and national life."

Fight Against Evil.

Mr. Ford urged his hearer to keep up their fight against modern evils and the first of these which he mentioned was gambling. Gambling is really stealing, the getting of something for nothing. No other sin so chloroforms the soul. It lowers those who indulge in it to the level of the Roman soldiers who cast lots for the garments of Christ.

Another evil against which the True Blues were urged to fight was social impurity. They should do their part to make the world a more moral place in which to live. Against the suggestive stories and pictures in the newspapers and magazines they should take the same stand as did Nehemiah. There must be no compromise. The young members of the order should be urged to make the world a cleaner place.

Nehemiah was protecting the homes, the young and the old in Jerusalem. There are enemies still trying to destroy our homes, but "thank God for the Orange Order, which has always stood four square for the sanctity of our homes."

Clothed With Authority.

Nehemiah was clothed with authority from the King of Persia so that he might well refuse to compromise with his enemies. Churches and societies in the work in which they are engaged, are invested with the authority from the King Jesus Christ.

"Nehemiah had authority from Xerxes," said the speaker, "but you in your fight for Protestantism, have the authority of King George, of the Government of this country, and best of all of the King of Kings. Then let us take our stand with Nehemiah and refuse to compromise with our enemies."

Successful Tea.

The C.G.I.T. of the Baptist Church held a successful tea and sale of home made cooking in the basement Saturday afternoon. The funds of the organization will be materially increased as a result.

The "fender smashers" club it now getting many new members daily. Have you joined yet?

PLACES WREATH ON CENOTAPH

"An arrow of memory shot to the Happy Hunting Ground" is the way Os-ke-non-ton, the Mowhawk singer of Indian lore, spoke of the wreath he laid on the Toronto cenotaph. Os-ke-non-ton came from New York for the express purpose of laying this offering of flowers on the cenotaph in the memory of the Canadian Indians who fell in the great war. He himself is a native of the Lake of Bays region.

EIGHT NORTHUMBERLAND REEVES CANDIDATES FOR WARDENSHIP OF THE COUNTIES COUNCIL FOR 1926

SERVICE RECORDS

Reeve McCubbin of Percy and Reeve Davidson of Campbellford Aspirants.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, Dec. 14. — The Wardenship for the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham goes to the former municipality in 1926, and the esteem in which the position is held is shown by the fact that up to date eight of the present reeves have declared themselves as candidates, provided of course they are returned by their constituents in the next municipal elections. The list of aspirants, every one of whom has authorized The Examiner to use his name in connection with the Wardenship, is as follows:

Charles H. Davidson, Campbellford; John McCubbin, Percy; Harry A. Bedal, Brighton Township; S. A. Clarke, of Cramahe; Peter Haig, of Haldimand; W. F. Elliott, Murray; R. George Holdsworth, Hamilton; Alex. Anderson, South Monaghan, and W. J. Corbett, Cobourg.

Reeve Hess, of Hastings, is out of the race, not because he lacks ambition, or is not qualified by long service, but for the reason that Walter M. Fowlds from that village was Warden in 1924. Municipal lightning occasionally strikes twice in the same place but invariably after a longer interval than one year.

Claims of Candidates.

When a man has served his township faithfully and efficiently for a term of years and announces himself as a candidate for the highest municipal office in the gift of the people it is nothing unusual for his constituents to return him without opposition. From present appearances the honor is to be extended to Reeve McCubbin of Percy. Mr. McCubbin has lived 51 years in Percy, all his working life has been spent there, all he has made or lost, have been in that township. He was first elected to the municipal council in 1915, and was reeve in 1920-21-22. He was defeated by W. E. Hermiston in 1923, but turned the tables of the latter in 1924, and again in 1925. Reeve McCubbin is at present chairman of the Agricultural committee, and no man keeps a closer watch on expenditure in every department than Percy's senior representative.

Percy Township, one of the most prosperous and highly assessed in the two counties, has had the wardenship once, when A. L. Boyce of Warkworth was elected in 1910.

Reeve Davidson's Claims

Reeve Davidson's service in the Counties Council dates back to 1919 when he was elected Deputy Reeve in Campbellford. Since that time he has missed one term, being defeated for the Reeveship by Ex-Reeve John A. Anderson in 1923. Previous to 1919 he was a member of the Campbellford council for so long that the recollection of the living can scarcely recall a year when he was not a councillor. He is personally popular with his colleagues in Cobourg just as he is with any other body of men with whom he associates either in a social or business capacity. This year he held the important position of chairman of the committee on by-laws and legislation.

Campbellford, the second most important urban centre in Northumberland County has not had the wardenship for 31 years, C. L. Owen, the present postmaster, having held the position in 1894.

Murray's Popular Reeve

W. F. Elliott, Reeve of Murray, has been in municipal life for 11 years, five years of which he has served at Cobourg. The present was his first year as Reeve. He is one of the keenest debaters in the Council and a hard worker in the committee room. He was a member of the board of management of the House of Refuge in 1923, chairman of the finance committe in 1924 and of the property committee this year.

The ventilation of the court house was a theme of discussion in the Counties Council for some years and a former property committee estimated that the installation of a satisfactory system would cost $1200.

Reeve Elliott and his colleagues on a special committee discovered that a perfectly good system of ventilation had been rendered of no effect when a new heating plant had been installed and this defect was remedied at an outlay of $15.25.

Cobourg's Choice

W. J. Corbett, Reeve of Cobourg, is a candidate to be reckoned with as this town feels that on account of its importance it is entitled to the honor. Mr. Corbett has been in the municipal arena for seven years.

Other Candidates

Peter Haig of Haldimand, one of the oldest members, made a good run for the Wardenship against Reeve Foulds in 1924, and will try it again if he is re-elected Reeve as he is altogether likely to be. The other candidates are young men, who are ambitious to climb the ladder.

The Veteran of Them All

When it comes to length of service in the Counties Council, Reeve Thomas Baker of Darlington, Durham County, has them all beaten a mile and then some. He has served altogether 16 years. He first put in 10 years beginning back in the 90's, then dropped out for 10 years and came back for five for three of which he was Reeve. He dropped out again and after an interval of two years was elected Reeve for 1925. In all his career he was never defeated and was re-elected 12 times by acclamation. He is noted for his caustic criticisms, for his opposition to the present highway system and for his wide information on all subjects connected with the municipal history of the two counties.

MASONIC LODGE WAS INSTITUTED

Nineteen Charter Members at Formation of Lodge at Hastings.

OFFICERS NAMED.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

HASTINGS, Dec. 14.— Thirty-five years ago the Masonic Society at Hastings disbanded, but on Friday last a new lodge was instituted; the official in charge of the ceremony being P.D.D.G.M. Frank C. Bonyycastle of Campbellford. Nineteen charter members were enrolled and the chief officers appointed, to act until a regular election can be held, were: W. R. Learmouth, W.M.; William M. Fowlds, Senior Warden; and Robert Johnston, Junior Warden.

A banquet followed the institution of the lodge, members of the Order being present from Campbellford, Sterling, Warkworth, Havelock, Keene and Peterborough.

In the south of England many folk believe that boys born on Christmas are destined to become clergyman, while the girls ought to become nurses. It is supposed that they will succeed in these occupations. Should they decide not to follow them, however, their lives will be dismal failures.

CHEAPER GAS.

The Council's effort to secure cheaper gas for Peterboro deserves commendation, and the city fathers should keep everlastingly at it until a more satisfactory price is secured from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission.

The only reason apparently that Peterboro people have to pay the highest price for the gas they use is that the operation of the gas plant and of the street railway system is looked upon by the Provincial Commission as one business, and thus the surplus earned by the former is regarded as partially making up for the deficit of the latter.

The sooner the proposition is unscrambled the better it will be for Peterboro.

Many gas consumers may not need street car service at all, and they naturally object to paying an exorbitant price for gas to help take care of transportation problems.

Such citizens reading of a $20,000 surplus earned by the gas plant are demanding that the profits be passed back to the people who made them possible.

They are complaining that they are paying through the nose, and they expect the city fathers to continue the fight for cheaper gas with increasing vigour.

THE COMING ELECTION.

Peterboro electors should need no great urging to cause them to take an interest in the approaching municipal elections, no matter how much may be necessary on other occasions.

There are at least four questions of unusual importance, two of which will be settled on election day and two that may depend for final settlement upon the result of the voting.

By their votes the people of Peterboro will decide whether or not they want daylight saving and Sunday bathing next summer.

At the same time upon whom they elect to the Council may hinge the Council's ultimate policy in regard to the construction of a new Collegiate Institute, as well as the attitude of the city toward the street railway problem.

Both of these questions will be much to the fore in 1926, and they will require earnest consideration.

So important are they that every candidate for aldermanic honours should tell the electors just where he stands in regard to Collegiate Institute accommodation and to the transportation problem that promises soon to become acute.

With a plebiscite on such questions as daylight saving and Sunday bathing and two big civic problems developing, Peterboro voters cannot afford to stay away from the polls on this occasion.

THE REAL TROUBLE.

Two essentials are needed to ensure a business-like, economical and efficient administration of civic affairs, we are told—an intelligent and enlightened public opinion and willingness on the part of those capable of public service to accept the responsibilities of office.

There is just a question of whether after all these two essentials could not be boiled down into one.

If public opinion were intelligent and active there would be little danger of a paucity of good candidates.

It is, as the Examiner sees it, the refusal of such a large part of the electorate to take any part in the selection of a civic government that causes reluctance on the part of qualified citizens to enter municipal contests.

The problem gets back to the old sore, i. e., that fully fifty per cent. of the electors seem quite willing to leave the task of choosing the municipal administration to the other fifty per cent.

That condition makes it easier for incapable men to get into office, and at the same time keeps good candidates in retirement.

Knowing what the handicap is, it is not to be wondered at that the latter turn a deaf ear to the persuasions of friends who recognize their capability and are anxious to see them entered as candidates.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

A man over in the States who had the misfortune to be present at Christmas festivities when the decorations caught fire and many children got badly burned and one lost her life is making through the press and by radio a campaign in favor of greater care and caution in connection with Christmas celebrations, says the Toronto Star.

There have been too many accidents on such occasions. The trees are always decorated with highly inflammable materials, the excitement of the children and even of the older people is at its highest, and little accidents are bound to happen. They mean nothing unless the risk of fire is present. If that risk is present the smallest of unexpected happenings may have the most tragic results. It is not in the towns and cities alone nor in holiday gatherings where events are conducted on a considerable scale, but all over the country and where the Christmas tree is for the family circle only. The use of candles should be in all cases avoided, and no Chinese lanterns should be used anywhere near the tree or the decorations. A paper lantern with a blazing candle in it, hung in the wrong place, has at times worked disastrous mischief. It is, anyway, an adult idea that anything to be attractive must blaze with lights, for young eyes see everything without excessive aid of this sort.

At the holiday season when good-will and benevolence abound one is apt to get the idea that nothing possibly could happen to mar so joyous an occasion as a children's party or a family re-union. But the records only too convincingly show that tragic things can occur at just such times. So the Star joins in advising that every precaution be taken to ensure absolute safety in connection with all Christmas festivities. It can be done without detracting in the least from the enjoyableness of the season.

A Toronto girl gets $100,000 a year for designing the latest dresses. A lot of money for such a little thing.—Chatham News.

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The series of three concerts arranged by the Peterboro Symphony Orchestra gives the citizens of Peterboro a splendid opportunity to hear and at the same time to support this fine musical organization.

The very presence of such an orchestra in a community is an asset; the organization is of great value from an educational viewpoint, both for those who play in and for those who listen.

The opportunity to hear good music capably played comes too rarely in a city of this size, and our citizens are to be congratulated that there is here a well-balanced and splendidly conducted symphony orchestra that has during its short existence won laurels for itself and its home city by a splendid showing in the Ontario Musical Festival.

Such an organization cannot, of course, be maintained or supplied with the instruments or the music it needs without considerable expenditure, and it is therefore essential that the music-lovers of Peterboro should rally in its support and see that the series of concerts, the first of which is to be held tomorrow night, is liberally patronized.

The orchestra has wisely arranged popular prices for the series—the whole thre programmes can be heard for $1.00—and the public generally is thus given a good opportunity to show its appreciation of the past record of the Symphony Orchestra and its confidence in the future of the organization.

THE LEAGUE FUNCTIONS.

The attitude of the man in the street towards the League of Nations has, from its inception, been one not so much of indifference as of honest doubt. Wholeheartedly in sympathy with the aims and objects of an organization established to promote peace and safeguard the rights of the smaller nations, and hopeful that its efforts would be attended with success, he was not quite able to rid his mind of a feeling of scepticism as to the capacity of the League to function effectively in the event of an emergency arising to test its influence.

He read and listened with sympathetic interest to the glowing apostrophes of the earnest and eloquent advocates who have labored so ardently to proclaim its virtues and inspire confidence in its operations; he patiently sought to extract what light he could from the confusion of ideas as to the significance of this or that covenant, or the interpretation of this or that article; yet the fear of disillusionment, bred of many disappointments in the aftermath of war, ceased not to haunt him, and ever and anon his belief in the efficacy of the League was challenged by the question: what would happen if any nation, or nations, should defy its edicts and once more let loose the dogs of war.

For these doubts, questionings and fears there was, perhaps, some justification. The teachings of history were not calculated to inspire a sublime faith in the inviolate sanctity of treaties or covenants, however strongly buttressed; nor was the condition of Europe since the war, with so many evidences of suspicion and even hatred, so many ominous rumblings and thinly veiled threats, conducive to the development of an unqualified feeling of confidence in the power of the League to enforce its decrees and prevent conflict. Even while the world was acclaiming the triumph of Locarno and congratulating itself upon a new entente, which seemed to lend added strength and fresh inspiration to the League, there broke out in the Balkans, as if in ironical challenge of the latest and most impressive manifestation of the spirit of peace, a conflict singularly calculated to confound the optimists and provoke the jeers of the cynical.

When, in October, Greece and Bulgaria suddenly came to blows it appeared to many that the crash had come, that the grand dream of the League of Nations had been ruthlessly shattered by two of its own members. The machinery of peace so elaborately erected, it was thought, had failed at the first test; the long feared disillusionment had seemingly arrived. But what had all the appearance of a disaster fatal to the League and all it stood for, proved, after all, its opportunity and its justification.

On the authority of Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary of the League, it now appears that what happened was this: On October 21st or 22nd, a Greek force crossed the frontier of Bulgaria, and war seemed inevitable. On October 23rd there arrived at the headquarters of the League at Geneva an appeal from Bulgaria for protection under the Covenant. Two days later, the Council of the League was convened in Paris. On the following day its decision was taken and immediately conveyed in terms of unmistakable firmness of the Ministrys of the two delinquent powers, this course being provided for by Articles 10 and 11 of the Covenant. Greece and Bulgaria at once accepted the decision, and war was averted.

More striking and convincing evidence of the practical utility, as well as the moral force, of the League could hardly have been wished for, proving, as it did, not only that it can function effectively, but that its mechanism, far from being slow and cumbrous, is capable of working with rapidity and exactitude. The success of the test should do much to dispel the doubts hitherto entertained as to the efficacy of the League, and add to its prestige and power as "the guardian of peace and arbiter of harmony."—Ottawa Journal.

A THOUGHT.

(By Glenn Frank.)

There are not many rights that men may call inalienable.

The penalty we pay for living in organized society is that we are hedged about by a thousand and one considerations regarding the comfort, the convenience, and the convictions of our neighbors.

We are not Robinson Crusoes on a care-free island.

We are citizens of a crowded civilization.

And this means a serious reduction in our rights. We must in the main live dictated lives. We take our cue from the crowd. The charter of our liberties is largely written by the man next door. But there are a few rights that we hold sacred even against the encroachments of the crowd. This sacred minimum of personal rights is by common consent described as the right to life, the right to liberty, and the right to the pursuit of happiness.

But there is little to be gained from having the right to the pursuit of happiness, let us say, unless we develop a technique for the pursuit of happiness.

There is of course no single technique for the pursuit of happiness that will magically achieve the great desire for all sorts and conditions of men.

One man's happiness may be another man's hell.

A Saint Francis or a Gandhi can be happy in poverty and live in sublime indifference to the conventional standards of success and failure but the normal man sees happiness interlaced with prosperity and success.

And yet signal success frequently breeds qualities of mind and method that ultimately strangle happiness.

Lord Beaverbrook suggests that for the man who has attained health and success, happiness will depend largely upon the following of three fundamental rules of behaviour that were stated long ago in an ancient Scripture:

To do justly.
To love mercy.
To walk humbly.

Justice is more than a crudely canny recognition of the fact that honesty is the best policy; the justice that leads to happiness is an ingrained sportsmanship of character that compels a man to conduct every enterprise in the spirit as well as the letter of justice.

Mercy is not mere awkwardness; the mercy that leads to happiness is not a contradiction of justice, but the legitimate offspring of justice; mercy is intelligent tenderness.

Humility is neither moral weakness nor doubt of one's powers; the humility that leads to happiness is the foundation of those spiritual good manners that enables us to be courageous without being arrogant.

Telephone "Boosting" Disturbs Housewives

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press).—Affected to a considerable degree by surprising strength in wheat quotations at Liverpool, the wheat market here averaged higher today, but was very unsettled. Chicago wheat prices, new style, closed irregular at 3-4c net decline to 1 3-4c advance, December 168 1-4 and May 165 3-4 to 166, with corn 1-2 to 7-8c down; oats unchanegd to 1-4 cent off, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a rise of 12c.

Much of the wheat buying, which at times became decidedly aggresive here, was based on the fact that Monday's foreign statistics were expected to prove bullish. In particular world shipments of wheat promised to be small, although export business in North American wheat today was fairly liberal, 500,000 bushels or more, meanwhile, numerous traders were looking for price upturns on account of recent severe breaks in the market. On the other hand, a good deal of significance was given in some quarters to word that the arrivals of wheat at Kansas City this week were the largest since the beginning of August.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 7-8.
Sterling cables $4.85 1-4.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 13 (Canadian Press).—A moderate trade was done in cash grain in the local market, and the undertone was firmer with sales of car lots of Ontario and Quebec No. 2 white oats selling at 53c, No. 3 white at 51 1-2c, and No. 4 white at 50c per bushel, ex-track. Canadian Western grades were steady. Ontario malting barley continues to move steady at 86 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track.

The receipts of eggs in Montreal on Saturday were 135 cases, as against 662 cases for the same day last week, and 309 cases for the corresponding day a year ago, while the arrival for the week ending December 12, 1925, were 3,280 cases, as against 4,782 cases for the previous week, and 1,634 cases for the same week last year. The total receipts from May 1 to date were 355,690 cases as compared with 389,033 cases for the same period of 1924. The receipts last week showed a decrease of 1,502 cases, as compared with the previous one, and an increase of 1,646 cases with the same week last year, while the total receipts for the season to date have been 33,343 cases smaller than a year ago.

The general impression in the trade is that egg prices have reached their peak for this season and as soon as supplies show any marked increase the indications are that values will be easier.

The receipts of butter in Montreal for the week ending December 12, 1925, were 1,671 packages which show a decrease of 177 packages as compared with the previous week and a decrease of 737 packages with the same week last year, while the total arrivals from May 1 to date have been 48,517 packages less than the same period of 1924.

There was no further change in the condition of the local situation on Saturday, the feeling if anything in the trade being a little more cheerful and when it is taken into consideration that the stocks of creamery butter in the whole of Canada are more than 50 per cent less than at this period last year and current receipts here smaller, it looks as if all available supplies will be wanted. The trade on spot was quiet and prices were unchanged.

The receipts of cheese in Montreal for the week ending December 12, 1925, were 8,579 boxes which show a decrease of 6,392 boxes, as compared with the previous week, and an increase of 1,472 boxes with the same week last year, but the total receipts from May 1 to date have been 98,993 boxes in excess of a year ago.

The feature of the trade in the past week was the improved demand that developed from English importers for supplies and as the prices bid were in line with exporters' views here a fair amount of business resulted and the market was rather more active with a steady undertone. There was also some trading on spot between houses.

FAILURE TO PASS IS CAUSE OF RIOTS

Students of Sorbonne Held Demonstration Against Examiners.

By MINOTT SAUNDERS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Dec. 14.—(United Press)—The familiar hickory stick of old school days has been brought into us by the police of the Latin Quarter.

The hickory in the shape of police batons became necessary when students rioted in protest against the baccalaureate examination at the Sorbonne. About five hundred students of both sexes failed to pass the examination, while only a small minority succeeded in getting through.

The majority gathered in the Cour d'Honneur of the Sorbonne to hiss the examiners in particular and denounce in general the difficulties of school life.

The hoots and howls disturbed the successful students who were going through the second section of their examination. Finally the dean of the faculty, Ferdinand Brunot, sent for the police.

All students dislike being plucked, but at the Sorbonne students for generations have claimed the privilege of demonstrating against cruel treatment in accord with the old French saying that every man is entitled to curse his judges for twenty-four hours.

The failures formed a monome, the familiar student march wherein each places his hands on the shoulders of the one in front and parade single file. They truged through the university corridors, smashed windows and kicked down doors. The police riot squad had to be called scatter them and preserve order. Several heads were bruised by hickory sticks before quiet was restored.

The trouble all arose over a Latin theme, a passage from Valerius Maximus, which was called too difficult. M. Brunot said the students that failed were simply stupid.

PLANE REPLACES CAMELS OVER ASIAN DESERTS

Soviet Lines Are Extended Now to Khiva and Bokhara.

MUCH TIME SAVED

Three Hours Required Now for Journey Formerly Taking Three Weeks.

MOSCOW, Dec. 14. — (United Press).—The airplane is putting the camel out of a job in the desert wastes of Russian Central Asia.

Formerly the caravan or boat journey between the ancient cities of Bokhara and Khiva might take anywhere from one to three weeks, depending upon accidents. Now an airplane service covers the distance in three and a half hours; and the airplane is recognized as a safer, faster and more economical means of transport than was the traditional camel.

A whole network of aviation lines is spreading over the territory of the Soviet Union. They are recognized as especially useful in wild regions where ordinary methods of travel are slow and difficult. So, besides the Bokhara-Khiva line, airplanes connect Bokhara with the town of Termez, on the Afghan frontier; and another line functions between Pishpek and Verni. Communication between Russia and Persia is facilitated by the regular airplane service between Baku and Teheran.

The daily airplane service between Moscow and Konigsberg, maintained by the Russo-German Stock Company Deruluft, has now been functioning for several years and gives the impatient traveller an opportunity to cut the time required for a trip from Moscow to Berlin from sixty hours to twenty-four. Passenger airplane lines now link up Moscow with Leningrad and with the chief cities of Southern Russia, such as Odessa, Kharkov, Kiev and Rostov.

Airplane routes will probably be established over some of the vast sparsely settled stretches of Siberia in the near future. The recent gold strike along the Aldan River is in a very inaccessible part of Siberia; and an airplane route from the Amus railroad line to the Aldan fields will probably be established in the near future.

Both Russian and Japanese aviators succeeded in covering the distance between Tokyo and Moscow by airplane last summer; and the creation of a regular service between the Russian and Japanese capitals would enormously facilitate travel between Europe and the Far East. The German Captain Bruns, in co-operation with the famous explorer, Dr. Nansen, has conceived an ambitious project of establishing an Amsterdam-Tokyo airplane route through the Arctic regions of Siberia. This scheme, however, demands a large amount of capital and will probably be realized only in the distant future.

The machines used in Russian commercial aviation are, with few exceptions, imported from abroad, mostly from Germany. The airplanes of Russian construction mostly use foreign motors.

The facts regarding the progress of Russian military aviation are kept strictly secret. However, an interesrting statement in this connection was made at the Soviet Congress last spring by War Commissar Frunze, who declared that seven hundred airplanes had been previously imported from abroad but that the output of the Russian factories was now adequate to cover the military needs of the country.

Mr. Veshnev, head of the Soviet Board of Civilian Aviation, stated in an interview with the United Press correspondent that there are now eight passenger airplane lines in the Soviet Union. They extend over a distance of more than three thousand five hundred miles. "The Soviet passenger aviation," declared Mr. Veshnev, "can boast that not a single life has been lost as a result of airplane accidents. There were a few injured in an accident some time ago and two people suffered slight injuries during the present year."

PET LION DEAD

Miss Aileen Hughes' Pet Died of Pneumonia at Toronto Zoo.

LINDSAY, Dec. 14.—(Special).—Kenya Luce Simba, the pet lion belonging to Miss Ailen Hughes, daughter of the late Sir Sam Hughes, has gone to that bourne from which no lions return. It succumbed to the ravages of pneumonia at the Toronto Zoo, where it had been placed only a few days ago.

This lion cub, which was eight and a half months old, was captured by Miss Hughes on the occasion of her hunt in the jungles of Africa. It was on exhibition in the window of Gregory's drug store about a week ago, and was very playful.

A Baby To-day— A Successful Man To-morrow

Frank Baker's son, Bobbie, is a mere baby, but already he has a better chance for success in life than thousands of full-grown young men.

He is sure of a college education!

Frank Baker made certain of this by making Bobbie a present—on his first birthday—of a North American Life Child's Endowment Policy for $5,000.

This $5,000, twenty years from now, will pay his son's college expenses.

The Child's Endowment Plan has other features which Mr. Baker likes.

For instance, if he should die, his son would still be paid the full amount on his twenty-first birthday. No further premium payments would be necessary.

If Bobbie should die before the age of fifteen, all premiums would be returned—with interest. If he should die after that, full payment—$5,000—would be made to Mr. Baker.

Have you made plans for the future success of your baby? You can, like Frank Baker, make sure of his start in life. Write for our booklet, "Child's Endowment."

BOLSHEVIK TRADING OFFICIALS SECRET DINNER GUESTS OF NEW YORK BANKERS AND CAPITALISTS

Story of Banquet Cabled From Moscow as News to America.

SOVIET FLATTERED

Communist Trade Sought by Charles M. Schwab and Other Industrialists.

NEW YORK, December 14.—Canadian Press. — New York bankers and Russian industrialists gathered at a banquet at the Bankers' Club in New York on Thursday, and in view of the commercial possibilities of Russia the meeting took on unwonted significance.

Absolute secrecy, however, surrounded the proceedings so far as newspaper representatives were concerned, but the Russian semi-official news agency was able to obtain some of the details which were forwarded to Moscow and published there.

The Associated Press instructed its Moscow bureau to send back to the United States the account of the dinner as made public in Russia:

"The most significant indication of the increasing importance of Soviet-American trade," says the cabled account from Moscow, "was a banquet to-day (Thursday), at which Reeve Schley, vice-president of the Chase National Bank, entertained officials of the Soviet trading organizations, together with representatives of the most important American financial and industrial concerns.

Recognition of Soviet.

"The banquet was the first outspoken recognition by American finance and industry of the importance of Soviet trade and the stability of the Soviet government.

"The Chase National Bank, which showed the earliest initiative in financing the Soviet textile syndicate's purchase of American cotton, and which largely and profitably participated in these and other Soviet commerce in the last two years, took this occasion to express confidence in Soviet trading institutions and thus increase the confidence of American manufacturers, in this way prompting increased trade with the Soviet Union.

"Mr. Schley, who presided, spoke of the economic progress of the Soviet Union in the last two years in overcoming the effects of the war, blockade and famine. He described a visit which he made to the Soviet Union last summer, when he was greatly impressed with the general order, and especially the excellent condition of the railways.

Schwab Present.

"Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, expressed satisfaction over the fact that Russia was again trading with America. Mr. Schwab said that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation had sold much steel to Russia before the war, and hoped to sell more in the future.

"American manufacturers, he declared, welcomed business with the Soviet trading organizations and he expressed confidence that the economic and commercial relations between the United States and Russia would develop greatly despite all obstacles."

95 YEAR OLD PASTOR.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press.) — In his 95th year, vigorous and in splendid health, the Rev. Dr. W. T. McMullen, ex-pastor emeritus of Knox Presbyterian church, preached a forceful sermon at Central United Church Sunday in addressing the charge to seventeen newly inducted elders. The occasion was a notable one and unique in the history of the former Methodist church, as the whole of the board of officials has been re-organized on the basis of the United church, and as the western ex-moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, who addressed the new elders, was one of the pioneers in the movement in Canada which resulted in the establishment of the United church.

BENNETT BOOKS BATTLE CENTRE

Staffordshire Saga Condemned and Upheld—"The Five Towns" Series.

TRUE TO LIFE.

LONDON, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Admirers of the novels of Arnold Bennett are up in arms against the Mayor and Deputy Mayor of Stoke-upon-Trent, in Staffordshire, who have been criticizing the novelist's stories as libels on the district which Bennet calls "The Five Towns," and popularly known as "The Potteries."

These officials say that the author has selected characters and scenes which lend themselves to distortion and exaggeration and that his novels are calculated to lower the prestige of "The Potteries." They also declare that Bennett's novels are not read by the local people because they realize that these works are untrue pictures.

Bennett's champions, among whom are some other municipal offiacials of the district, scout these criticisms and say that the novels accurately reflect the lives of the inhabitants. Moreover, local librarians and booksellers declare that the "The Five Towns" novels are in constant demand.

The Mayor of Newcastle-under-Lyme, who is among the defenders of the novelist's fame, says that tourists who visit the district in large numbers to see the scenes depicted in the novels need not be influenced by the criticisms but may be assured that "Anna of the Five Towns," "The Old Wives' Tale," "Clayhanger," and the other "Five Towns" novels are true to life.

FRENCH IMPATIENT OF POLITICIANS ARE PROPOSING PUBLIC SAFETY COMMITTEE

Murmurs of People Given Utterance By Press—Hour For Sacred Union HasCome —Parliament is Warned.

PARIS, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press) —The campaign for the dissolution of parliament and extra-constitutional methods for solving the present financial and economic crisis in France which has been going on steadily and stealthily for some weeks appeared for the first time in the open, when The Matin, in a leading article, demanded "the creation of a committee of public safety with full powers and entire responsibility," to restore the financial situation.

The Matin's article, which was not signed but was given such prominence as involved the responsibility of the management of the paper, says: "We have had enough of politicians. This country, still bleeding from war wounds, is not ready to face the great adventure of revolution.

"Enough of politics—let a committee be formed outside of politicians and comprising staunch and courageous men to save France. Let them proclaim that France is in danger and that the hour for the sacred union has come."

Country Will Act.

Leon Bailby, editor of the independent newspaper, L'Intransigeant, follows up the demand voiced by The Matin.

"Let us not despair," writes M. Bailby, "politics has had its day, whether revolution, dissolution or liquidation, the country is going to take into its own hands the direction of its affairs. If it is the parliament, the parties and their hangers-on who suffer, let us be happy for the fact for then we will be saved."

The Temps takes a milder tone, but solemnly warns parliament that it must abandon political shiftings and make possible a "national government embracing all parties and representing all except those that deliberately exclude themselves."

Every sign, the paper says, points to a universal desire throughout the country fort he end of politics and the establishment of a new concord like the sacred union of war days. Meanwhile there is a concerete step in the direction of a wider accord in the decision of a group of the Radical Left to seek a re-union with the Centrist group of the Republican Right as a means of enlarging the government's majority in the present crisis.

OLD ACTRESSES ADD TO LONDON INTEREST

Three of Them Are Still Active During Present Season.

PARIS, Dec. 14.—The manuscript of a novel written by Victor Hugo ten years before "Les Miserables" appeared, has been discovered, and soon will be given to the public.

The project is the idea of Gustave Simon, the venerable literary executor of Victor Hugo, who for forty years has been active in promoting interest in the great novelist.

Both the fact that the old manuscript is in existence, and the plan to publish it, have been kept secret hitherto, as far as the public is concerned.

Announcement of the discovery and proposed publication of the manuscript was made here by the American Braille Press for War and Civilian Blind, which has been making inquiries regarding the matter, in a desire to promote interest on the part of French blind readers in the works of Victor Hugo.

Th following statement was made by a representative of the Press:

"It should be intersting to know that Victor Hugo's literary executor Gustave Simon, the scholar and bibliophile, is still busy and that after years of research he has discovered the manuscript of 'Les Miseres,' a novel written by Victor Hugo more than ten years before the appearance of 'Les Miserables,' or more than three-quarters of a century ago.

"Except for the last two chapters, 'Les Miseres' was ready for publication when Victor Hugo was sent into exile, which drove all thoughts of finishing the novel from his mind. Th manuscript was thrown aside and not even looked at for ten years. Hugo then took up the manuscript, read it, was dissatisfied and decided to rewrite the whole story. 'Les Miserables' was the result.

"Exile had caused changes in Hugo's mind and it had its effect on his story, so that while 'Les Miseres' has the basic theme of 'Les Miserables,' there are essential differences in the two works. The earlier novel, it is said, will read like a new book. In 'Les Miseres' there is none of what is usually called the love interest, and Cosette, one of the famous figures does not appear. In other words, 'Les Miserables' was almost an entirely new story."

QUEEN SAVES VERY VALUABLE CARPET

Persian Masterpiece in Italian Royal Palace Had Been Cut Up.

MILAN, Dec. 11.—Queen Margherita's thrifty spirit has resulted in the salvage and identification of one of the most beautiful Oriental carpets in existence.

When she and King Umberto took over the Quirinal palace, she found the carpet cut in six pieces. Being a good housekeeper, she immediately had it restored.

Recently the queen gave the carpet to the Brera Gallery, in Milan, which in utrn presented it to the Poldi-Pezzalozi Museum. Now Arthur Upham Pope advisory curator in Mohammedan art to the Chicago Institute, has identified the gift as one of the earliest Persion carpets in existence.

Writing in Dedalo, an Italian art magazine, Mr. Pope describes the carpet as elaborate in animal and hunting scenes and colored in clear soft tones of deep red and blue, with white, green, fawn and saffron for subsidiary colors. Its decriptions and date show that it was made by Ghiyas-ed Din in 1521.

BEAUTY OF CASTLE WILL BE REVEALED

Castel Nirovo, Seat of Kings of Naples, Obscured by Old Buildings.

NAPLES, Dec. 14.—After thirty years of intermittent efforts on the part of the successive mayors of Naples, supported by prominent art lovers, it has been decided to raze the cluster of unsightly buildings which so long has marred the superb beauty of the famous stronghold known as the Castel Nuovo.

The Castel Nouvo was built in 1279-83 by Charles I of Anjou from a design supposedly supplied by Pierre d'Angicourt, and was enlarged successively by Alphonso I in 1442, by Don Pedro de Toledo in 1546 and by Charles III in 1735. The kings of the houses of Anjou and Aragon and the Spanish viceroys one after another used it as a dwelling.

Villain Finds No Sympathy From Arabian Movie Fans

TLEMCEN, Algeria, Dec. 14—The natives of Tlemcen are great movie fans, but they make such a noise that the orchestra and the white audience have to sit upstairs.

As few of the Arabs can read, the title of the film when flashed on the screen is received in silence, but as soon as the first picture is shown there is a yell. All the Arabs in the audience talk at once and keep up a continuous comment on what they see.

The antics of Europeans in the comic films meet with a hilarious success unheard elsewhere. In the tragic films, the villain is reviled with loud imprecations, and when at the end virtue is suitably rewarded, yells of delight mark the appreciation of the Arab audience.

REPORT TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

This report on the conference of the Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce of the Dominion of Canada, held in the Manitoba Parliament Buildings, on November 16, 17 and 18, was read at the meeting of the Peterboro' Chamber of Commerce on Friday.

Upon urgent request of the Honorary President, Mr. Frazer, to represent your Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Bruce Fowler and myself left on Saturday, the 14th of November, and met the Toronto delegates at Toronto.

I might say that the delegates leaving Toronto filled two cars and by the time we reached Winnipeg on Monday, we had made many new acquaintances. Thanks to the arrangements made through your Chamber for our accommodation in Winnipeg, we were well looked after and comfortably settled within a few minutes of our arrival.

The conference was called for 11 o'clock Monday morning, November 16, and Mr. S. B. Gundy was appointed chairman. Addresses of welcome were given by his Honour Sir Jas. A. M. Aikins, Lt. Gov. of Manitoba; the Honorable Jno. Bracken, premier of Manitoba and by His Worship R. H. Webb, mayor of Winnipeg.

In his address, Sir Jas. Aikins extended a very hearty welcome to the delegates and said that he felt that the assembling of the Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade, was rendering a public service to promote Canadian unity and Canadian development, and that this conference had popular approval. He went on to say:

"The last decade has been one of destruction, even in Canada, and of halted progress, but never of desolation or despair. Our people have shown no white feather, but have displayed courageous endurance and a will to win and to make the next decade one of constructive progress. To that end you voluntarily gather. Necessity has been compelling the boards of trade to activity, to co-ordinating for greater influence and efficiency. Prior to the war, our Canadian boards of trade were local bodies assembling occasionally to discuss some district business or contingency, their aims nebulous, lacking concentration; themselves loose-jointed and detached, devoid of national or even provincial influence; their requests too often smiled at derisively by legislatures, governments and even by the transient politician. Now the spirit of our nation is breathing upon them and they are awakening to the need of singleness of aim and a defined purpose, to a longer view and a broader outlook on our nation's life, its eventualities and possibilities.

"I congratulate the young men's section of the Board of Trade on its spirit and work. With that unity of mature wisdom and youthful energy, with that wider spirit of oneness enveloping all Canadian boards of trade, we may expect saner business policies and more steadiness in our advance. Canada has never receded, it has not taken a position of vantage which it does not hold. In the gloom of depression we may not have noticed our bearings, but we have been making headway."

The remarks of Premier Bracken and also of Mayor R. H. Webb were along the same lines as those of Sir Jas. Aikins, full of optimism for the future, and expressing their confidence that this conference would be of great benefit to our Dominion and that no doubt a great many serious problems would be solved before the conference closed.

"Emigration" and "immigration" in all their phases featured the first day of the first Conference of Canadian Boards of Trade.

In opening his address, the Chairman, Mr. S. B. Gundy, president of the Toronto Board of Trade, stated that this was the most important non-political gathering in the history of Canada since Confederation. The Conference, brought together in the geographical centre of the Dominion, represented business men from all parts of the Dominion from North Sydney, N. S., to Victoria, B. C. In the gathering there were men with wide divergent views on the many subjects, all assembled with the end in view of a frank discussion of the economical ills of Canada, and in the hope of finding some common ground on which to meet and seek to at least alleviate some of these ills.

After the appointment of committees, the meeting adjourned until 2:30 when Sir Thos. White gave a very interesting address on "Canada's Present National and Economical Position."

Dealing with the item of population, the speaker recalled how the Great War had turned away the tide of immigration which in the early days of this century had been flowing towards the Dominion. Having regard to the resources of Canada, he felt that there was no reason why this Dominion should not sustain in comfort and prosperity, before the end of the present century, a population of 50 million, and by the middle of the present century, we should have at least double the number of our present population.

Sir Thomas did not minimize Canada's burdens, but was not inclined towards pessimism. There was hope that the annual deficit of the National Railway operation would be reduced. The National debt, while heavy, was owing mainly to Canadians and was not nearly so burdensome to Canada, as the burden which the British people were carrying. He was also convinced that a national spirit pervaded the Dominion; also abroad there was great goodwill and respect towards the Dominion.

The next on the agenda sheet was "Immigration and Colonization—the Need, the Prospect, and the Method."

This was introduced by Mr. John Need, the Prospect, and the Method." M. Imrie, president of the Edmonton Board of Trade. The situation was thoroughly canvassed by Mr. Imrie who, in closing, pointed out that the Canada that attracted millions of immigrants in the days before the war, was not the Canada of to-day. The Canada of old was a country in which the people had faith in themselves and faith in their country, and this was what proved so attractive to the people of Europe who were seeking new homes. "That confidence, in our country and our people must be restored and the conference was a stepping stone to the restoration." He appealed to all Canadians to show tolerance of opinion with one another as it was by that means that a closer union of the people of the Dominion could be brought about.

Mr. Imrie went on to say: "This Conference has been convened at a time of political chaos through economical uncertainty. Its announced purpose is to promote Canadian unity and Canadian development." He stated that the question of population is the root of most of our economical problems.

There was an evening session held Monday, the 16th, at which many more interesting discussions took place.

Tuesday November 17 — Morning Session.

"Utilization of Maritime Province Ports."

At this session, Maritime affairs, including a presentation of the needs of the Maritime Provinces, a paper on "The Panama Canal and its Part in the Development of Canada," and a discussion of the St. Lawrence waterways development, were featured.

The part of the Maritime Provinces had played in Confederation, their contributions to Canada, and the present day needs for prosperity, were presented by J. D. McKenna of St. John. Mr. McKenna declared that the people of the Maritime Provinces sought the development of Canadian ports in the handling of Canadian trade, and insisted that the resources of Canada and particularly, the Canadian National Railways, should not be utilized in the building up of ports in the United States, to the detriment of the ports of Canada.

"The Growth of Trade, Through the Port of Vancouver," was dealt with by A. M. Dollar, president of the Vancouver Board of Trade, while Brig.-general C. H. Mitchell, of Toronto, painted a graphic word picture of the history of the development of the St. Lawrence waterways.

Afternoon Session Tuesday the 17th.

"Scientific Research in Relation to Industrial and Agricultural Development," was dealt with by Dr. H. M. Tory, president, Honorary Advisory Council for Scientific and Industrial Research, and president of the University of Alberta.

He stated that he was sick of the prattle of politics in the solution of the difficulties. "It is time for business men and scientists to step in and solve it." He believed that the proper research applied to Canadian national resources would add wealth to the amount of the present National Debt within a decade. Dr. Tory went on to discuss the ravages of wheat rust in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, saying that the disease had cost 25 or 30 millions of dollars less in the last few years and stated that science was rapidly overcoming these conditions. It was only after the war, the doctor declared, that England awoke and found, with horror, that there were more scientists available in five or six factories in Germany that in the whole of the British Empire, but that is all changed now. We have a National Research Bureau which is doing good work.

In the case of Canada, he stated that it had its universities and colleges, with a strong undergraduate body in science and engineering. It had a good company of scientific men doing research work and a few industrial plants, and it had the best intellectual resources for scientific work on the North American continent. This work had been retarded, however, by the fact that Canada has no national laboratories, no graduate schools, no national publications to publish results, and no great public spirit behind the scientific research.

Dr. Tory's address was very instructive in every detail and he was given a rousing vote of thanks after his speech by Angus McKay of Bathurst, who stated that it had been worth while to come 1,500 miles, if only to hear Dr. Tory's address alone.

Night Session—Tuesday the 17th.

The night session was opened with a paper by Mr. George Henderson, treasurer of the Montreal Board of Trade on "Commercial Arbitration."

He declared that the League of Nations had promulgated a protocol dealing with arbitration, but that Canada, although a signatory to the League of Nations, had not this protocol. Having asked the reason why, Mr. Henderson said it was because Canada had not adequate legislation, either of a federal or provincial character, that would enable her to take advantage of this protocol. He urged that the boards of trade of Canada should use their influence in the direction of getting such legislation passed, as commercial arbitration provided speedy, fair, inexpensive and final justice, friendly settlement and understanding, improved the moral tone of business and brought justice within the reach of many who could not afford the time or money to pursue it through litigation. In closing, Mr. Henderson suggested that steps be taken to secure the co-operation of the Canadian Bar Association's commission on the uniformity of legislation.

"Customs Regulations for the Prevention of Smuggling," was introduced by Mr. Paul Joubert, president of the Montreal Chamber of Commerce. This proved to be a very interesting discussion. Mr. Joubert stated that he had been informed by the Honorable Jacques Bureau, former Minister of Customs and Excise, that between 50 and 55 millions of dollars' worth of goods were smuggled into Canada yearly, with loss of Custom duties approaching 20 million dollars. In addition, no Sales or Income Taxes were collected on the transactions involved in their sale.

Many such goods were cotton, wool, cigarettes, automobiles, radio sets, boots, shoes, etc. They came in by autos plying on the Quebec national roads, by trucks, and by dishonest railway employees. An organization had been formed in Quebec, the speaker added, under the name of "The Commercial Protective Association," to counteract this condition. It has made some important seizures and done a good deal to put down smuggling. This organization has agitated for a law which would impose a jail sentence without an option of a fine, for persons convicted of smuggling.

Morning Session—Wednesday the 18th.

"National Economy and Taxation" was introduced by Travers Sweatman, K. C., past president of the Winnipeg Board of trade.

Mr. Sweatman, in his address, touched on one or two fundamental difficulties with which Canada is now confronted. He stated that the Fathers of Confederation said: "We are going to build a British institution north of the 49th parallel, and erect an artificial barrier between ourselves and our cousins to the south of us." This was what was said and done when we accepted from the Mother Country, our constitution commonly called the "British North American Act."

As a necessary result, flowing from this determination, we find a trans-continental ocean to ocean British institution, in defiance of formidable geographical obstacles, and to trade east and west instead of north and south, we have built three long and expensive trans-continental railways. The question is now, when the economical shoe begins to pinch, are we going to break up into sectionalism or are we going to get together from the east and west and gather around the same table with a view to working out our common difficulties. He felt that the number of delegates was an answer to his question.

"Developing Our Foreign Trade, Including Foreign Trade Conference in Canada," introduced by Mr. K. J. Burns, of the Vancouver Board of Trade. Mr. Burns spoke of the advantages that would accrue from the development to the utmost possible extent, of Canada's foreign trade. He referred to what the United States had done to extend her trade to the nations of the world through the instrumentality of consular agents, and declared that Canada might well take a lesson from that country. This was a vital question in which the Boards of Trade of the country could do effective work. Mr. Burns went on to say that we ought to make a sincere effort to make the name of "Canada" a household word for agricultural and industrial products in every nation of the world.

Other delegates present spoke very strong in support of the representations made by Mr. Burns.

"The Hudson Bay Railway" was introduced by the Saskatoon Board of Trade. Slides were shown of the track already completed, and of the work at the harbour and docks. The cost of the completion of this road was estimated by the delegates to cost approximately five million dollars, not including the harbours.

"Federal Taxation of Municipality-Owned Enterprises," introduced by the Montreal Board of Trade. Mr. Geo. E. MacDonald of Montreal, in the course of his address, stated that this was not a question of the relative merits of public or private ownership. This was up to each community to decide for itself. His point was the bearing that the Federal Income Act has on privately owned utilities. He referred to the situation in Winnipeg with the Winnipeg Electric paid something like $300,000 to various governments by way of income tax, and that the Winnipeg Hydro paid nothing. He claimed that this was not right. His remedy did not rest in wiping out the tax on privately owned utilities. There was one private enterprise in Montreal, which, in the course of a year, paid the Dominion Government in the neighborhood of three and one-half millions of dollars in income tax. It could be understood that the present state of the country's finances would hardly bear the shock in giving that up. His suggestion was that all utilities that were publicly or privately owned, should be taxed on the same basis.

"Formation of Dominion Boards of Trade," introduced by Mr. A. O. Dawson, president of the Montreal Board of Trade. He reviewed the different discussions which had taken place at the conference and particularly, the cases as presented by the delegates from the Maritime Provinces. He stated that he would like to express the sympathy of the members of the Board with the Maritimes and thought that there was wisdom enough in the business men of the Dominion to solve the problems complained about.

It was generally agreed amongst the delegates present, that the problems of the Maritimes and of Alberta were much the same.

Banquet—Wednesday Evening November 18.

The Conference was closed with a banquet at which notable addresses by E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Sir Thos. White, former Minister of Finance, featured.

This proved to be a splendid climax to the three days' conference of the associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce of Canada.

Mr. Beatty gave a comprehensive sketch of the history of the Canadian Pacific Railway, outlined its achievements in the face of tremendous difficulties, and stressed the need for an immigration policy that would swell considerably the population of the country. Greater population, he claimed, would be the solution of many of the acute national problems of the day. Before closing, Mr. Beatty paid a high tribute to the Boards of Trade for the practical work that they were doing in assisting in colonization efforts.

In his address, Sir Thos. White touched on the question of immigration, declaring that if we could get this immigration and went ahead with the development of the vast resources of the country, then he had absolutely no lack of confidence in the future of the Dominion.

There were about six hundred present at the banquet, members of the Winnipeg Board of Trade rallying to make the closing event of the conference the brilliant success it was from every standpoint.

I might say with reference to the different resolutions passed at this Conference, that a pamphlet will be issued at a later date, and distributed to the different Boards of Trade who were represented at the Conference.

In my humble opinion, I believe that it would be to the interests of all citizens of Peterboro', that they should be represented at any future conference such as the one held in Winnipeg last month and assist in every way, in the work which might be brought before the Convention.

CANADIAN FIRMS TO SHOW GOODS IN NEW ZEALAND

Big Exhibition is Being Held at Dunedin in Near Future.

CANADA PROMINENT

Court Where Dominion is Exhibiting is Most Beautiful There.

Arrangements are now being rapidly completed to have a delegation of Canadian business men visit New Zealand and Australia, leaving Vancouver in January. One of the prime objects will be to visit the New Zealand and South Seas International Exhibition at Dunedin, N.Z., which was officially opened for a five months' run by the Governor General of New Zealand.

While New Zealand is one of the smaller Dominions, nowhere in the world are its British characteristics of caution combined with progressiveness and public spirit exceeded. The beautiful city of Dunedin, where the Exhibition is being held, maintains this reputation not only in name, since Dunedin is simply the Gaelic form of Edinburgh, but also in deed by undertaking such a heavy responsibility as the Exhibition entails, in a manner that does great credit to her citizens, and that will mean much to the future trade of many parts of the Empire.

The Exhibition comes at a most opportune time. Many Canadians, in search of business or pleasure or both, frequently make it convenient to spend in more sunny climes the months that mean cold weather in Canada. New Zealand is only seventeen days of ocean travel, with stops at Honolulu and the Fiji Islands, from Vancouver, and is in the other hemisphere where Canada's winter time becomes New Zealand's and Australia's temperate summer and autumn. There, Christmas synchronizes with Midsummer! Many Canadians will find it pleasant and profitable to experience during the next few months, at first hand, the ninety eight per cent. British welcome that will be extended to them by most hospitable New Zealanders and Australians.

The Exhibition is arranged chiefly in National Courts, and practically every part of the Empire is represented by one of these courts which display the natural, industrial, and artistic treasures of their respective countries. Foreign countries are grouped in an international building. Of all the Courts, that in which Canada's resources and products are housed is said to exceed in beauty and skilful arrangement anything that has heretofore been shown in the Southern Hemisphere. The high record made at Wembley is being well maintained at Dunedin.

The efforts of the Exhibition Commission have been supplemented strongly by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in arranging for the exhibition of Canadian products in Dunedin.

Mrs. Claric M. Baright, who has been appointed a temporary city magistrate in New York, was the first woman to sit as chairman of a lunacy commission, the first woman lawyer ever to defend a case of general court-martial, and the first woman to be admitted to membership in the American Bar Association.

PETERBOROUGH SCHOOL CADETS MAKE GOOD SHOOTING RECORDS

King Edward School Wins City Prize For Highest Aggregate.

BOYS COMPLIMENTED.

Cadets D. Wood and J. Beavis Win Individual Prizes in City.

Peterborough Public School Cadets made a good showing in the recent Laura Secord shooting match, competing in the junior section, according to District Cadet Orders just issued by Major-General J. H. Elmsley.

A special money prize offered to the school whose combined teams made the highest aggregate score was won by King Edward School, with a total score of 1449, under the capable instruction of H. H. Langford.

In addition to this, friends of the King George and King Edward Public Schools offered a medal to the cadet on the school team who made the highest score in the match. This was won at the King Edward School by Cadet D. Wood, with a score of 180, and in the King George School by Cadet J. Beavis with a score of 136. The possible score was 200.

DISTRICT CADET ORDERS

Laura Secord Competition, 1925.

The following are the results in the firing of the Laura Secord Competition. The District Officer Commanding congratulates the prize winners and al teams entered on their good shooting. He would like it to be remembered that where a Cadet Corps has not made a particularly high score, such may be due to Musketry having been recently introduced or to the Match having been fired on an outdoor range owing to lack of indoor facilities.

KERS WILL TRY FORMATION OF GERMAN CABINET

Democrat Former Minister of the Interior Called By Hindenburg.

CHANCES SLIGHT.

Not Expected to Succeed in Forming Coalition Ministry.

BERLIN, December 14th. (By Frederick Kuh, United Press Staff Correspondent.) — President Von Hindenburg to-day requested former Minister of the Interior Kers, a Democrat, to attempt the formation of a cabinet, to succeed the Luther cabinet, recently resigned. Kers accepted the mandate and set about to try to form a "big coalition," including the Folks party, the Centrist (Catholic) Democrat, and Socialist parties. The chances of success, however, were deemed extremely slight.

Developments of the last week have made it appear inadvisable to follow out the original plan of asking Chancellor Luther to undertake to rebuilding, but it is probable that Hindenburg will eventually revert to this plan.

"One of my college friends—he's in the government service. Let's get that anchor out. She's drifting like a seaweed in this tide."

For a few minutes McTish and Lacy were gruntingly occupied with the business of anchoring. Then, as the Bloody Nuisance settled herself to ride the waves as sweetly as a summer boarder rides the best porch rocking chair, Lacy got out a cigarette and lit it greedily.

"This has been something of a night," he said. "I need stimulant. McTish, you keep on watch and I'll gather myself a drop of coffee and get on some dry clothes. Ladies, how's your various thirsts?"

"I'd love a cup of coffee. I heard about it when I first came on board, but it never appeared," said Connemara. "I'm hungry, too."

"So'm I," confided Sweetie. "I could eat a hot dog made out of my own pet caloodie."

"Oh, do you like dogs?" asked Connemara, interested. "I'm frightfully fond of them— I have the most adorable police dog named——"

"Named Rex. I'll bet a million," said Lacy.

"Then you lose. His name is Athos."

"What d'you know about Athos, Sister?" asked Lacy wonderingly. "Did someone suggest the name to you?"

"Don't be silly. Why shouldn't I know about Athos, even if it was ages ago that I read 'The Three Musketeers'."

"This is interesting. I didn't know that girls in your walk of life had definite literary tastes. I must look into this further. In the meantime, please excuse me."

He disappeared into the little bunk room at the back of the cabin. Sweetie looked understandingly at Connemara.

"It ain't the only thing he don't know, I betcha," she said. "He sounds to me like an awful bunch of ready language. But swell, too, in a way, if you get what I mean. Class, you know. I always like 'em classy. Gawd, I wisht I had some dry clothes. I'm soaking. And I've lost my lipstick, and my gum—" she hastily explored her left stocking, and came up beaming. "Say, what d'you know! Lookit!" She displayed a small shiny vanity case and a package of chewing gum. "They ain't hurt a bit neither."

She took a piece of the gum and passed another to Connemara. "Here," she said, "nobody ever said of me that I wasn't square with other ladies."

"Thanks," said Connemara. "Thanks awfully, but — well— the fact is, I don't chew gum."

"Oh!" said Sweetie, frankly staring. "Why not? Got false teeth?"

"No," said Connemara, improvising wildly, for she could see that Sweetie was all ready to be offended at the refusal of her offering, "but I've got an awfully fussy old maid aunt and she made me promise I wouldn't ever chew gum. You know," she went on, to change the subject, "I imagine that man"— she nodded toward the bunk room—"that man would lend you some clothes and you could dry yours. Mine are dry enough, but they're in rags, thanks to that wretch." She indicated Pooch.

"The dirty dawg," said Sweetie sympathetically. "Say, why don't you grind your heel in his face now he's tied up? I would, believe me, if he'd roughed me. If I had a needle and thread, I'd mend you up like a streak o'lightning. I'm quite a girl with the needle. I used to be head skirt hand at a big Fifth Avenue shop. Honest, I did."

Well, for Heaven's sake," said Connemara, "why did you ever leave a good job for a wild life like this?"

"I got sick of it. Sewing, sewing, sewing all day long on nicer clo'es 'n I could ever have myself, and the forelady findin' fault—reg'lar poison ivy she was—an' all day long in the house at work! Then, when I'd get out to the movies, at night, I'd see life like it ought to be. You know—somethin' doin' every minute. An' then Doc, he come along—an' here we are."

"Here we are indeed," said Connemara. "And I wonder when we're ever going to get away. Women can certainly do impulsive things, Miss Sweetie. I don't like to call you that, it sounds too—too——"

"Don't mind that. You can call me Gloria-Swanson - Mary - Pickford-Lillian-Gish, if you wants, but there ain't goin' to be honest-toGawd monickers spilled on this party. Say, I do wisht I could mend you up. You look like somethin' the cat brought in in that old coat and that dirty white stuff hanging out below. Hey, mister, in there—you——"

"Coming, Sweetie," said David Lacy, sticking his head out of the bunk room. "Just waiting for the coffee to boil up for the third time."

"You got any sewing things, needle and thread and scissors?" demanded Sweetie. "If you have, clear out o' that hole down there and let us ladies have it. We got to do a little private work, her and me."

David Lacy appeared now, with a tray containing steaming coffee in cups without saucers, an opened can of condensed milk, and some stray lumps of sugar. In his other hand he had a large tin of crackers. He was dressed in fresh dry clothes, and his hair, though still wet, was brushed, and the wetness gave rather the affect of fashionable sickness.

"Class," said Sweetie, whispering to Connemara. "What'd I tell you? He's class. Oh, boy, that coffee smells good! Come to mamma, darling!" She seized a cup, half emptied the condensed milk in it, added four lumps of sugar and seized a handful of crackers. Naturally she at once became incapable of further speech.

The coffee smelled and tasted good to Connemara too. She drank it gratefully, but her mind was on Sweetie's offer of a moment before. Connemara was suffering acutely from the knowledge that she was grotesquely dressed. Lacy had taken coffee to McTish and stayed beside him, talking in a low tone. This was Connemara's opportunity.

"Let's go into that place—where he was, and see if we can't find some dry things for you. And if there's anything to sew with, and you would get me together a little, I'd be eternally grateful."

Sweetie gulped the last of her coffee, crammed the last of her crackers in her mouth. "Awri'," she said, "I'm strong enough to do anything now."

The two girls moved together to the bunk room. A little rummaging brought to light some men's clothes, and with considerable giggling, a smallish, dapper youth in correct yachting get up of white trousers and blue coat. The clothes were large for her, but the general effect was good. She spread her own things to dry as best she could in the limited space, and then looked about her capably. A small box on the shelf that was evidently the dressing table—for there was a mirror above it and a comb on it—caught her eye, and she opened it and brought out in triumph a huge needle, a spool of white thread, and a pair of scissors.

"No thimble—but it don't matter. Say, take off them things and let's see what we can do."

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D., Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

One of the most important of all the duties of the mother is to see that her baby is properly nourished. It isn't enough to make sure the little stomach with food of such quality as to guarantee the health and growth of the child.

It is a common thing to observe a baby plainly undernourished. It makes no difference whether it is a bottle-fed or breast-fed infant, there may be dangerous underfeeding of the essentials.

A mother cannot supply her infant with milk of the right quality unless she herself is properly and sufficiently fed. If the breast-fed baby is not thriving, the first thing to find out about is the health and nourishment of the mother.

Scanty diet for the mother means scanty diet for the baby. Without sufficient food the milk will be thin and scanty. An overworked mother cannot be expected to supply the necessary food. Her surplus is absorbed by her over-activity.

I want to make clear that attention to the baby is not enough. It is usually important to have the mother robust and well fed. In every family where there is a nursing baby, every other member of the household should be thoughtful and considerate of the mother. She must be guarded and spared. So far as worry can be taken from her shoulders it should be. Common humanity should teach this lesson.

If these things have been overlooked, I am sure the mere mention of them will be followed by greater consideration for the mother.

The appearance of the mother does not tell the whole story. The mother may seem well and robust. She may be full-busted and give every outward sign of efficiency. In spite of this the quality and quantity of her milk may be so below par as to endanger the welfare of the baby.

If the milk is good and ample in quantity, the infant draws at the breast for ten or fifteen minutes. He goes about his work quietly and contentedly. At the end of the period he drops the nipple and falls asleep. He gives every evidence of perfect content.

This is not the case with an undernourished child. He is fretful and impatient. He will drop the nipple and cry. He does not fall asleep as the well-fed child does.

The baby getting a full supply of milk may have it overflow and trickle from his mouth. On opening the mouth there is lots of milk there. If the milk supply is low, the mouth shows little or no milk.

In the last analysis the baby is the test of the quality and supply of the milk. If the baby is good natured, if he gains weight, if he looks well nourished, then you may be confident everything is as it should be.

Don't fail to have a pair of scales in the house. Use them regularly and keep track of the changes in weight. There is no better way to prove that things are all right.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

DOTTY MEETS A QUEER LITTLE LANDLORD

Dotty stooped down on the sand and picked up a pretty shell. Slowly, out came some funny-looking claws and Dotty, with a squeal, dropped the shell and danced up and down.

"My goodness!" laughed a merry voice and Dotty turned to see a wee little elfin standing at her side. "Surely you're not afraid of Mr. Hermit Crab?" said the elfin.

"Oh Happy Giggles," Dotty exclaimed, "is that really and truly a Hermit Crab? How did he happen to get into that pretty shell? My, but his claws frightened me for a second. Here, let's have him."

"No, better still, let's sit him down on this stone," and Happy Giggles placed the shell on the stone and rapped on the edge of the shell. Out came the funny-looking claws, followed by Mr. Hermit Crab's little head.

"Gracious, Happy Giggles!" he cried, "I surely thank you for saving my life."

"Why, what are you talking about?" asked the elfin. "This is Dotty; she wouldn't harm you for the world."

"I should say I wouldn't," agreed Dotty. "Fact is I didn't know there was anyone in that shell. How did you get in there anyway?"

"Backed in, of course," chuckled Mr. Hermit Crab. "I guess you really meant to ask why I was in there. You see, a few minutes ago, there was quite a battle here on the sands, between another Hermit Crab and myself. I had a shell house, but I had out-grown it and was out in search of a larger house. I found this shell and was just about to crawl into it when another Crab informed me he had seen it first. Well, we settled the dispute. I won the shell house as you see, but I lost a leg and——"

"Is that a hermit crab?"

"Oh goodness, does your leg hurt? Can I help you in anyway? Can I bandage it up for you?" cried Dotty.

"Oh dear!" cried Happy Giggles, "but you're funny, Dotty," and he and Mr. Hermit Crab had a good laugh. "You see, Honey, Mr. Hermit Crab never bothers about bandages; he cuts the wounded part off. I'll gamble right now, he is one leg shy. How about it, Mr. Hermit Crab?"

"You are right, Happy Giggles," chuckled Mr. Crab. "I can't be bothered with wounds. When I get wounded, I just cut the wounded part out and wait for another part. Why drag around a bandaged leg when you can grow another one? The only thing that worries me, is that folks are liable to ask my age some time. Then I won't be able to say, for part of me will be years old and part of me will be days old," and Mr. Hermit Crab laughed merrily.

"Laying all joking aside, if it wasn't for my soft-shelled tail, I wouldn't need a shell house. But I don't want folks nipping off my tail. Did you want this shell? You may have it if you wish."

"I should say not," replied Dotty. "I wouldn't take it for the world. Come on, Happy Giggles, we'll find some other shells." So Dotty caught up the little shell house and placed it near the edge of the water and she and Happy Giggles ran down the shore in search of other shells.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY DECEMBER 15.

A very active and prosperous day is the augury read from the splendid chain of lunar and mutual aspects. There is every sign of increased business and gratifying financial returns. Employment is under the propitious sway of the luminaries in conjunction. All manner of new projects are encouraged, and the old are secure, but it might be well to make important changes or journeys with deliberation, although opportunities for advantages in this direction are imminent.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of splendid advantages and opportunities in business, in employment and in new undertakings. There is every sign of prosperity and growth, but changes should be made with calm deliberation. A child born on this day may be clever, versatile and disposed to large and bold adventures, of which it should make a success, financial as well as to importance of position in life.

URGES GREATER CONSIDERATION FOR EMPLOYEES

Rotarian Brown Pleads For Application of Golden Rule.

ADDRESSES ROTARY.

Must Take Rotary Idea of Service Into Their Lives.

An earnest plea for Rotarians to carry the Golden Rule into business, particularly in regard to the relationship between employer and employee, was made by Rotarian R. A. Brown, in an eloquent address at the weekly luncheon of the Beterboro Rotary Club today.

Rotarian Brown remarked at the commencement of his address that he wanted to deal with a new slant on Rotary that he had discovered. In his opinion a Rotarian should be judged not by his club activities, but rather by the manner in which he carried out the Rotary idea of service in his relationship with the people with whom he came into contact. In this connection, the speaker particularly urged Rotarians who might be in a position where they were in charge of employees, to apply the Golden Rule to their relations. He deprecated the long-cherished idea that labor was a commodity to be bought and sold and pleaded that workers should be treated on a higher plane than that of men only concerned about their pay envelopes. The Rotary Better Business Methods programme, the speaker thought, as of the greatest importance when it was applied to the relationships between employer and employee, and Rotarian Brown earnestly maintained that employees must be treated as men and women who were entitled to more in life than a pay envelope, which he intimated had often been kept just as slender as it was possible for the employer to make it.

The address was thoroughly appreciated by the club, and Rotarians A. L. Killaly and Lee Barnes, in moving a vote of thanks, pronounced it one of the best papers on business relations that the Rotary Club had heard.

TEXTILE MAN DEAD.

SOME GOOD SHOOTING.

Pat Blade, of Peterborough, Was Leading Rifleman at Match.

Some excellent shooting was exhibited on Friday afternoon on the farm of W. Telford, Chemong road, where sharp shooters from near and far contended for the geese put up by Mr. Telford as prizes in the competition. The honors of the day fell to Pat Blade, of Peterborough, whose skill resulted in his winning no less than three birds. His father, A. Blade, gained one bird, as did the Rev. Mr. Weir, of Omemee, L. McConkey, Selwyn, C. Nixon, Peterborough, W. Steinwrauss, Smith, and E. Telford and V. Millburn, both of Peterborough. Two well known Peterborough men, who were present were John Gillespie and M. J. Duffus. Both distinguished themselves by registering a very high standard of marksmanship.

There was a good good crowd and all appeared to enjoy the afternoon's sport.

AN XMAS SURPRISE.

A holly wreath, resplendent with a brilliant bell hangs in the window. A green Xmas tree bedecked with tiny candles and much tinsel stands beside the grate. But these signs of Christmas good cheer find no reflection on the faces of the elderly couple sitting moodily before the fire—their boy, their girl—will not be home this year.

And then the surprise. The bell rings, the door is answered and there you stand fresh and fit after your most comfortable trip in a Canadian National train. Your mother fairly jumps into your arms, your father circles around trying to get your hand, bubbling over with happiness. What joy you have brought them! What a glorious surprise! And what a good time you'll have yourself!

Let the Canadian National Railways take you home this Christmas. Enjoy all the good things your mother will prepare. Any Canadian National Agent will make your reservation.

PAY TAX AT HOME.

Facilities Provided Here For Payment of Income Tax.

Peterborough people have in the past been sending their income tax returns to Belleville but facilities have been provided whereby the tax may be paid at he Customs house on the corner of Charlotte and George sreets.

At the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on Friday night J. Wells Fraser made that announcement and urged eevryone to pay the tax in the home city instead of swelling the Belleville quota.

BENEFIT CONCERT

There was a capacity house at the Capitol Theatre last evening for the benefit concert given for two old people of Belmont Township, whose case has recently excited the interest and sympathy of several local citizens. Given under the auspices of the Female Voice Choir, with the director, Mrs. R. Bugg, as the moving spirit in making arrangements, assisted by Mrs. W. R. Morris and Mrs. J. Mills, the Capitol Theatre was secured for the occasion through the kindness of the manager, Mr. A. B. Crowe, and held a crowd of over nine hundred people last night. The concert was excellent and varied in character, every number receiving hearty appreciation from the audience. The sum of $100.50 was realized at the door.

Seated on the platform were Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mrs. J. Mills, F. A. Peck, M.P. elect, W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., Mayor J. J. Turner and Captain Whatley. Major Winterbottom acted as chairman.

Vocal and instrumental selections of different types made up the evening's entertainment, with choruses by the Female Voice Choir and a group of tiny tots and selections by the Saxaphone Group from the Salvation Army and the Capitol orchestra. The high light in the evening's performance was the violin playing of Mrs. I. A. Foster, who delighted her hearers with the splendid quality of her musicianship. Mrs. Foster received an overwhelming encore for her first selection, and came back to play "The Canary," a delicate bird-note selection of finely-spun harmonics and outstanding technique that received another hurst of prolonged enthusiasm that brought her back for a second encore.

The opening selection was an overture by the Capitol orchestra, under direction of Miss F. Gladman, and was followed by a chorus by several tiny tots in white, who sang "Jesus Loves Me" so effectively that they came back for an encore number. Solos in this selection were taken by small Annie Fletcher and Phyllis Pink. Other members were the little Misses Murray, Francis, L. Bugg, Scholey, M. Fletcher, Rumary, Dainton.

A number of well-rendered and well-received vocal solos followed, including songs by J. Hodson, Mrs. A. Brearley, A. Everitt, Mrs. G. Jackson, T. Stazicker, Miss Jessie Patterson and S. L. Willis.

The Saxaphone Group from the Salvation Army played a couple of pretty selections with fine effect, and a pianoforte solo by Miss Marion Adams was heartily applauded. The Female Voice Choir sang in fine voice, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," directed by Mrs. Bugg, and several of the members also sang 'Nearer my God to Thee' for a tableau number, in which the Rock of Ages, with a large white cross on top, and the singers in flowing white garments, was presented very effectively on a darkened stage. A quartette from Trinity Church, composed of Mrs. H. F. Doig, Miss B. Payton, Mr. D. Fleming and Mr. W. Skitch, gave an excellent rendition of "Rock of Ages," and the closing number was a bright selection by the Capitol orchestra, splendidly played. Miss Minnie Allen, who was also scheduled to appear on the programme, was indisposed.

Accompanists for the evening were Mrs. R. Bugg, Mrs. A. Fenwick, Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, the Misses F. Gladman, Alma Blanchard and M. Willis.

During the evening, Mrs. Morris explained the nature of the case of need which the concert was designed to aid, and Mayor Turner also spoke briefly. A vote of thanks to Mrs. Bugg, the Choir, the manager and assistants of the Capital Theatre, and all who took part in the programme, was voiced by E. A. Peck, M.P. elect, who spoke of the pleasure received in listening to such an excellent programme, and was seconded by W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

CHRISTMAS MUSICALE

For the Christmas Musicale given in the studio of the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Women's Art Association, the rooms were prettily decorated with red and green. A pleasing programme was presented, followed by afternoon tea, served from a table centred with a silver basket of narcissus and pink carnations, flanked by pink candles. Mrs. B. L. Barns and Mrs. J. Mackintosh were tea hostesses, assisted by Mrs. E. Shirley, Mrs. Oliphant, Mrs. H. Connolly, Mrs. Beatty, and Mrs. J. Wearing.

The programme included a group of English carols played by a violin ensemble, under direction of Mr. Francis Sutton, and composed of the following musicians: Messrs. C. Seymour, Gallagher, McKeown and Sutton; songs by Mrs. Walter Byers, "An Old Sacred Lullaby" and "The Christ Child," with accompaniment by Mr. Chas. Peaker; a violin ensemble that included the following selections, "It came upon the Midnight clear," "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," "Adeste Fidelis," "Joy to the World," and "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem," also two songs by Mr. Francis Sutton, (who kindly consented to take the place of Dr. S. J. Graham, who was unable to be present. Mr. Sutton sang "Holy Night" and "Nazareth," with accompaniment by Miss Isobel McKee

Mining Market Weak Most Stocks Dropping

TORONTO, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—The mining market was weak this morning. Keeley and Nipissing went higher, Keeley selling from 160 up to 165, and closing at 164, and Nipissing gaining from 610 to 625. Castle Trethewey lost from 147 to 143. In the gold section, Teck Hughes dropped from 235 to 231, and Wright-Hargraves lost from 745 to 735. Kirkland Lake gained a point to 76, Goldale lost from 31 1-2 to 30 1-2, Premier gained from 224 to 225.

Declines On Foreign Marts Sent Price Of Wheat Down

CHICAGO, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Influenced by a sharp decline at Buenos Aires and at Liverpool, the wheat market here developed an early weakness today. Fine weather prevailed in Argentina and it was reported that shipments of wheat and flour to Liverpool aggregated 1,734,000 bushels, compared with 746,000 bushels a week ago. In addition, liquidating sales on the part of holders here met with only a moderate demand. Chicago opening prices, 3-4c to 2c lower, new style, December 167 1-2 and May 164 to 164 1-2, were followed by a decline to 166 3-4 for December and 163 1-2 for May.

Increased country offerings of corn for Iowa and Illinois had a bearish effect on the corn market and on oats as well. After opening at 1-4c to 3-4c decline, May 83 1-2c to 83 3-4c; corn under went a slight further sag. Oats started 1-8 to 1-4c off, May 44 3-4 to 44 7-8c, and later showed some further loss.

Provisions reflected downturns both in the value of hogs and of grain.

Speculators For Advance Regain Control Of Market

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press)—Speculators for an advance regained control of the price movement in today's market despite sporadic waves of bear selling and profit taking. Heavy accumulation of railroad shares was outstanding feature, Rock Island being bid up over three points, while Chesapeake and Ohio, St. Louis South Western, Chicago and North Western, New York and Harlem, Erie Common and Peoria and Eastern were elevated to new high levels for the year. Reports of a record breaking holiday trade stimulated the demand for merchandising issues, S. S. Kresge starting out with a gain of 15 points.

Paper Stocks Score Gains Other Issues Are Weaker

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 14 (Canadian Press))—Paper stocks came in for considerable attention during this morning's trading in the Toronto Stock exchange, gains being general. Transactions in other issues, however, showed a weaker tendency after firmness during the first hour of business.

Abitibi led the papers, jumping 4 1-2 points from its last sale on the local board some days ago to 75 while Brompton advanced 1 7-8 at 25 and Spanish River a full point at 105. Shredded Wheat, up 1 at 170, and Atlantic Sugar, fractionally higher at 62, were the only other issues to show advances. Consolidated Smelters suffered the most severe loss, dropping 1 5-8 to 148 7-8. Declines of a point were recorded by F. N. Burt at 62 1-2 and Winnipeg Railway at 48.

TRAFFIC SIGNALS SATISFIED CHIEF

Saw Them in Action in Busy Thoroughfares and in Quiet Streets.

FEWER ACCIDENTS.

Chief of Police Samuel Newhall returned on Friday from Detroit with a new Hudson automobile which will replace the Studebaker as police car. The chief said that, at his own expense, he had thoroughly investigated the automatic traffic control systems as operated in Detroit, Windsor, London, Hamilton and Toronto. In every instance, he declared the regulation of traffic was perfect, both in continuously crowded thoroughfares and on streets where conditions prevailing in the Peterboro business section were to be found.

He said there was absolutely no ground for skepticism regarding lack of obedience to the signals.

During the whole period of inspection Chief Newhall declared that he did not see one infraction of the traffic laws.

Advantages which he noticed were the speeding up of traffic on all the streets, and that there were fewer accidents reported in the districts controlled by the new system. Another advantage was the decrease of police for traffic supervision, and the increased safeguard property.

In Windsor, on Oulette avenue, where conditions were in many places similar to those on George street, the signals were located on the street corners, and were satisfactory to traffic proceeding in any direction.

Chief Newhall said that the public were learning a new dependence themselves and looked at the signals for protection. When a policeman was stationed on the corner motorists and pedestrians almost demanded his personal supervision while they were going through the intersection. He believes that the system will revolutionize traffic conditions, and will benefit Peterboro greatly.

ENTERTAINMENT BY MILLBROOK A.Y.P.A.

Many Numbers Comprised Programme, Which Was Much Appreciated.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 14. — The Town Hall was well filled on Thursday evening for the entertainment under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A. of St. Thomas Church, when a most enjoyable programme was presented, largely by local talent.

The office of chairman was not formally filled, but Allen Pitt made such announcement of the successive numbers as was necessary.

Mrs. Canon) Allen and Miss M. B. Turner, B.A., had the responsibility of training those taking part, and to them much credit is due for the excellent manner in which the local artists acquitted themselves.

Of the outside talent, Mrs. (Dr.) King, Peterborough, as a soloist is invariably warmly welcomed in her native town, while the comic selections of Messrs. Clare Winslow and Tom McCamus meet with popular approval whenever heard.

The character reading, with musical accompaniment, given by Misses Pearl Lamb and Gertrude Gray, wearing quaint Dutch costumes, was unique here and warmly applauded, while the "Seaside Romance," in which Mr. David Fowler was the "casting lady," with Maurice Gray as an ardent lover, had a flavor of "Dumbells." The amusing farce, "Shopping," gave Mr. Fred Wells plenty of scope for his talent both in action and singing and his encounter with Mrs. W. Hilton and her obedient husband, "Adolphus" (Mr. R. Stone), as dissatisfied customers, called forth some clever repartee.

The longest, and possibly the chief number on the programme, was the one-act comedy, "Box and Cox," which concluded the entertainment. The landlady of the a boarding-house, Mrs. Bouncer (Miss Mary Pitt), decides to make double income from her one apartment by renting it to Mr. Cox (Rev. D. R. Dewdney), a hatter, who goes to business by day, and to Mr. Box (Mr. Allen Pitt), a printer, who works all night. Neither lodger knows about the other's use of the room until an unexpected holiday brings Mr. Cox back from work to find Mr. Box preparing breakfast in the apartment which he considered his own private property. The many amusing situations which develop kept the audience in a gale of laughter throughout. The tangle is eventually happily straightened out; Mrs. Bouncer is extricated from her predicament and good feeling all round established.

The make-up of the actors was particularly good, and brought vividly to mind some of Dickens' characters, while the acting itself was deserving of the highest praise.

The programme was as follows:
Piano Duet—Mrs. Allen and Miss Mamie Collins.
Comic Chorus—"Our Evening's Entertainment," by Messrs. M. Gray, D. Fowler, R. Stone, and F. Wells.
Solo—"If I Built a World for You, Dear," by Mrs. (Dr.) King; encore, "Nuthin'."
Character Reading (Dutch Costume) —"I'll Be His Dutch," Misses Pearl Lamb and Gertrude Gray.
Song—"Bandy Bertha," by Messrs. C. Winslow and T. McCamus; encore, "I'm Going to Marry."
Sketch—"A Seaside Romance," by M. Gray, D. Fowler, A. Pitt, and Luella Shaw.
Action Song. — "The Belles and The Bootblacks," George and Henry Gray, Misses P. Lamb and G. Gray.
Solo—"Just a Rose," by Mrs. King.
Song—"You Tell Her," by C. Winslow and T. McCamus; encore, "When You Walk Up High Street, Africa."
Piano Duet—Mrs. Allen and Miss Ada Attwooll.
Sketch—"Shopping." Merchant, F. Wells; Customers, Mrs. Hilton and Mr. Stone, M. Gray, D. Fowler, and Miss L. Shaw.
Solo—"I sent You Roses," by Mrs. King; encore, "The Little China God."
Song—"I Miss My Swiss," by C. Winslow and T. McCamus; encore, "I Feel Blue."
Piano Duet—Mrs. Allen and Miss L. Crocker.
Play—"Mr. Box and Mr. Cox"; Landlady, Miss Mary Pitt; Mr. Cox, Rev. D. R. Dewdney; Mr. Box, Allen Pitt.
God Save The King.

The receipts were over sixty dollars.

ECLIPSE FASHIONS

Exclusive Patterns by Hazel Payne

Two-piece Costume Approved By Smart Women

Two-piece sports and tailored costumes are things of much more elaboration as far as fabric is concerned, than those worn earlier in the season, which were usually developed in jerseys and crêpes. Now the modish attitude is toward making these costumes in crêpe satins and velvet, or a combination of both. In the model pictured here satin has been chosen for the new finger-tip length blouse and velvet for the skirt. The velvet was employed to fashion the snug-fitting collar, cuffs and trimming-bands. The skirt is joined to a bodice top and has two inverted plaits at the front to add freedom and the latest flared movement. The diagram shows just how to put the dress together, and No. 1243 is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years (34, 36 and 38 inches bust). Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 4¼ yards 36-inch, or 2⅝ yards 54-inch material. The bodice top of skirt requires 1¼ yards 36-inch additional lining, or with ribbon straps over the shoulders ⅞ yard. Price 20 cents.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

Peterboro', Ont.

Dear Annie Laurie: I am coming to you for advice. Some time ago my boy friend and I had a quarrel; it was the first one we had. It was all over nothing at all.

However, we parted bad friends; neither of us wanting to speak first, I guess.

Since our quarrel he has asked me, through a friend, to go out with him, but I refused, thinking it improper to accept an invitation like that so I did not go that time.

I also had heard since that he said something about me which I believe to be untrue as he was a nice fellow and seemed to like me just as well as I did him.

We got along splendidly well until our quarrel. He speaks yet when we meet, which isn't very often. I haven't had any desire to keep company with anyone else, as I have not met another fellow I like half so well as I did him. Now, Annie Laurie, do you think he will ever come back to me? Don't you think there must be some reason why he has never called on me since. I wasn't all to blame for the quarrel. I always speak well of him to everyone, and I feel very badly in regard to what I heard he said about me as he was a nice fellow and we got along fine together until our quarrel and everyone has their quarrels.

Somehow I cannot believe that he said that about me what I was told, as it was told by a girl that liked him and when she thought he liked me better. She tried every way she possibly could to make bad friends between us. How can I get him back? Dear Annie Laurie, what would you do if you were me? Thanking you very much. —Tell Me?

Tell Me: Well, for one thing, you don't need to believe what this girl said, if you have any reason to think that her remarks were made out of a desire to keep you and your friend apart. She may be simply trying to fan the flame and prevent your reconciliation. What has likely happened is that she has repeated something to him of the same type of gossip, and made him think that you are talking about him. His invitation through a friend was probably a feeler to ascertain the state of your mind toward him. If you find you cannot forget him and really want to be friends with him again, you might take some measures to make up the quarrel. You could stop and make a few remarks, not necessarily about your disagreement, the next time you meet him, or even tell this friend who conveyed his invitation to you, that you have changed your mind and would like to make up again. However, if you think you may quarrel later in the same way, I advise you to forget about him entirely and make friends with someone who is easier to get along with. Even if you were partly to blame, it takes two to make a quarrel any time.

Citizens of Lynchburg, Va., have developed such a habit of calling up the police station to learn the correct time, that the police chief has found it necessary to order his men not to give the time over the telephone.

TELLING OF A STUNNING COAT FOR THE JUNIOR MISS.

Pam and I took a walk in Central Park last Saturday afternoon.

The air was crisp and cold, and we decided that we could enjoy a brisk walk through the Park, where one sees more of open spaces than anywhere else in the city.

"We picked a good time," Pam commented. "All the cunning little children are being aired by their nursemaids."

Sure enough, there were flocks of children, from the perambulator age to those who were as tall as we, but much younger.

"I must say," Pam observed, "that many of these mothers dress their children quite as well as I could, if they belonged to me."

"You are very generous in your praise," I assured Pam, with a smile.

She, however, was unperturbed by my remark and said:

"See the twelve-year-old girl coming toward us?"

I looked and saw a very nice-looking child, dressed in a cape-coat that appealed to my taste exactly.

"Adorable costume," I commented.

"What material is it?" Pam asked.

"It's kasha," I answered. "And that's exactly the shade of brick red Madame has just bought a whole bolt of."

By this time the child had come nearer and we saw that the coat had a little cape that went across the shoulders, a collar of gray squirrel, and one large covered button to hold it together at the front fastening.

"That hat is felt in exactly the same shade," I remarked when the little girl had passed by.

"Her mother was doubtless in Paris last Summer," Pam said. "The Fall openings in the late Summer showed a lot of cape-coats, with hats to match."

"I'd like the same kind of outfit for myself," I said.

"You couldn't have a smarter," Pam assured me.

"I saw a stunning woman yesterday, wearing a brown cape-coat and a brown felt hat, both of which I coveted," I told her, and proceeded to describe the costume.

Pam persuaded me to select dark green for my color, and said she would help me design a cape-coat, to be made by a tailor.

DOLAN DECISION WAS REVERSED

Judge Huycke Orders Liquor to be Returned to Defendant.

NOT FOR SALE

The following is the decision of His Honor Judge Huycke on the appeal of Dalton Dolan from a conviction before Magistrate Langley.

STEWART vs. DOLAN

Mr. Strickland for the prosecution
Mr. R. R. Hall, K.C., for the defendant

This is an appeal to me as County Judge from a conviction of one Dalton Dolan, made by Mr. O. A. Langley, Police Magistrate, at Peterborough. The sentence under the conviction was a fine of $500.00 with one month's imprisonment in the common jail, and in default of payment of fine, three months additional imprisonment, and also the forfeiture of some liquor taken from the residence of the defendant, Dolan, in the Township of North Monaghan, a suburb of the City of Peterborough.

The Charge and conviction are under Section 40 of the Ontario Temperance Act and for unlawfully keeping liquor for sale.

I have gone into the matter rather carefully and extensively, and have given due consideration to the arguments of Counsel and to the written judgment of the convicting magistrate. There is no conflict of evidence in the case at all. Stewart, the License Inspector, says he had a search warrant and went to Dolan's residence to make a search for liquor; he was told to go down cellar where he would find some in some bags near the foot of the cellar stairs. There were over one hundred small flasks of Scotch Whiskey, seven bottles of Seagram's whiskey, and some alcohol in a tin can which the defendant says was for use in his car in cold weather. The liquor he says, was for his own use, and all of the quantity that he had obtained not there then, had been consumed by himself, except perhaps, some little for friends. He does not seem to have been asked specifically whether he sold, or kept for sale, but a denial of such charge is I think, properly to be inferred from his evidence. There is no evidence of sale, or of keeping or offering for sale.

The evidence of the seizure and the existence of the liquor in the plaintiff's residence is not questioned or contradicted, nor is the evidence of the defendant Dolan in any way contradicted, though for some reason, which is not given, it is questioned by the magistrate. The conviction is based and based solely upon the presumption and the onus said to be placed upon the defendant by Section 88 of the Act. The Magistrate has stated that he does not believe the defendant's evidence even in the absence of contradiction; he does not give any reason for this contradiction. The appeal is to me and I must determine it upon the facts and the law as I see it.

This is not a certiorari proceeding but is an appeal, and this appeal in accordance with time honoured practice is a trial de novo, but confined to the record of the trial before the magistrate. My attention is called to a decision of His Honour, Judge Denton, Toronto, Rex vs. Jolly, 34 C.C.C., page 355, which case seems very similar to this one. The learned Judge there held that the liquor was found in the defendant's own dwelling which was a legal possession, and the defendant was prima facie justified in keeping it there; he therefore finds that this liquor being legally held in a proper place, the prima facie onus or presumption arising under Section 88, does not arise from the mere finding of the liquor, because it is found in a place where it may be legally kept. This decision does not seem to have been questioned, nor has it been so determined by an appellate court. A somewhat similar decision has been given in Manitoba under a Statute, which seems very like in its provision of the Ontario Act—See Rex vs. Galsky, 41 C.C.C., page 35. I am quite aware this decision of Judge Denton is not binding upon me and I do not necessarily follow it. I desire to say, however, that I have a very high opinion of Judge Denton, a gentleman of splendid legal ability and vast experience, and though not bound to follow his decision, I do follow it and approve of it, and in my judgment the principles therein laid down are correct. If this finding is proper, that is the end of the case, because the liquor found was in the lawful residence of the defendant, which he occupied together with his wife and family. Therefore no statutory onus and no even prima facie case. But even apart from Rex vs. Jolly, I should have to hold the prosecution failed in any event.

Assuming there is that presumption under Section 88, it is only a presumption and a presumption is easily dispelled and set aside. There may be a presumption of guilt on the one hand, but it is met by the sworn evidence of the defendant Dolan. The defendant is entitled to the benefit of the doubt; as I read it the dictum in Rex vs. Hayes, 55 O.L.R. 635 is intended to apply to the facts in that particular case, and is not a dictum generally applicable to all cases that may arise, otherwise the appeal to the County Court would be in no way different or better than the certiorari proceeding under which most of these liquor cases have been decided. There is a presumption on one side and that is all, there is the sworn evidence of the defendant as against it, that sworn evidence is neither corroborated nor denied. Would any jury of reasonable men under these circumstances convict the defendant, and say that there was no reasonable doubt in their minds of his guilt. I certainly could not be one of such a jury. In my judgment, putting it at the very weakest point, there is a very strong doubt of guilt, and if there is such a doubt then it is my duty to allow the appeal and acquit the defendant.

The appeal will therefore be allowed, and an order will go for the restoration to the defendant Dolan of the liquor taken from him.

The appeal will be allowed with costs, but the usual protection extending to the magistrate.

ART GALLERY AT TORONTO TO BE ENRICHED

TORONTO, December 14.— When the new additions to the Toronto Art Gallery, the Grange on Dundas St. west, are opened to the public in the coming year, the permanent collection will be enriched through the munificence of H. C. Cox, son of the late Seator George A. Cox, by a collection of some thirty landscapes, valued at approximately $150,000, that formed a part of the collection of the late Senator and Mrs. Cox.

The paintings include new examples of the Barbizon school, Carot, Rousseau, DAubigny and other masters of the Barbizon school period are well represented, and the collection cannot fail to be of great educative value to art students as well as the public at large.

When interviewed concerning this magnificent gift Mr. H. C. Cox remarked that it had always been his intention to will the paintings to the city, and that in view of the present increased accommodation at the Grange he thought that the present time was a happy one to make the gift.

"The landscapes form a part of the collection made by my mother," said Mr. Cox, "and I realized that it is not sufficient to have an art gallery, but one also needs paintings to hang in it, so in the hope that these works would be of educative value and a source of pleasure primarily to art students, but also to the public at large as well, I decided to offer them to the directors of the Grange."

It is understood that the magnificent gift of paintings donated by Mr. Cox will hang in a special room to be known as the "Cox room," where they will be a lasting memorial to the late Senator and Mrs. Cox, whose interest in art is already widely known.

SENATORS BEATEN BY MONTREAL MAROONS 5-2 AFTER WINNING AT HOME FOUR GAMES IN SUCCESSION

Record Crowd of 11,500 Saw Best Game of the Season.

HOOLEY SMITH ILL

Ottawa Missed Their Right Wing Flash — Nelson Stewart Starred.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press) — Ottawa's winning succession in the National Hockey League has been halted at four straight games. Before a record crowd of 11,500 at the Forum Saturday night, a gathering which jammed the rink to the very roof, Montreal defeated the league-leading Senators, 5 to 2, in a fast, exciting battle, easily the best hockey seen here this winter.

Dazzling hockey marked the first period and the greater part of the second period, with the Maroons having an edge on the play and quite a distinct margin as the game proceeded; the visitors cracked under the strain. Montreal were better fortified with fresh substitutes to keep up the clip, while Ottawa had only three relief men and were without the services of Hooley Smith, flashy right wing player, who came down with the team, but who had to be sent to the hospital with an infected foot.

Both teams went out to force the opening and gain an early lead. Twelve minutes the puck travelled up and down the ice in spectacular rushes, which generaly broke on the two stalwart defences.

Finally Montreal got a chance. George Boucher had led a rush on the Montreal goal and no Ottawa player had fallen back to pair with Clancy on the defence, the latter being left alone as the outer Ottawa guard. Boucher was spilled flat on the ice by Captain Dunc Munro near the Montreal goal and Reg Noble started back down the ice with the puck. The wily old player was outskating the back-checking Ottawa forwards and Nels Stewart, sensing the chance, flashed up on Noble's left like a streak. Noble drew Clancy and passed to Stewart and the stellar Maroon centre did not waste one second in driving the disc. Connell had not a chance as the puck sped to the corner of the net.

Ottawa Missed Goal

But Ottawa were not to be counted out yet. Early in the second period, they made their big bid. George Boucher rushed down and on a scramble in front of the Montreal defence, let fly with the puck. Benedict had not a good line on the rubber, which went by his stick, but hit the upright of the goal post and bounced off to the side of the net. Boucher claimed a goal, which the officials would not allow. An argument ensued with the Ottawa defence man showing considerable temper. Before the Senators had settled down from this disturbing incident, Hobie Kitchen, the former Niagara Falls player, now subbing on the Montreal defence, came into action. Kitchen cleared a rush from King Clancy and started for the Ottawa goal. The big fellow was fairly flying over the ice and when he got to the Ottawa defence drove the puck. The disc shizzed past Connell for Montreal's second goal—and advantage which, on the play, was enough to assure the Maroons of victory.

Players on both sides were beginning to show the effects of the gruelling pace and play slowed down and started to become a trifle too strenuous. Penalties began to flow and Montreal were reduced to four men to six. Broadbent was sent off for heavy play on King Clancy, a penalty which drew the wrath of the crowd down on Referee Lou Marsh, who did not rule against Broadbent until after Clancy had started to limp around the ice. Papers started to be thrown, but luckily the distance of the unruly spectators from the ice resulted in little of the litter reaching the ice. Montreal held their margin while two short. And then came the surprise for the fans, a feat which threw the immense crowd into pandemonium. Babe Siebert, who had been flashing in rare form all night, took the puck and, with the Maroons still one short, went down the ice alone. He speeded to the Ottawa defence and sent a bullet-like shot at Connell, which found the mesh for the Maroons' third goal and clinched matter so far as the local concerned, though Ottawa kept up their losing fight to the very last.

Avoided Shut Out.

The third period found them saving themselves from the shoutout fate they have been inflicting on opponents, Cy Denneny tallying after a smart piece of hockey generalship by the veteran Frank Nighbor.

There was still sixteen minutes. Montreal again speeded up, with Rgg. Noble leading the attack which ended in Broadbent sniping a goal on Noble's rebound to place the Maroons once more three up.

"Chuck" Dinsmore, substitute centre for the Maroons, tallied his team's final goal. It was the first goal scored by Dinsmore since early last season, but it was the culmination of lots of practice. Dinsmore has been spending fifteen minutes or so after the regular workouts getting his shot in order—and his lonely training stunts have apparently brought results.

Ottawa rushed Clancy to the forward line in an effort to gain goals, Gorman going to the defence. Clancy immediately started to get into the limelight by close attention to Nels Stewart. He rushed Stewart in a face off in front of the Ottawa goal and the pair started a jabbing bee which ended in them both drawing major penalties just as the game ended.

Stewart the Star.

The star performances were furnished by the opposing centres, Nelson Stewart, for the Maroons, and Frank Nighbor for Ottawa. Stewart showed all the cleverness which has made him an idol of the Montreal supporters and last night added to his smart hockey a greater degree of stability—the former Cleveland amateur attending strictly to the game, despite close watching, and working with untiring determination to the last. He showed besides gunning, a willingness to follow the puck from end to end and in this was backed up by the entire forward line. The work of Broadbent, Seibert and Stewart in back-checking, bottled up the speedy Ottawa rushs and any that did become dangerous were steerd on to that steady pair. Noble and Munro. Noble next to Stewart, was the outstanding player on the Montreal team. Time and again he blocked the way when Ottawa threatened and its was this same player who started the Maroons to their first goal.

The lineup:—

Montreal—Goal, Benedict; defence Noble, Munro; centre, N. Stewart; wings, Seibert, Broadbent; subs, Kitchen, Rothschild, Dinsmore, Cain Lowrey, Horne.

PETES AND PRESTON IN SEMI-FINAL S.P.A.

Winner Meets Port Arthur on Friday.

(Toronto Star Weekly)

The S.P.A. senior final next Friday night is the big feature of next week's Arena program.

Port Arthur, the Canadian title holders, meet either Peterboro or Preston for the Sportsmen's Trophy, and the only sure thing about the outcome is that a team whose initial letter is P will be the winner.

Cup Holders in Finals

For several years now the Allan Cup holders have competed in the final S.P.A. game, but the fact that they were the titular possessors has been no guarantee of victory, and Port Arthur's assurance of success is just as uncertain.

Two years ago Granites, as the Olympic representativs, met the Soo and only won out by a grand last period rally. Last year the Soo again figured in the final, but met their waterloo at the hands of the flying Petes, who are in the semi-finals this year, and will likely be favorites to again capture the honors.

Semi-Final Monday

Second only in point of interest to Friday's game is the semi-final on Monday night between Peterboro and Preston. Peterboro ran into a snag when they tackled Kitchener, and the old Hiller-Karges combination nearly put them into the discard, but despite their close shave last year's S.P.A. champions will be favorites to beat Preston and again figure in the finals.

Good Goalies Here

Joe Dwyer is considered about the class of the O.H.A. goalies, but he will have a hard time maintaining his reputation among the starry aggregation of twine custodians who are guarding the nets in the Ontario body this winter, and Schmaltz, the Preston net guardian, is one of those who will be the Pete goalkeeper's keenest rivals. Preston failed to make much of an impression against Osgoode Hall, but in their game with Parkdale they looked like a strong team, and in "Dad" Ashley and "Gunner" Arnott have two players whom any senior team would be glad to get.

If Peterboro and Port Arthur should meet in the final game the fans will see two smooth-working teams who place lots of stress on team play, but no matter who the finalists will be the game should be one of the best of the season.

TIE IN WINNIPEG

Maroons and Eveleth in Four-Four Game.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Superior condition saved Winnipeg Maroons from defeat against Eveleth-Nibbing Rangers here Saturday. The teams battled to a four-goal tie after a hard fought overtime contest.

The Rangers assumed a three-goal lead in the first period, but Winnipeg got back two before the session ended. Each side got one in the middle period, while Winnipeg tied matters in the third period. There was no score in the overtime play.

Rangers had the bulk of play in the first period, and part of the second, after which the Maroons skated them off their feet and only failed to win because Byrne was in grand form.

OVERTIME GAME WITHOUT SCORE

Calgary and Victoria Battled to Scoreless Draw on Coast.

GAME WAS CLEAN

VICTORIA, B.C., Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—In the Western Hockey League fixture played here Saturday night, Calgary and Victoria battled throughout the three periods and ten minutes overtime to a scoreless draw.

The game was very cleanly fought, Calgarians made their best bid for a score in the extra time, but Holmes, the world champions' goal tender, was then in his best form, and successfully countered the opponents' efforts.

Victoria clearly outplayed Calgary in the first period. They shot 25 times to the Tigers' nine. Winkler was in spectacular form, and saved almost certain goals off the sticks of Hart, Walker, and Loughlin. The Cougars waged a most brilliant offensive, and their back-checking relieved the burden on the weakened defence. They again had an edge on the play in the second period. Calgary opened and Holmes kicked out several fast shots from Briden and Gardiner.

The Victorians came on fast and Winkler was sorely tried, but weathered the storm. Hart and Frederickson were through the defence twice but Winkler took the shots off their sticks. Calgary played a much stronger game in the third period, and tossed three man rushes at Victoria in an effort to score. The Cougars backed up under the pressure, but surprised the fans by staging a furios rally in the last moments.

Line-Up.

Victoria—Holmes, goal; Loughlin and Fraser, defence; Walker and Hart, wings; Frederickson, centre; Meeking, Anderson and R. Oatman, subs.

Calgary.— Winkler, goal; Duncan and Gardiner, defence; Wilson and Oatman wings; Briden, centre; McFarlane, Sparrow, Oliver and Dutton, subs.

STRATFORD BALL PLAYERS MOVING

Three Depart For St. Catharines—Other Flittings.

STRATFORD, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).— Three members of the Stratford Bards — Jack Youngs, pitcher; Ken Packham, first baseman, and George Burling, outfielder, have departed for St. Catherines, where they will play in the Niagara District Baseball League next summer.

It was also learned that Haines, formerly of Goderich, but who caught for Brantford Cordage last year, will be found in Goderich next year. There is also some talk to the effect that "Red" Pullin, the Woodstock boy, who played in the Dufferin Park Baseball League last summer, will be found with the Preston Riversides when the next season rolls around. Last year the amateur authorities refused to grant Pullin a certificate to play for Stratford.

Whether there is enough Senior material available here for a good Inter-County League team next summer will be decided at a meeting of the Stratford Amateur Athletic Association, which will be held early next week. The trio that have departed will be hard to replace.

REGINA PATS REDEEM WESTERN RUGBY ALTHOUGH DEFEATED 6-4

Had Edge on M.A.A. for Three Periods, But Lacked the Final Punch—First Canadian Junior Rugby Title Decided.

MONTREAL WON WITH TOUCHDOWN

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 14 (Canadian Press) — The reputation of rugby as played in Western Canada has been redeemed, for on Saturday afternoon, in the Canadian Junior final against the local Montreal Amateur Athletic Association squad, the Regina Pats, although beaten 6 to 4, gave such a display as to augur well for the future of the game in the West.

Year after year, the Western senior champions have tried conclusions with the Eastern winners but the boys from west of Ontario have always been defeated by convincing margins. This Junior Regina squad, however, gave a worthy display, upon the first occasion that a junior team has come of the west to challenge the supremacy of the Eastern Juniors.

The visiting gridders had an edge in the first three periods owing to their superb booting which kept the attacking Wheelers back, and at the end of the third quarter the Pats had a 4 to 1 lead, gained by virtue of a rouge and a field goal. In the final quarter, however, the Wheelers appeared to come out of their apparent staleness and with the injection of Ayer into the play as a kicker, who held his own with the husky Western lad Erskine, the locals crashed across the opposing line for a try, Potter going from the opposing ten yard line.

New Cup Presented

This was the first time that the East vs. West junior tilt has taken place and with the occasion, the Regina Leader presented a cup to be known as the Regina Leader Trophy, to be played for annually for the junior championship of Canada. At an informal meeting held in the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association club house, early aSturday evening, Dick Gibson, representative of The Leader, who accompanied the Regina team on their long journey, presented the trophy to S. C. Holland, representativ of the Canadian Rugby Football Union who in turn handed it over to Coach Foster and Captain Brooks of the newly-crowned Dominion titleholders.

Despite the wintry conditions and the half-inch covering of snow on the gridiron, the game at the M.A.A.A. grounds produced a fine exhibition of rugby. Everything that goes to give an open, close and interesting game was witnessed by the spectators. The running and catching of O'Hara, the relief punting of Ayer, the all-round work of the Montreal front rank which held the heavy opposing team to the gaining of yards but once, the catching and passing of the two Regina backs, Kitzewiser and Middleton and the kicking of Erskine giving action at all stages of play. The tackling of both teams was good and at times brilliant.

Added confidence in the last quarter, owing to the improved kicking of Ayer, was responsible for the Montreal victory, the local team, as a whole, showing sudden improvement. Erskine, the western punter, in the first three periods was showing splendid form, having fine protection, thus enabling him to take his time in getting away his long drives, which invariably outdrove the local punter, Peel, who had an off-day.

Only Touch of Game

Early in the last session the Wheelers had forced the play well into Regina territory, the Pats holding possession on their five yard line. They failed to gain through the line and a kick was called. The M.A.A.A. wings crashed through the heavy opposing line and forced Erskine to hurry his kick, which was short and went into touch fifteen yards out. The Wheelers were given possession, five yards were gained and then Potter slipped through a gaping hole which had been opened for him for the only touchdown of the game and the winning five points.

The first period was scoreless. Regina having a slight edge owing to Erskine's superior punting. The locals, however, kept in the fight by their strong line work. Regina took the lead early in the second period, Erskine punting behind the local line. The Wheelers fought back and just before the rest period Peel evened the count, Erskine being downed behind his line. The feature of the second quarter was some brilliant runs by the backs of both teams, Hall making thirty for M.A.A.A., Middleton making two runs of forty and fifteen for Regina. His forty yard run was labeled for a touchdown but Hutton came up fast from behind, to bring the flying runner down with a neat tackle.

The third session saw Regina forge into the lead once again, when Kritzweiser sent over a neat drop from fifteen yards out. They obtained possession following two Montreal fumbles which forced the locals back on the defensive. At this stage Ayer replaced Peel as the Montreal kicking half and the improvement in this department had a splendid moral effect upon the red and blue squad and they immediately forced play to centre. On the change over, for the last session, Montreal took command and gained their winning touchdown.

PARKDALE LOST GAME IN LONDON

Marsden's Seniors Heaped a 7-1 Victory on Toronto Paddlers.

EXHIBITION GAME

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 14. — (Canadian Press).—Parkdale Canoe Club's senior hockey sextette was never in the picture to any great extent in Saturday night's exhibition with the London A.A.A. squad, who romped off with an easily earned 7-1 victory.

It took ten minutes to get the locals going, and the moment Holliway scored the first and only goal for the visitors, pucks started flying past McAllister. The period ended 4 to 1 for London and three more were added in the second period, while the final spasm failed to provide additional counters. Marsden used only his second string in this period.

Pretty team-work by the locals featured and at times Parkdale's defense was completely baffled.

Line up:

Parkdale C.C.—McAllister, goal; Holliway, Gossett, defense; Cole, centre; Morris, Bowsfield, wings; Staines, Lount and Rice, subs.

London A.A.A.—Moore, goal; Starkings, Graham, defense; Lowry, centre; Leamy, Keeling, wings; McPherson, Hynd, Foster and Walkem, subs.

SOUTH AFRICAN WON

JOHNANNESBURG, South Africa, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press)—The British bantam champion, Johnny Brown, was defeated in a 20-round fight by Willie Smith of South Africa. Smith won on points.

GRANGELESS BEARS LOSE

DETROIT, Dec. 14—The Grangeless Chicago Bears were defeated Saturday, 21 to 0, by the Detroit Panthers before a paid attendance of 4,111. Grange did not play because of injuries received in a Boston game.

Announcement that Grange would not play was made late Saturday, with the statement that ticket purchasers would be refunded their money if they so desired. The refund, it was stated last night, was approximately $18,000.

CELTICS WON FEATURE GAME

Crowd of 30,000 at Scottish League Game on Saturday.

BLANKED ST. MIRREN.

GLASGOW, Dec. 4 (Canadian Press) — The feature game in the Scottish Football Association's fixtures on Saturday was the tussle between St. Mirren and Celtic, the latter coming out on top by scoring two goals and blanking their opponents. Thirty thousand spectators saw the game. There was no scoring in the first half. The second section saw some hard and exciting football. Finally the better methods of Celtic prevailed. Scorers for the winners were Thomson and McGrory.

Notwithstanding the loss of Gallagher, who was sold to Newcastle United for about £7,000, Airdrieonians managed to put up a goodly showing defeating Clydebank by the one goal scored in the match. Anderson kicked the goal and thus made a happy entrance into his duties as new centre for Aidrie.

Queen's Park gave a fine display at Falkirk and managed to get a draw. Barr scored for Queen's and Allan for Falkirk. The Rangers, though they were good enough to beat Hibernians by three goals to one, continued to be disappointing to their supporters. Fleming got two of the Rangers' points and Morton the other, while Bunn registered for the Hibernians. Partick Thistle also gave a poor display and could only draw with Aberdeen. Kinlock and Miller netted for the Thistles and Reid and McDermid for the Granite City team. Cowdenbeath surprised Morton and won their match by four goals to three. Leonard and Devlin picked off a couple of tallies each for Cowdenbeath, while Buchannan got two and Jessiman one for Morton. Cook scored the only goal in the Dundee-Kilmarnock affair for the first named club. Brown's brace of goals won the match for Raith Rovers, who were playing Motherwell. McFadyon kicked Motherwell's point.

Hearts were in their best form against St. Johnston, White, Mikler, Murray and Smith goaling for the Hearts. Black and Kirkwood contributed St. Johnstone's minority score. Hamilton Academicals, by scoring three goals to Dundee United's one, secured a handy win. Williamson found the net twice and Miller once for the victors and Campbell scored for Dundee United.

O.H.A. REFEREES DISCUSS RULES

Uniformity Desired in Interpretation on Body-Checking and Officials.

REFEREE IS BOSS.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—The conference of O.H.A. referees at the Prince George Hotel was well attended and judging from the discussions that took place much benefit should follow from the gathering. In the past referees have known the rules but have given different interpretations. The result has been that a referee will go into a town one week and disallow a certain thing, and a few days later another official will come along and allow it. The result is that the players hardly know where they are at.

Larger Defence Area.

The outstanding faeture of the changes in the rules this year is that the offside area for the defending team is forty feet from the end of the rink instead of twenty feet as last season. In that area any player on the defending side can bodycheck but outside of that area no bodying is allowed. Forward passes made in that area must be completed in there also or they are illegal. Bodychecking is defined as using the hip or side of the body when standing still or skating slow. Coming fast at a man and using the body is of course charging and is against the rules. In that forty-foot area the defending side may kick the puck, which is an important point and one the fans should remember.

Must Be All In.

Another thing that will interest the fans is that it was decided that a goal is scored when the puck has wholly passed over the black line between the goal posts. Some people had the idea that if the puck was just partly over the black line it was a goal.

The goaler, of course, can throw the puck anywhere behind the goal this season, which means even into the corner. However, he must not hold it for any length of time.

Crowding Allowed.

Body checking into the board, even in the 40-foot area, is not permitted; but "crowding" a man into the boards at any part is allowed, so long as that "crowding" doesn't get too near a body-check. In other words a man must be given an opportunity to check a puck-carrier on the boards, and often a player will skate alongside a man and get him in close to the boards so he cannot carry the puck. That is permitted, as said before, so long as it does not develop into roughness and remains only as checking.

Proper Facilities.

Many other points were brought out, but those mentioned were the main ones. It was brought out at the meeting though, that while numerous innovations such as red lights, proper dressing rooms for the teams as well as the referee, and proper accommodation for the players and timekeepers are all right in the bigger rinks, the smaller and older ones are not so up-to-date. However, the O.H.A. will instruct all clubs to do everything possible to provide the referee with a separate room to dress, and to see also that the time-keepers' and players' boxes at the sides of the rink are not so crowded that changing of players is interfered with.

And what the O.H.A. officials impressed most of all upon the referees was that they are in absolute control, and that in any decision they made the O.H.A. would back them to the limit.

BERLENBACH DREW $54,136 AS WINNER

Jack Delaney's Share Was $18,045 of $144,365 Gate.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press).—Receipts of the light-heavyweight championship battle between Paul Berlenback of Astoria, N.Y. and Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., in Madison Square Garden were announced at $144,365.

Of this amount, Berlenbach, who successfully defended his title in the fierce fifteen round encounter during which both men were floored, drew approximately $54,136, or 37½ per cent. Delaney's purse, 12 1-2 per cent amounted to slightly more than $18,045.

In spite of the fact that the challenger maintained he had outpointed Berlenbach and should have received the decision of the judges, he shook hands cordially with the champion when they appeared at the offices of Promoter Tex Rickard. Delaney's request for a return match brought from Berlenbach the response that "I will be glad to accommodate you."

RIDERS OF FRANCE FIRST AT CHICAGO

Belgians Second in Team Jumping—Canada Fourth.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press.)—While the Royal Canadian Dragoons entry "Bucephalus" finished second, the French team won the international team jumping trophy Saturday night in the closing performance of the first annual horse show here.

Points gained early in the week clinched the championship for the French riders, who finished behind Belgium in the evening's trials both Friday night and Saturday. Canada finished fourth.

The Belgian army riders displayed remarkable form toward the end and nosed out the United States' team for second place. Scores for the week, which count as demerit marks, were:

France—41.
Belgium—58.
America—66.
Canada—76.

Capt. Auguste de Lassardierre, sixth dragoons, Vicennes; Lieut. Xavier Bizard, 7th Hussars, Angers, and Lieut. Pierre Clave, 23rd Dragoons, Meaux, composed the French team.

"Carnation," Loula Long Combs entry from Lee Summit, Mo., won the Hackney pony championship. Another horse of Mrs. Combs was awarded the reserve ribbon. The three-gaited championship was awarded to Nancy Higland, the entry of Miss Maude Fawn Banks of Los Angeles.

Otto W. Lehman, Chicago, captured the heavy harness championship with "Field Marshall," "Princess May" from the same stable received the reserve award.

CANADIENS ARE NOW AT BOTTOM

Fight in Last Place Resulted in Shut-out Win For St. Pats.

SCORE WAS 4-0.

TORONTO, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press)—St. Patrick's downed Canadiens by four goals to nothing on Saturday, and incidentally scored their first shut out in two seasons. The locals were always the better team but at that they didn't have to show very much to be superior to last year's champions.

One of the outstanding features of the game was the poor exhibition given by the visitors, who, outside of their uniforms and the presence of Morenz, Joliat, Boucher, Mantha and Coutu on the ice, bore little resemblance to the team that represented the club in the Stanley Cup series last March.

BLACK PRINCE SAID TO HAUNT HOUSE

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Black Prince of the House of Plantagenet, whose romantic life made him the most chivalrous figure of a chivalrous age, is said to haunt Hall Place, where once he wooed Joan, the fair maid of Kent.

Clad in his conventional black armor, the prince has appeared several times in late years, according to Lady Limerick and others now residing in the fourteenth century mansion. The noble lady believes the prince is giivng warning of impending danger to England.

"The last time I saw the ghost," she said, "it was standing by the fireplace in the morning room, and when I entered with a friend, it glided away through the window into the garden. On two occasions, the ghost appeared at dusk.

"Sometimes there have been sounds of music, as if very sweet old fashioned instruments were being played."

Lady Limerick has resided in the mansion many years and she said the prince had been such a frequent visitor the servants had become accustomed to him. His body is believed to have rested here a night when it was being taken to Canterbury for burial.

INSIDE GOLF.

Maker of 61 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

By CHESTER HORTON

Inside Golf—C ....

Often when you take the ball from bad rough with a wood club you sense that you hit it solidly, yet the ball stars well, then either hooks or slices badly or nosedives directly to the ground and runs like a rabbit. The reason it is always dangerous to attempt such shots with woods is not so much that the grass may interfere with the clubhead, but that the clubhead, squeezing the grass between the wood and the ball, imparts so much moisture to the ball that an effect results which parallels the action of the "spit ball" in baseball exactly. The air pressure acting against this moisture, which makes the ball lopsided, causes the freakish action—and the harder and cleaner you hit the ball under such circumstances the more freakish is its flight likely to be.

AT THE WATER ST ALLEYS

The Boys are commencing to find their batting eyes and the result is that the pins are falling thick and fast and some real scores are being turned in. Mr. Tom Pratt turned in a single of 309 in the Lawn Bowlers' League, Friday night and on Saturday, Art Lemon knocked them down for 332 in a single game. Friday night, after the Mercantile League turned in three victories for the Bell Telephone, Dick Lush, Steve Elliott and Percy Gray, of the Bell Telephone team stepped out to show the boys their real stuff. The result was a total of 709 for Elliott, 706 for Gray and 613 for Lush. Included in these Gray had a single of 300, while Elliott's high game was 328. Just about here Harold Freeman decided to take a hand in the proceedings and he produced singles of 301, 329 and 181, for a total of 811. This will take some beating. After the holiday season the ten pin league expects to get down to action. Al. Sharpe, the popular gents furnisher, is giving the boys a shield to shoot at and the competitions will probably be as keen as usual.

Y. Seniors—

Dorothy Graham, forward, 12 baskets; Gertrude Gimblett, forward, 12 baskets; Eva Outram, centre; Nellie Frances, side centre; Hazel Jackson, defence; Verda Graham, defence.

The Trojans were one player short, but played a plucky game, however. The Normals' good combination was too much for them.

The officials were: Miss Margaret McIntosh, referee and Mr. W. Perks, timekeeper.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

THE ORACLE

> This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin. —Whittier.

> Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

Do you believe in the scientific determination of destiny?

The Examiner has secured the services of a local expert in the science of drawing from a few basic facts a great amount of information that will be helpful and interesting to you. This gentleman, who for obvious reasons desires to remain anonymous under the pen-name "The Oracle", has made a deep study of the science. It is a fascinating study, founded on facts that no one can dispute. It is one of the oldest of the sciences, revived through much reading and application to ancient tables and writings.

And the knowledge of the ages is offered to Examiner readers free of all cost.

All You Must Do

is fill in the attached form and mail it to "The Oracle", The Examiner Office, 419 George street, Peterborough. Initials only will be used in The Examiner. If you desire a more complete reading, enclose a stamped envelope.

Please note that full information can be based only on the complete particulars. Here is what is offered:

When full particulars are given:

The significance behind your name; paths to follow to secure success; how you must act to gain happiness; whether the date named is an auspicious one on which to take an important step; your particular color; where to apply your efforts and where you will best succeed.

Please Remember

that the full name and full date of birth must be given, such as: "John Robert Doe, 12 March, 1899." In seeking advice on a particular day, state the date, month, and year.

And Take Warning

that "The Oracle" will not sugar-coat his pills. If you desire only pleasant things brought to your attention, do not send your inquiries to him. If there is a warning to be issued, "The Oracle" will give it; if there is a bad trait to be corrected, "The Oracle" will warn you of it.

No full names will be printed in The Examiner, only initials or pen-names as given being used. And any information given to "The Oracle" will be kept confidentially. Replies will appear as soon as possible. There have been over 200 requests this week and they are being answered in order as they came.

AN EXTENDED SERVICE

The Oracle has had so many requests to give the day of the week on which persons were born that he has added this to every reading. Many people know the date, but not the day, of their birth.

A Challenge.

N. D. G.—It is not my intention, or the desire of The Examiner, to enter into a discussion of my methods. Carping scientific critics such as you may object to the word "science" as applied to my system, but it is through ignorance of the knowledge required and the processes followed. Did you ever hear of Pythagoras, the Greek philosopher, who lived about 400 B.C.? Or of Dr. J. G. Spurzheim and Nelson Sizer of our own age?

Mere mortal cannot claim to be infallible, but my readings are correct in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, when correct basic particulars are given. To demonstrate to you the truth of this I will give you a more complete reading than usual. If it is wrong in any particular you may take this reading to the City Editor of The Examiner, satisfy him that the reading is inaccurate, and I will pay one hundred dollars to the charity you name. Your failure to do this before Wednesday will be public acknowledgement that the reading is exact.

Yours are heavy physical characteristics, indicating creative power and tenacity, and you are apt to be pugnacious, coarse, and material. You are simply fair in organic mental quality, and more given to labor than to study; plain in your tastes; practical in your views; not at all poetical or sentimental. You should study to discipline the intellect as well as purify the passions, and rely more on culture and a right physiological life. You have a fair degree of perception of analogies, but can only perceive and appreciate striking illustrations. You are deficient in discerning first principles. You have a good share of sympathy and kindness, desiring to make others happy, and are very pleasing and agreeable in company, but inclined to be frothy. You are deficient in credence, and base your faith upon realities, thus being beset by many doubts. You are cheerful, as a rule, but not rash or speculative. You are self-satisfied, and inclined to be haughty and imperious. You possess more love for sweet sounds than power to produce them. You have a good flow of language, but your vocabulary is limited to words in everyday usage. Your colors are grey and dark blue, and your stone lapis lazuli.

I. V. J.—Your characteristics are change and uncertainty, despite physical and mental force well above average. With one or two exceptions, you have taken the affairs of life lightly, but have lately felt the need of settling down with a definite object in mind. You do not take readily to new enterprises, though active and seeking to do something. You may be a religionist. You are too easily persuaded by others, and must learn to say a decided "no" when your own good judgment and intuition warn you. Make your plans wisely, stick to them, and carry them out. Your colors are steel and brick. On the day you name do not engage in strenuous work, make no important purchases, embark on no journey. You were born on a Friday—not Wednesday, as you state.

Neber.—You are highly individual, neither seeking nor appreciating the mixing of others in your private business. Yet you are always willing to help others, and just a little inclined to mix in their business. You have characteristics that show you might succeed in a business career. You are personally attractive and are sought socially, but must guard against wavering and indecision. You are governed by a high order of moral principle and have great indignation against those that cause others to be innocent victims of their wrong-doing. You have a good degree of self-respect and independence, yet are not proud. Your colors are all shades of pink. Do not engage in any important business transaction on the day you mention, but you might conduct private affairs with success. You were born on a Wednesday.

X. Y. Z.—You will gain material success early in life, and your financial success will be assured through hard work. Don't give way to occasional tiredness of your job. Stay with it, and you will come out on top. You are quite satisfied with yourself, and have sufficient poise, but you will not gain much glory or renown. You have a vivid anticipation of future events, and are inclined to look on the bright side of things, overlooking obstacles and evils. You are exceptionally open minded, being ready to be convinced by a superior argument than your own. Your characteristics are not favorable to new enterprises. Your colors are steel and purple. You were born on a Sunday.

A. G.—You are lacking in organic quality and better adapted to labor than to study, as your mental reflections are sluggish and weak. Devote time to culture and avoid vulgar companions. You are lacking in originality and should not enter a business where responsibility would be placed on your shoulders. Try to cultivate a taste for reading and writing, and do away with your tendency to fall asleep over sermons, lectures and books. Your colors are brown and grey. You were born on a Tuesday.

Red (J. A. W.)—You are inclined to be reserved in your manner and retiring in your disposition, and if continued your introspection may lead to worship of the mystic. This in excess is not a good indication, and you should endeavour to overcome it. You have mental powers capable of developing superior practical talent. You are rather impressible and sympathetic in thought, but not liable to extremes of feeling and emotion. Do not read morbid books that clog the mentality. And do not fuss over your health. Take reasonable exercise regularly, and eat plain wholesome food. Your colors are canary and shades of tan and buff. If you cannot gain your point on the day you name without argument, sidestep it. Undertake nothing new in social relations that day. You were born on Wednesday.

W. H. W.—You have not developed poise or capability to play a lone hand in business, but should carefully consult others and unite with them. You will have great influence over others, and may be a leader, but must work towards that end. You have an even temper, are pleasing and acceptable and genial in your manners. But when angry you use rather sharp expressions, which you regret afterwards. You may generally follow your first impressions of the motives and intentions of others you come in contact with, but before acting in any important matter consider well all issues, as you may be occasionally mistaken. Be yourself. Develop manly poise and initiative. Don't get into a rut. You were born on a Thursday.

Anne.—You will give hearty help in worthy causes, but are especially helpful to those whom you love. You may have musical ability, helped by an excellent perception of time, and this should be cultivated. You have social and personal attraction and have made conquests in other years that are pleasant memories to you now. You are inclined to vacillate, and should cultivate concentration and staying with a job till it is done. You are changeable in your moods, but mostly pleasant and cheerful. You should take better care of your health, and avoid tiring yourself. Your color is pink. You were born on a Wednesday.

Tarry.—You will not be successful in business, and have no aptitude for financial affairs, but you may be successful in engineering. You must start at the bottom, learning by practical experience, because fundamentals do not impress themselves readily on your mentality by theoretical methods. You are a staunch friend and an ardent lover, but not constant in affairs of the heart. Do not play fast and loose with girls. Read good biographies and pattern yourself after men who have succeeded. Your colors are brown and brick. You were born on a Sunday.

Grex (M. O'B.)—Yours are curious characteristics, indicating change and uncertainty coupled with mental power above the ordinary. It is as though for a long time you were undecided in your life, then allowed your mentality to triumph, and have of late years been ambitious, successful, and contented. You have decided charm of manner and are popular in social life, but must guard against jealousy in your associates. You have a high regard for the rights and privileges of others; great integrity; and ability to meet trouble without flinching. Your colors are red and brown. You were born on a Wednesday; not Friday as stated, if you have given the date correctly.

Johnny.—Yours has been a life of service for others, and you have helped many on their way through little and big kindnesses that were mostly their own reward. You have a musical soul, but better than that you have a soul in tune with the infinite, prompting you to self-sacrifice and service. You are logical—though not through study or method—and daring in your thoughts, recognising no limitations of conventional teaching. Despite all this, you have a fair regard for your own rights, and do not like to see them trampled on. You are a practical observer of men and things, drawing accurate deductions from trivial incidents. With a more general and wider education you would excel in work requiring discriminating and executive ability. Your color is flame. The day you name would not be satisfactory for entering new business enterprises, but would be a good day for a journey. You were born on a Tuesday.

P.I.P.—You will find material success in life and with your depth of charm you should be socially sought, too. You have not yet learned the full value of hard work as the means to attainment, but are beginning to realize it. Cultivate constancy and depth of character. You will not achieve your highest success or greatest happiness unless you gain absolute self-control. Develop your ideas and make them into the great realities. Do not worry about imagined slights; dodge no issues. Mutual confidences with others will clear up many doubts. Worry and anger mar beauty and charm quicker than old age does. Your color is pink in any shade. On the day you name you should not put off anything you had decided upon. Take any opportunity that offers.

Nipper.—You are of a happy disposition and get on well with your chums, but are likely to try to boss them around. You are loving and kindly and with study and application have a great future before you. You are not old enough yet to have developed traits that give more definite indications. The day you mention will be a happy one for you.

Dimples.—Yours are strong indications showing influences of service, art, and mentality. You are a good painter, having knowledge of the use of colors and originality and patience in their mixing and application. You are fond of competition and are an apt pupil in whatever you take up. You have great personal attraction, and require some developing agent. You like to do what you wish to do, and are intolerant of other routine. You have musical ability, but not highly developed. Avoid anything "catty" or mean, and apply the golden rule in all your affairs. Your colors are all shades of pink. You were born on a Thursday.

Marie.—You are lofty minded, self-confident, and independent, with a desire to lead rather than follow. With culture and mentality well developed, you would succeed in a career, but you are well-equipped for marriage and are intended to make a happy home. You have the stamina and ability to attain whatever you set your mind on, but should take better care of your health. Mix with others in social functions and assert yourself, taking your natural place at the head of affairs. Your colors are opal or canary. You may take chances on the day you mention with greater chances of success than failure. Follow your intuition, usually on first impressions. You were born on a Friday.

W. J. A.—Your reading shows high individuality, but restrained as though you had for many years pushed your efforts in a wrong direction. Men who have become empire builders and amassed great fortunes started with the same features that mark your reading. But inherent grace must be developed by ability and properly directed effort. Your birth date characteristics are mentality and attainment. You have had ideas, but through negligence or force of circumstances did not push them to the accomplishment that was possible. There is still time. Branch out in the field that interests you; put into the struggle all that reserve force of which you are capable, and will to win. The day you name is favorable for some purposes, but not for others. It would be a bad day to enter into a financial engagement, but good for a short journey. Beware the green of distant fields; make certain distance has not colorblinded you. Develop optimism, but realize that hard work is necessary to success.

Tess.—You are shy in personal contacts, but you have ability to meet others on equal footing. You are inclined toward the occult, although this is only a developing trait and may not be marked yet. You love peace, and seek to avoid quarrels. You would rather take censure yourself when undeserved than pass it on to the right person. You are a real "home body," and you will make a happy wife. In fact your characteristics are of repose and comfort. You are not acute in business matters, and may even be slipshod. Your kindness of heart leads you to assume the burdens of others. You enjoy arranging surprises and maybe parties for your friends, but you pay too much attention to fashionably-dressed, showy, people, and must learn that real friendships are not formed in that way. Look beneath the surface. You would be a loyal friend so long as permitted to have your own way. You do not take sensible physical exercise, and you are thus making an excellent breeding ground for disease. The day you mention would be a good one on which to marry, or to go on a holiday, but certainly not one for business change or investment. Your colors are orange, grey, and magenta.

E. F. J.—You should associate yourself carefully with others in most enterprises you undertake, realizing that in union there is strength. Don't play lone hands, and do not try to control the affairs of others. This is all the more important when viewed in the light of your birth date indications—self-satisfaction and a tendency in your personal affairs to let well-enough alone. Your combination of features is not favorable to new enterprises, and these should not be hastily entered into. You must not look for much of glory or renown in spectacular feats; you vibrate to the traits of mysticism and religion. Your colors are steel, purple, and brick.

On December 12, 1925, about which you enquire, you should take advantage of every new opportunity—no matter how slight. It is a day for original thought and expression.

The ORACLE does not set up as a matrimonial advisor, and does not in general cases give advice along that line. But in your case there is so definite a warning against playing lone wolf that I am constrained to warn you to care. A girl about two years older than yourself, but with a birthday falling on November 13, 14 or 15, would be ideal. Such a girl would be intimately concerned in one she loved, and would be in every way complementary to your characteristics.

In any event I would urge you to take someone into your confidence on every important project.

POUND STERLING HIGH ON BOURSE

Quoted at 134.1 Francs Before Official Opening To-day.

DOLLAR AT 27.63.

PARIS, Dec. 14. — (Canadian Press).—Pound sterling reached a high record before the official Bourse opening to-day at 134.10 francs.

The dollar was quoted at 27.63 francs. This, however, was not a record, as the mark of 28.13 francs was established in March, 1924.

JUDGMENT FOR $900.

Automobile Collision Case Decided in Favor of Plaintiff.

In the County Court this morning His Honour Judge Huycke gave judgment in the case of John Mitchell of Cavan against William E. Bardeau, formerly of Bobcaygeon, but now living in Toronto, for $900.00 damages and costs on the Supreme Court scale. The action was tried on the County court sitting last Tuesday, and the evidence was very contradictory.

However, His Honor Judge Huycke found as a fact that Bardeau on the night of the 11th of July collided with Mitchell and caused him personal injuries of a serious character, and awarded him $900.00 damages.

Gordon & O'Brien appeared for John Mitchell, and German & Lennox were the solicitors for Mr. Bardeau.

DETECTIVE CHIEF COMMITS SUICIDE

Had Been Suspended For Protecting Places of Vice in Geneva.

GENEVA, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—A sensational sequel to the campaign in Geneva to close licensed houses of vice, which followed representations by the authorities of the League of Nations, occurred when Antoine Vettinier, chief of detectives, committed suicide by shooting himself.

Geneva newspapers said that Vettinier had been suspended from his duties pending an investigation of charges that he was protecting unlicensed centres of vice. A group of Geneva citizens has been contending that the closing of the licensed houses has increased the secret places of vice.

NATIONS ACCEPT LEAGUE VERDICT

Bulgaria Will Receive Large Sum From Greece For Reparations.

DAMAGE $250,000.

GENEVA, Dec. 14. — (United Press).—The League of Nations Council to-day adopted the Rumbolt Commission report, ordering Greece to pay Bulgaria about a quarter of a million dollars material, moral and actual damages as a result of the recent Greco-Bulgar border hostilities.

Thereupon the Foreign Minister, Kaloff, accepted the Council's verdict on behalf of his nation, while the Greek Foreign Minister Rentis merely thanked the Council.

Rentis' "thanks" for the verdict against his nation are presumably to be taken as a Greek accentance of the findings, since an Athens despatch to-day declared that the Greek Government had instructed him to accept unconditionally.

Theatre

AT THE CAPITOL

BARTHELMESS IN APPEALING ROLE.

Star is Cast as Flower Vendor in "The Beautiful City."

There is an interesting story connected with the making of "The Beautiful City," Richard Barthelmess's latest production for First National, which is the current feature at the Capitol Theatre.

"The Beautiful City" was written especially for Barthelmess some two years ago by Edmund Goulding, who has since become a highly successful screen director. Barthelmess was tremendously impressed with this story of a young Italian boy in that melting pot of the metropolis, the East Side of New York. He felt that the appealing role of the young vendor of flowers offered unusual histrionic opportunities and that there was a genuine moral in the melodramatic story, that happiness and success come only when Tony is able to appreciate the inner beauty of the city. At the same time, the screen stories, felt that "The Beautiful City," as it then existed, lacked a certain big punch. So he laid the story aside, waiting for the right idea.

So "The Beautiful City" was readjusted to this idea, with the result that the big scene of the story takes place in a Chinese theatre on New York's East Side. Here is staged the most thrilling fight ever filmed, between Tony (Mr. Barthelmess) and Nick di Silva, a gangster (otherwise William Powell). This sensational scene has a tremendous kick, according to the New York critics.

AT THE REGENT

BELL'S LATEST SUPERB CINEMA.

"Pretty Ladies" Engrossing Film of Follies' Life; Partly in Colors.

Without doubt the best film of director Monta Bell's short but already famous career is "Pretty Ladies," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production now being shown at the Regent Theatre for three days.

It contains practically every element which goes to make up a good picture. There is plenty of human interest and there is plenty of color and there are a lot of novelty and technicolor scenes which add to the beauty of the production.

ZaSu Pitts, as Maggie Keenan, has a role which suits her to a "T." It's a part registering infinite pathos, comedy and tenderness and without doubt becomes the best character woman of the screen.

Ann Pennington, musical comedy star, is a member of the cast, as are Norma Shearer and Conrad Nagel, stars in their own right. The remainder of the big supporting cast makes up an imposing array of stage and screen talent.

The picture is based on a Cosmopolitan Magazine story entitled "Hearts," written by Adela Rogers St. Johns.

"The slick guy"

NEARLY every one of us has seen the checkered-suit person with the velvet tongue. How smoothly he once told of the merits of this product or that—and raked in perfectly good coin for purchases that were often worthless.

The "slick guy" is seldom seen today. When the wise person goes to buy, he knows what is good in value and fair in price.

Simply by glancing over the advertisements in your paper, you can see where to go for the best buys. You can compare values and check up prices without even stirring from your easy chair. You know in advance just what you are going to get and how much it will cost. And you can have the satisfaction that comes from knowing your money is wisely and safely spent.

Nowadays, no one need be at the mercy of the "slick guy." There are still a few people who fail to read the advertisements—and "take a chance." Don't be one of them.

Advertised products are safe buys. They have made good before they are announced

TORONTO, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Diamond rings of the total value of $10,000 were stolen from the showroom of Ellis Bros., in the downtown section of the city, on Saturday night, it became known today, the thieves making their escape while customers filled the store.

NOVEL SALES ROOM.

Odd But Pleasing Arrangement at Sale Held By St. James' Girls.

A very dainty small sale was held in Taylor's store on George street, on Saturday afternoon and evening, in charge of the girls of the XL Mission Circle of St. James' church. The sale as arranged was decidedly different and had a very novel treatment. Little cubicles arranged in the prettiest manner with pink and white paper fancies, represented the different months of a year, and contained some exquisite things in dainty fancy work and home-made candy. A "pick my pocket for ten cents" lady took the place of the ordinary fish pond, and had an excellen. patronage. The ladies in charge of the pretty things included Mrs. D. Foster, Mrs. H. Freeman, Mrs. Bonney, Mrs. Kitney, Mrs. G. Wagar, the Misses Edith Wright, Thelma Meredith, May Ritchie, Jean Hamilton, Zetta Wood, Mary Wood, Aileen Rose and Constance Wagar.

The report of the Faithful Workers' Mission Band was given by the president, Miss Daisy Davidson, who reported the sum of $31.52 collected by the Band for mission funds.

An interesting address was a feature of the meeting, delivered by Mrs. D. L. McKerroll of Toronto, president of the Council Executive of the Dominion. Mrs. McKerroll spoke of the changed conditions, ganization, numbering 150,000 or more workers, which was now functioning throughout the Dominion. She outlined the proposed programme of the society both for overseas and national missions, as the foreign and home work is now designated. At present work overseas is being carried on in Japan and Northern India and at home among the Indians, the Chinese and in the North-west. A school home has recently been built at New Liskeard, and two new hospitals opened, the latest at South Porcupine, while still further extensions are projected for the future.

Around The City.

Last night at a late hour, a number of youths, after partaking of the comforts and conveniences which the Home Lunch afforde, proceeded to act in the manner of rowdies to the detriment of the appearance of the cafe. Among other things the gold fish pool which is the particular attraction of the place, was despoiled to a certain extent. The police were summoned to the scene but before they arrived the gang had cleared out. Chief Newhall said, however, that he knew the names of all implicated and would watch the restaurants carefully in the future so that there might be no repetition of the offence.

The fire brigade received a call at 1.15 a.m. this morning to 1 King George street. The fire started in an attic near the chimney, but the firemen succeeded in saving the remainder of the house. A section of the ceiling was burnt out and three joists badly scorched.

A chimney fire at 216 Perry street gave the firemen a trip at 9.00 o'clock this morning. There was no damage.

The winning tickets at the draw held in connection with the showing of "Havoc" at the Regent Theatre under the auspices of the G.W.V.A., were 1429 and 1357. Holders of these tickets may obtain their prizes by calling at the G.W.V.A. office on Murray street.

Cracksmen Frightened By Sound Of Explosion

TORONTO, Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press.) — Cracksmen made an unsuccessful attempt to loot the safe in the Lawlor Bread Company, Toronto, early Sunday morning, after partly wrecking the safe with a charge of dynamite and blowing it practically wide open. The robbers fled without touching any of the contents, apparently having been frightened by the noise the explosion had produced.

There was about $2,300 in the safe, intact when officials of the company arrived on the scene this morning.

The police believe the attempt was the work of amateurs. Nothing had been used to deaden the sound of the explosion.

C.G.I.T. HELD SALE.

St. Andrew's Group Held Very Pretty Sale in Sunday School.

The Canadian Girls in Training of St. Andrew's Church held an exceptionally pretty small sale in the auditorium of the Sunday School building on Saturday afternoon, with service of afternoon tea and high tea, both very well attended. The hall was decorated very daintily with quantities of cherry blossoms, and rose-pink paper streamers on the various little booths, which were supervised by members of the society. Mrs. J. A. McKone looked after high tea arrangements. An outstanding feature of the sale was the lovely exhibit of Chinese things, with bits of beautiful cloisonne enamel, exquisite embroideries and tiny bits of Oriental handicraft. Miss J. Anderson and Helen Wilson were in charge of this sale, candy and ice cream were sold by Jane McDonald and Katherine Hogdens, and the doll counter was in charge of Francas Jennings and Evelyn Armstrong. Novelties and miscellaneous smallwares were sold by Dorothy and Barbara Foster; Helen Ross and Arleigh McKone had the tea tables, and the fish pond was supervised by Jean McKone, Alison Gordon, Shirley Deyell and Helen Clark. At all the booths were numbers of energetic assistants.

LEAGUE ASKS HELP TO CRUSH SLAVERY

Abolition of All Forms of Forced Labor is Sought.

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

GENEVA, Dec. 14 — (United Press).—Sir Eric Drummond, general secretary of the League of Nations has communicated to all the nations of the world the League's draft treaty for the abolition of all forms of human slavery and enforced labor.

Owing to the purely humanitarian character of the undertaking the treaty has been sent not only to all members of the League but to non-members as well consisting of the Egypt, Soudan, Equador, Mexico, Egypt, Sondan, Equador, Mexico, Turkey and Afghanistan.

As it is not expected that the treaty will be officially launched before the next Assembly of the League in September 1926, the League, in order to inaugurate as quickly as possible its world wide effort for the abolition of slavery, has accompanied the text with the request that the various nations begin at once the inauguration of the measures and legislation which are provided for in the treaty, without awaiting for the latter's final adoption.

The different states are requested to comply at once with those articles which provide for reciprocal assistance between nations in the suppression of slave traffic.

All of the nations of the world have been asked to send in to the Secretariat any observations which they may have to make relative to the treaty and then to send to the next meeting of the Assembly in September, 1926 plenipotentiary delegates who will have authority to sign the treaty after any modifications have been made that may seem desirable as a result of the observations of the various governments.

The treaty as it now stands was drawn up by the last assembly as a result of the initiative of England. Lord Robert Cecil was the principal supporter of the project.

SOVIET MINISTER COOLLY RECEIVED

Records Show Voikoff, Envoy to Poland, Took Part in Czar's Murder.

BURNED BODIES

WARSAW, Dec. 14—Voikoff, Soviet minister to Warsaw, and his wife are having a hard time breaking into Warsaw's diplomatic society because of his alleged participation in the murder of the Roumanoffs.

At first, the Polish government was unwilling to accept Voikoff, but when the Soviet officials denied the minister's hands were bloody he was received.

The book of Judge Sokoloff, who investigated the murder, however, included the photograph of a document, alleged to have been signed by Voikoff, asking for gasoline to burn the bodies of the czaristic family. It became difficult for diplomatists and their wives to ignore this.

Many of the wives declined to meet Madame Voikoff and the matter became the subject of diplomatic representations. At least one Scandinavian government offered apologies to Moscow for the snubbing given Madame Voikoff by the wife of its minister.

BARRACKS SEIZED BY CONSTABLES OF ULSTER SPECIAL FORCE WHO DEMAND A DISBANDMENT BONUS

Force Was Dissolved in Keeping With New Boundary Agreement.

3,500 MEN INVOLVED.

Demand Bonus Ranging From 50 to 200 Pounds Before Being Disbanded.

BELFAST, December 15. (United Press and Canadian Press.) — In protest against their disbandment under the Ulster-Free State boundary pact, 3500 special constables today went on strike throughout Ulster. Five Belfast barracks were seized and their officers imprisoned while at Londonderry and Ballycastle ammunition depots were captured.

Members of the "special" constabulary to-day seized Prince's Dock barracks in Belfast, declaring that they would hold the building pending a satisfactory reply to their demands for compensation for their disbandment under the new Irish agreement. In Derry the "specials" placed armed guards over their stores and arms to prevent the authorities from removing them.

The Ulster authorities take a serious view of the situation but feel that a way will be found to settle the difficulty without resort to drastic action.

The special constables are demanding a disbandment bonus varying according to length of service, from fifty to two hundred pounds sterling. An ultimatum was sent to Premier Craig making this demand.

OLD MAN'S BODY FOUND IN HOUSE

Left Note Saying He Was William Prideheard, of Burgessville.

MISSING TWO WEEKS.

SARNIA, Dec. 15—(Canadian Press)).—"In case of accident I am William Pridehard of Burgessville, Ontario", was the terse message on a note found in an untenanted house about three miles outside of Port Huron on Sunday. The discovery of the body was made by prospective tenants who went to inspect the house. Coroner Falk was notified and his investigation indicated that the man who had apparently died of exhaustion was really William Pridehard, who had been reported missing from his home in Oxford County since December 1st. The remains were brought across the river and shipped to Burgessville. It was not determined how long he had been in the vacant house. He was 82 years of age.

Swelled Heads Are Worse Than Fat Heads; Clines

LONDON, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—"Socialists are fat in the elegant English of the Chancellor of the Exchequer," J. R. Clines, M.P., Lord Privy Seal and deputy leader in the House of Commons in the late Labor Government, declared in a speech at Roehampton last night.

"Much more harm is being done in the world by swelled heads than by fat heads," Clines added.

"When Winston Churchill talks of 'considered convictions,' he refers to something with which he has no acquaintance," the former Labor Minister continues. "He has been false, by turns, to every doctrine and to every party."

Ministerial Association Protests Opening Bathing Houses on Sunday

Decision of Mayor and Council To Keep Closed on Sundays is Commended in Moral Interests of People—Members Ask That Resolution Be Not Used For or Against the Measure—No Objection to Bathing.

At a largely attended meeting of the Peterborough Ministerial Association, held in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday, the matter of keeping the bathing houses closed on Sundays was carefully considered. The following resolution was passed without a dissenting vote:

"Resolved that the Peterborough Ministerial Association does not favor opening and maintaining the bathing houses, at the bathing beaches, on Sundays, by the city." There was no action taken in regard to Sunday bathing itself, and the above resolution should not be used, either for its support or condemnation, the Association says. During the discussion, the decision of the Mayor and Council, to keep the bathing houses closed on Sundays, was commended as in the moral interests of the people.

BEAVERBROOK CLAIMS DISCOVERY OF PREMIER STANLEY BALDWIN IN POLITICAL BOOK JUST ISSUED

Recommended Him To Bonar Law, Who Was Then in Office.

TELLS OF OWN PART.

Helped Lloyd George To Power—Tells of Ministers' Habits.

LONDON, December 15. — Canadian Press. — Lord Beaverbrook today publishes his widely advertised shilling booklet, "Politicians and the Press," in which he discusses political events at large with special reference to the part that he himself has play : therein.

In the book the author claims to have "discovered" Stanley Baldwin, the present premier, and to have given him his first chance by recommending him to Bonar Law, then Premier.

Bonar Law, according to Beaverbrook's booklet, wanted to resign the premiership rather than set his his hand to the settlement of Great Britain's debt to the United Staes.

How Beaverbrook helped Lloyd George to power and then fell foul of him, are duly recorded. Reference is made to Winston Churchill's liking for good food and Lord iBrkenhead's appreciation of good wine.

Girl's Marriage Annulled: Mother Refused Consent

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 15—(Canadian Press).—Because Eva Pervis was married at the age of nineteen without obtaining the consent of her mother, Dame Mary Gardner Pervis, a widow, the girl's marriage was yesterday annulled in the Supreme Court, by Mr. Justice Bruneau.

The plaintiff declared that her daughter was married in New York on May 25 last to Louis Fogel. The mother stated that she had always objected to Fogel keeping company with her daughter, and that she had sent her on a visit to New York with the express purpose of preventing the defendant from paying further attentions to the girl. Fogel followed the girl to New York, said the plaintiff, and persuaded her to marry him.

Brands Toronto Smug; A Whited Sepulchre And Moral Plague Spot

Wilson McDonald Writes New Poem on the Depravity of Rural Ontario and Holds Metropolis Up as Hypocritical and Pharisaical City.

FLAYS CANADIAN PUBLISHERS.

"Queen City" is Booed in West and Hissed in the East—Flaming Iambics Ridicule Deacons Who Pray on Sunday and Prey on Monday.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—Is Canada a land that lets its poets live as outcasts and starves them, if it does not crucify them? Mr. Wilson McDonald, whose volume "The Prairie Land" has run into five editions, is inclined to think that it is.

He suggested "Poet and Publisher" as the title of a great Canadian tragedy. If it were written in verse, it would have to be written not in blank but in blankety blank verse. Some publishers tended to be vultures who continually ate out the heart of a Canadian Prometheus. Copyright was slaughter right.

Mr. McDonald gave chapter and verse to show how he had been eviscerated. Modern poets were becoming troubadours because publishers who ought to be brokers between poets and their public were often barriers. The poet who read was the poet who had the best chance of being fed. A poet had little chance of getting either commercial or poetical justice from a publisher.

"I have had great success," said Mr. McDonald, "in reading my "Song of the Prairie Land" to Western audiences. I shall never forget the reception I received from the Rotarian Club in Saskatoon when I read them "The Mongrel." The West likes masculine poetry. I have found that eighty per cent of the sales of my verse are to men. A book-seller in Vancouver has told me that an old sea captain comes in regularly every year to buy my books as Christmas presents.

Smug Toronto.

The poet has publicly proclaimed that Toronto is smug, pharisaical, hypocritical, a whited sepulchre, a plague spot of moral leprosy.

"When we used the word "Toronto" on a western platform," said he, "it was loudly booed."

But the turpitude of the Toronto in which he was born was nothing

LEAGUE COUNCIL FIXES FRONTIER OF MOSUL ALONG BRUSSELS LINE

Son Accepted By Party Which Expelled Father

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 15.—Canadian Press. — Undeterred by a warning that he would follow an "independent" course in furtherance of the policies of his father, the Republican Senate to-day formally accepted Senator Robt. M. LaFollette into the Republican fold from which the elder LaFollette had been excluded.

Gives Most of Disputed Province to Mandate State of Irak.

COMMISSION REPORTS.

Further Tales of Cruelty By Turks Thought to Have Had Influence.

GENEVA, Dec. 15. (Canadian Press).—After an hour's secret session of the League of Nations Council to-day, a report was circulated that it had been unanimously decided to fix the provisional Brussels line as the definite frontier of Mosul, thus awarding the greater part of the disputed territory to the British mandate State of Irak.

There was no official confirmation of the report. However, it was accepted as a fact in some circles, where it was openly declared that the Council logically had been driven to it through the impossibility of handing over Mosul to Turkey in consequence of an additional report by General Laidoner, the League's investigating agent.

This report, issued to-day, presents a terrible picture of the massacres of Christians by the Turks. The report was prepared in Mosul by three assistants of Gen. Laidoner of Spanish, Italian and Esthonian nationality. The report charges that the massacres were committed by officers and soldiers of the sixty-second Turkish Infantry.

The report estimates that 34,000 Catholic Chaldeans have been deported from the Mosul-Turkish frontier. It accuses the Turks of violating and slaying Christian women. All Christians were deported from the village of Merga, north of the provisional line which was fixed at the Brussels conference, pending the definite demarkation of the frontier.

Five aged women who were unable to keep up with the marching columns are declared to have been buried alive under piles of stones and left to their fate.

According to Christians who escaped, those remaining in the Turkish concentration camp are not supplied with food by their captors and are forced to live on acorns.

At Jaijo alone, the report says, forty men were shot down in cold blood. During marches from other villages the deportees were given no food for ten days, and those falling by the wayside were immediately killed by soldiers, who used their bayonets and rifle butts.

TWO CONFESSED WIRE THIEVES SENT TO PRISON

Stole 4,500 Pounds of Copper From Construction Company.

SENTENCED AT HULL

Two Years Each in Quebec Prison—Have Police Records.

HULL, Que., Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—Jean Roy and Joseph Melanoon, who gave their addresses as Ste, Therese, Que., and who are alleged to be noted Montreal bandits, were sentenced Monday to two years in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, on each of wo charges of theft, by Judge Roland Miller in Police Court, the sentences to run concurrently.

The two men, who have aliases, and previous records, disclosed by their finger prints, pleaded guilty on Thursday to having stolen 4,500 pounds of heavy copper wire on November 25, and December 4 from the plant of the Fraser-Brace Construction Company at Templeton.

Part of the wire, which was being used in connection with the new paper mill of the International Paper Company was cut into lengths and smelted down.

They confessed their guilt of the two robberies, and their finger prints being taken, it was ascertained on Saturday that they have both bad records. On several previous occasions they have been convicted of copper wire thefts, in Montreal and vicinity, and also of house-breaking and other major offences. Quebec Provincial officer Legault, who came up from Montreal to look them over, believes also that they have been connected with recent hold-ups in that city.

SEAMEN SUING PREMIER BRUCE

Appeal Against Deportation From Australia Was Upheld.

ACTIVE IN STRIKE.

SYDNEY, Australia, December 15.—Canadian Press. — Tom Walsh and Jacob Johannesen, president and secretary of the Australiah Seamen's Union, whose appeal against the government's order of deportation was upheld last week by the High Court, have brought suits against the government and Premier Bruce for 20,000 pounds each.

Their wives also have filed suits, asking 5,000 pounds each for the "loss of their husband's services." Mrs. Walsh, formerly was Miss Adele Pankhurst, youngest daughter of Mrs Emmeline Pankhurst, the noted militant suffragist leader.

Walsh and Johannesen were arrested on November 20 on an order from the Deportation Board after they had been prominently associated with the recent unofficial strike of British seamen. They were released on December 11 when the High Court upheld their appeal.

FRENCH PREPARE NEW OFFENSIVE

Designed to Put Down Menace of Rebellious Druses.

TRIBE SURRENDERS.

BIERUT, Dec. 15. (United Press) —French forces are organizing an offensive in the Damascus district and to the north-east, designed to put down the menace of the rebellious Druse tribesmen.

The important Arab Moawia tribe has surrendered to the French who have imposed a fine of 5,000 gold pounds and 1,500 rifles.

GERMANY SHIPS BOOTLEG LIQUOR IN SHIPLOADS

Hundreds of Millions of Dollars' Worth Leaving German Ports.

FOR UNITED STATES,

German Rings Have Supplanted British Rum Runners in Trade.

BERLIN, December 15. Canadian Press. — Hundreds of millions of dollars worth of liquor, destined for the United States, has left German ports in the last few months, and more is on the way. Hamburg, Bremen and Emden have become the bootlegging capitals of the world and the British rum rings fade into comparative obscurity—those who have not transferred their field of operations to German free ports.

These facts have been established by a correspondent after an investigation in both official and bootlegging circles. Next week a 6000 ton freighter will leave Bremen with more than $1,000,000 worth of whiskey aboard, at least it is insured for $1,500,000 here, and its departure is a mere incident in the bootlegging drama.

EITHER BIRTH CONNTROL OR WAR IS THE ALTERNATIVE FOR JAPAN

Population is Growing Fast and Already Taxes Resources.

WAR UNTHINKABLE.

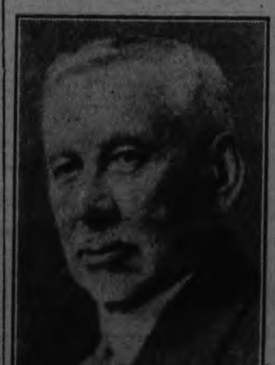
Could Not Beat the United States—People Can't Emigrate.

By Miles W. Vaughn
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

TOKIO, Dec. 15. — Japan must choose between birth control and war within a decade, Count Michimasa Soyejima, Japanese Liberal and Publicist told the United Press in an exclusive interview here today. War, the Count believed, was unthinkable, since he held that birth control was an immediate necessity. The Count pointed out that with a heavy birth increase—last year alone, 740,000 — the island would soon be swarming with a population which Japan's resources would neither feed nor clothe.

"All doors are closed to us for emigration," said the Count, who is the son of a former Foreign Minister and once sat in Parliament. "And our people do not like to leave the homeland even if they could emigrate. Our possessions can care for only a drop of the population increase."

"War is unthinkable. We do not want that. Any talk of conflict with the United States because of her action in barring our immigrants is sheer nonsense. To talk of such a war is like talking of a battle between a tiger and a shark. We would never be insane enough to attack America. We would be beaten and we know it. And we are sure that America will never attack us. The broad reaches of the Pacific are guarantees enough. "Hence with emigration barred, war unthinkable, and our population growing so fast we already have difficulty in feeding it, we must consider birth control immediately. We are forced to it."



B. F. ACKERMAN,
One of Peterborough's delegates to the Convention of Chambers of Commerce at Winnipeg. His report, prepared in conjunction with E. B. Fowler, appeared in yesterday's issue.

British Grain Importer Denies Soviet Fixed Market

LONDON, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Sir Herbert Robson, noted grain importer, says he thinks it is extremely improbable that there has been any "rigging" of the Winnipeg and Chicago wheat markets by Bolshevist agents by circulating reports earlier in the year that Russia would export large quantities of wheat, with a view of profiting by the fall in price as a result of such reports, as charged by London newspapers.

In Sir Herbert's opinion, however, it is quite clear that the Russians have been suiting their own ends by grossly over estimating their own crop and transport facilities.

WOMAN AND TWO MEN SENTENCED TO SEVEN YEARS

One of the Gang Fired at Policeman—All Held Equally Guilty.

WOMAN COLLAPSED

Had Confessed to Police, But Received No Concession From Court.

WOODSTOCK, Ont, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press)—Seven years each in the Portsmouth penitentiary was the sentence imposed on William Holder, Mrs. Elizaebth Winslow and Wilfred Carey, the Brantford trio who shot at Provincial Inspector Milligan when the latter attempted to arrest them on the provincial highway west of the city on the night of December 5, following an exciting automobile chase.

Carey admitted firing the shots at Milligan, but the magistrate held the three equally guilty. Mrs. Winslow, whose husband is said to be serving a term in a Michigan prison following a killing in Detroit, made a confession to the police implicating the two men, and the crown attorney made a plea for a lighter sentence in her case, but this was turned down by the magistrate. Holder is already under sentence of seven years for robbery under arms as the result of the holdup of A. W. Shaver, a local taxi driver, who was driving the bandits to Brantford following their escape from local police. When sentence was passed on the woman she collapsed and had to be helped from the court room by a detective. The men had long police records.

If at first you don't pick winners, don't try again.

THE WEATHER.

While zero has been reached this season as yet, it came within one degree of reaching that figure last night. The decidedly cold weather of last winter began about this date. The following were the co.. days of December last year:

Dec. 14 ..... 4 below
Dec. 15 ..... 4 below
Dec. 21 ..... 15 below
Dec. 22 ..... 4 below
Dec. 27th ..... 3 below
Dec. 28 ..... 12 below

January was also a very cold month, reaching a climax on the 28th when we had it 36 degrees below zero. This was the coldest day in Peterboro that we have had since 1896, when one morning the thermometer got down to 38 below. This is the lowest official figure in half a century. There are legends, however, of still colder dips. I have been told by old residents that 60 and 65 years ago, before the land was cleared as at present, the mercury in the thermometer was known to freeze, and burst the bulbs. Mercury does not freeze until 39 degrees below is reached and several more degrees are required before it will do any damage.—W. P.

"BRINGING UP FATHER" — Geo. McManus

At a Christmas Masquerade

By Marjorie Howe Dixon

Five o'clock found Ben at his evening job of milking old Star, his head pressed against her flank and a foaming pail between his knees. With the rhythm of the splashing milk Ben found his thought drifting. He thought of the evening coming. Margaret had been a little excited about it. He hoped she wouldn't feel disappointed. So many times she had been disappointed. He was the quiet type and so was she and so often they had seemed to sit back in the corners, and there had to depend on each other for conversation. He hoped tonight would be different for her sake.

He picked up the three-legged stool the same time he rose from his work. He hung the pail of milk high on a peg away from the cat and prepared the shed for the long winter night. This done he next inspected the boiler room for his small green-house where his sweet peas were being picked. He brought his milk through the verdent perfumed aisle, observing the ventilation, temperature within and without, and the cases of flowers ready for the early morning train. Then on he went through the connecting sheds to the kitchen where its light revealed him. Ben was this side of thirty-five, the kind of an unassuming individual one would expect to be a supreme gardener. He was quite bald save for a fringe just above his ears. He was slender and gave the appearance of having worn the same clothes year in and year out.

Getting Ready for Supper.

Margaret was busy with supper. She wasn't much to look at either. She, too, was slender, flat chested, her black hair unmanageable, her eyes not exactly straight, but with all one felt instantly her kindly attitude. All the neighbors' children called her Auntie Margaret. She wore a faded blue wool dress, white apron and a grey sweater.

Not much romance had touched their lives during the ten years of marriage. There had been so much plain hard work. And tonight they sat down to supper much the same as they had day after day.

But it wasn't quite the same. Both felt a thrill tonight of which they did not speak. But Margaret could follow Ben's thought, when he asked if she had finished her dress. Yes, it was all ready to put on.

A neighbor had invited them to a Masquerade. And also had offered them costumes which they were glad to accept. Margaret had needed to adjust the dress a little, when she tried it on. And the reflection in the glass had been,—well, so different,—so, well, pretty. Ben liked to have her look pretty, but lately she had been too tired to care much about her looks.

Wears a Simple Outfit.

Ben's outfit was quite simple and hadn't needed much adjustment. She helped him tie a wide gay red sash about his waist and slip a velvet sleeveless jacket over his white blouse. A red scarf over his head, tied at the back, and heavy gold circles for ear rings finished his costume. She stood back and looked at him and then gave him a little hug, and went away smiling. Why, Ben actually looked dashing! Dear quiet Ben, but he did look really,—like a movie hero, almost.

Her dress was easy to manage with a series of little snaps down the front. She slipped into it with a little shiver of pleasure. She had had so few party dresses. And this one seemed designed to hide her angularity, and provide her with an elusive grace. The skirt hung in billows of black net, and the bodice glistened with sequins of black. A very high comb stood in her hair. Over it hung a lace mantilla draped over her arms hiding sharp elbows and even hiding lines about her neck. She thrilled again at the reflection in the glass. Ben told her she looked very nice, which was his highest praise, and that he had called a cab.

Worries About Margaret.

On the way over Ben wondered again about the sort of evening they would have. Margaret surely did look fine,—he hated to have her disappointed about a party. Maybe this one would be different.

A strange figure in a domino admitted them to the house and pointed the way upstairs. Both had slipped on their masks. In the ladies' room Margaret found other women, in all sorts of outfits, silently exchanging services, pointing out the powder puff, and mirror. No word was spoken for voices were too well known.

She joined Ben and went down to the long living room. They stood a bit uncertainly there for a moment. Ben always dreaded this part. Then the music started with a bang. A chubby man slid across the floor to Margaret. He wore a tight cutaway coat over impossible baggy white trousers, and a high hat that was much too small.

"I know you," he cried. "Come and dance."

Time to Unmask.

"Oh, no, you don't," she said as they whirled away. Her neighbor had mentioned that she had worn this dress before to a party given by this group. She looked back for Ben. He was dancing with a merry looking person in a tight old-fashioned red dress and wearing a hat with a weird wired plume standing erect from it.

Two more dances and "Time to unmask" was shouted.

Margaret looked for her friends. She had whispered to Ben that they must be either the pair of kittens or the Raggedy Ann and Andy over in the corner.

It was the Kittens who snatched off their hoods and tore down upon them. "Come and meet every one," they cried. Introductions got mixed up some way, and suddenly there was a merry circle dancing around Ben and Margaret. Just as suddenly it broke and "Virginia Reel" they all cried.

It was a strange Virginia Reel. One had to laugh at the nonsense going on across the way where the men were endeavoring to trip each other and forgot to advance and bow and had to be reminded. Everyone clapped all the time. It was most satisfactory.

Refreshments Are Served.

Then came refreshments,—box lunches prepared by each woman. Checks were issued to the men who claimed their boxes and then found the owner. More merriment was aroused with this part of the affair. Margaret's escort declared everything in their box delightful and saw that she had hot coffee. Ben, she saw, was equally well cared for.

Then alas, came "Good nights and Merry Christmas to all." Margaret almost hated to leave.

Ben drew her arm in his in the back seat of the car, into which they had been invited.

"Have a good time, dear?"

"Yes,"—she sighed and snuggled closer. She would drem of this party for months to come,—and how fine Ben looked,—why she wouldn't have believed he could be so,—well—really dashing! And she herself had never had so much attention, it was quite thrilling, and every one was so funny! For weeks after, she and Ben went over little amusing incidents, and smiled again and again.

THE JOY OF GIFT GIVING.

There is no custom connected with the Christmas season more ancient or deep-rooted than that of the giving of gifts, for it dates back to the very first Christmas, when the Wise Men journeyed many long weary hours across the desert, to deliver their gifts in person to a baby King, in Bethlehem Town, and, it is doubtful if there is any other custom that involves so much real joy and gladness,—it brings joy to both the giver and the receiver.

No matter how much work the selecting and purchasing, or the making of the gifts entail, or how weary you may be on Christmas Eve, the deep satisfaction you feel in knowing that none of your loved ones or friends have been forgotten and that you added your share to the gladness of the world at this greatest festival of the year, more than compensates for it all.

Those who are far away from home and unable to join the family circle for Christmas can picture the smile on Mother's face, as she unties the big express parcel and lifts out the various packages containing the gifts for Dad and Mother and the kids, but you can never guess the thrill of joy it brings to those back home to know they have not been forgotten by that big boy or girl in the distant city.

Perhaps you are sending a turkey home to the family, or a box of luscious, red, Canadian apples to relatives across the seas, but whatever you send and no matter how far distant it is to go, the Canadian National Express will despatch it carefully, safely, and promptly, and with the least possible trouble to yourself. Parcels are called for at any address, leave the city on the first available passenger train, and are delivered promptly to their destination on arrival. All parcels arriving at their destination up until Christmas Eve are delivered the day of their arrival, and packages up to the value of $80 are insured, free of charge. 2d-15-13.

FRENCH FAVOR MOTOR BUSES

Fares Vary Between Two and Five Cents—Private Control.

GOVERNMENT AID.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—Motor bus fares in Paris range from 2 to 5 cents, depending upon the length of the ride and whether the passenger rides first or scond class. The system is extensive and it is possible to take a bus virtually to any part of the city.

The motor buses are owned and operated by private capital but the government regulation is so complete that it really amounts to government operation with the benefit of private capital. The government guarantees stockholders 6 per cent. on their investment and assumes all responsibility for fixing fares and wages and regulating service.

The lines are divided into sections, with a basic fare for the first section. The passenger then pays a supplement for each additional section that he rides.

Buses, of the company's own design, are of the single-decked type. Double-decked buses were tried before the war, but abandoned when they proved dangerous on the sharp turns and inclines common to Paris streets. Their use has never been restored although the type has been so refined in England and the United States as to eliminate many of the previous causes of trouble.

Two Compartments.

The buses are divided into two compartments, second class with plain wooden seats and first class with upholstering. The difference in cost is only about one-fifth of a cent but on the line used by the writer, French people have been observed to stand on the corner and wait 15 minutes rather than pay the extra fare for a first-class seat.

The extremely low fares, when compared with the 10 cents charged in Detroit and other American cities, are possible because of the low operating costs. Fares seem low when expressed in American money but so do company expenses.

Wages, one of the big items of expense, are not comparable to those paid in America. A Detroit driver or platform man will earn more in a week than a Paris employee does in a month. When the Paris bus operator joins the company he receives about $25 a month. This is gradually increased as tenure of service lengthens, but it is extraordinary for a man to earn $30 a month.

Increase Since 1922.

That the lines are popular can be gathered from the fact that during 1924 they carried 1,067,346,700 passengers and collected 376,000,000 francs, or more than $19,000,000. This is an 11 per cent increase over 1922.

Most French cities have bus lines, usually operated by private companies under strict government regulation as in Paris. Some such as Lyons, have municipally owned and operated systems.

Railroads have also gone into the bus business on a large scale, using the buses as feeders for their lines. Tourist agencies have organized trips to the battlefields and to other points of interest. Bus lines operate through the Alpine country, opening up regions never before accessible to the ordinary tourist.

The French government has a considerable money interest in bus transportation. In 1924 subsidies were paid to 34 companies in order to keep lines operating in districts where the transportation was needed, but where there was not sufficient business to maintain the service. The arrangements in all of these cases are individual, depending upon local conditions.

Started in 1835.

French use of the bus dates from 1835, when self-propelled vehicles first appeared on the roads. England was the only country to have earlier self-propelled transportation. By 1882 there were six road engines in France hauling trains, with 16 smaller steam vehicles.

The first truck and bus show ever held in France opened its doors at Versailles in 1897, and at that show was exhibited the first gasoline-powered bus to be built in France. It was a Panhard-Levasser machine with a four-cylinder engine, was designed to carry 14 passengers. Another show was held the next year and two more gasoline buses appeared, a Dietrich and a Roser-Mazurier.

The gasoline buses drove steam cars from the roads and by 1904 there were 116 public transportation companies in France. Use of the bus continued to grow until the war and then the government stepped in and commandeered all of the machines for the army.

The 1924 registration figures, the last available, show there were 34,571 buses in use in France during that year. Virtually all were French chassis, ranging in price from $1,250 to $2,500. All are designed with the idea of being taken over by the government in case of war and fitted with army bodies.

HAVE A HEART, SANTA CLAUS!

"Well, my little man, what do you want me to bring you?"

Don't Be So Quick About Promising Automobiles and Aeroplanes to the Kiddies or You Will Ruin Father.

By E. S. McN.

"When are you going to take me to see Santa Claus, Daddy?"

This question, dear Santa Claus, dropped like a bomb into the midst of a pleasant evening, is what decided me to write you an open letter. I hope you will have time to read it before next week, as it will mean a lot to me if you do. We are not quite sure where you are just now, as Junior tells us you are already here, and last night we listened to you over the radio, speaking from Fort Norman. But we believe every word of it. There is nothing narrow minded about us. By "us" I mean me and my two youngsters.

I am writing to you, Santa Claus, to ask you, as man to man, to have a heart. I don't remember if you are a father or not, but I have always understood you to be a man who knew all about children. Now next week either I or the mother will be taking our two down to see you, and I put it to you, Santa Claus, have a heart. When they begin to tell you all the things they want, please, Santa, be reasonable.

The trouble began two years ago. Three years ago you got yourself in wrong by taking Junior, who was looking rosy in a big fur collar, for a girl, and promising him a doll. It took us some time and an Indian suit and a pop gun to restore his faith in you. But two years ago he and his little sister went down to see you, all full of faith and enthusiasm. It is Junior who causes most of the trouble. He believes what he believes so very hard. He held so tight to my hand that I could feel his heart beating. His lips were pinched in tight to keep them from trembling, and his nose was moist from the cold terrors chasing up and down his spine. But he knew that to win all he must dare all.

Fortunately he had been repeating to himself on the way down what he was to ask, or the shivering glory of that supreme moment when he stood face to face with Santa Claus himself would have chased them far from his mind. I let go his hand and he stood, alone in the world, with the big, woolly saint. A warm hand took his cold little paw and a deep voice asked:

"Well, my little man, what do you want me to bring you?"

And "my little man," with a prodigious effort, summoned his sourage from his boots where it was oozing away, and piped out:

"An automobile like Daddy's."

And what did you say, Santa Claus? Do you remember? Instead of rising to the occasion, like a man and saying, "Well, I'm afraid I can't give automobiles like that to little boys and girls. How about a humming top?" you patted him on the head and answered brightly: "All right. I'll bring it."

And that was that. The only bright spot of that day was that Little Sister hadn't risen higher in her dreams than a new dolly. Now if she had only decided on an aeroplane that could fly it would have been a perfect day.

A Promise is a Promise.

For a few days we tried to persuade Junior that he hadn't heard correctly, or that Santa Claus was joking, but he has a legal head, and it would take more than two soft-hearted parents to hoodwink him. Santa Claus had promised him a car like Daddy's, so on Christmas morning it would be there.

After that we gave up trying, and I took stock of his "Blue Wonder," a little-boy sized roadster that had already shattered the peace of the neighborhood for over a year. I tried to persuade myself that it wasn't necessary, but each evening the serene confidence of his countenance, and the plans he was making as to which side of the garage he should keep his car on, weakened my resistance. I invested in some sheets of metal, paint, bolts, nuts, auto paint, horn, etc., and for the rest of that month my family knew me no more. All Christmas preparations went by the board. My wife complained bitterly, and by Christmas Eve was scarcely speaking. Every second I had was spent in the cellar workshop, to the door of which I had a padlock fitted, and which remained locked by day. Towards the end it was a feverish race, and I think every bicycle shop in the city was anxiously awaiting the result of my purchases and of the vari-colored advice they so generously proffered me.

What mattered it if Uncle Bill in Omaha and Cousin Belle in Timbuctoo were overlooked in the rush—you had your way and Junior got his car. It was nothing in your life. Late Christmas Eve, with the aid of three friends, we got the thing placed under the Christmas stockings, and—well, perhaps it was worth it for once, just to see Junior's face on Christmas morning. There it was complete, horn, license, running boards, foot wipers, windshield, doors and windows that opened, and a roof that would carry as many youngsters as could get on it. Where is it now? Well, let us proceed to last Christmas.

Last Christmas we were rather resting on our oars until you came to town. We had talked up the merits of hockey skates and baseball outfits, and other reasonable things to Junior, who seemed to agree with all we said. Then you came to town, and he made his usual request to visit you, so down we went. That time he just murmured his request, to which you responded as usual:

"Oh, yes. I'll bring you one."

It wasn't until Little Sister had sweetly asked for a dolly's bed that Junior broke the news.

"I asked for a wire-haired puppy, and he's going to bring me one."

When Santa Agreed to a Dog.

There you are. Right in the middle of the winter, too, when nobody would think of buying a baby pup. Junior started next day in the cellar with his tool chest and some boards to make a kennel for the wire-haired puppy.

"Oh, well, every boy has to have a dog," said my wife. "I suppose they are like women. It's hard to live with them, but it's harder to live without them."

After some days making the rounds of the kennels commended to us by our friends, we located a fairly decent little ball of white and brown fur that cuddled up to my wife in a knowing sort of way, and then we discovered that if we kept him, Santa Claus insisted on our taking him away with us there and then, a good two weeks before Christmas. It was no use talking about getting another, because by this time he had licked the wife's chin and looked her full in the eye, and it was all over.

We tried to recall any of our friends who were fond of dogs, and might keep him for us until Christmas Eve, but their canine affection proved a wan thing when stood up beside the effort of training somebody else's baby up in the winter time. So we curled him up in a basket and took him home explaining to Junior that Santa wanted us to take him at once, since it might be too cold to bring him out on Christmas Eve. I may be wrong, but I fear there was a suspicious glint in Junior's eye. However, his joy in the pup soon outshone everything else, even mother's wrath when she had to come downstairs at midnight to comfort puppy's lonely little heart. Finally he ventured out into the snow one day when nobody was looking, and once more Christmas preparations were put to one side while his puppyish highness was rolled up on cushions and spoon fed until his snuffles ceased. Still it was hard to be properly indignant when Junior would stand adoringly before him, hands clasped in an ecstasy of devotion, and ask:

"Don't you truly think he is the very best dog on our street?"

Well, we have lived through two of your Christmases, Santa Claus, and you see what you have done to us, just for lack of a little judgment. What I want you to do next week when my two descend on you is not to be so "bloomin' wholesale." You can go so far as to promise Junior a tobaggan or a football, or even a train, but when it comes to $100 electrical engines or $65 "two-wheeled bikes," just hitch your belt in a little and say:

"Now, my little man, don't ask for too much. Perhaps I'll bring you one of those when you get to be ten years old.

Little Sister is a modest soul, and you don't need to worry about her. All she wants is a book about painting pictures and a ring with a blue stone in it.

My wife says if you aren't careful she is going down to call your bluff some day, and ask for a new silver tea service, a Russian sable coat, and a new super-six Heterodyne, with four spares and a prepaid garage account for five years.

ACTRESS' TRICK SAVES FORTUNE

Amelia Bingham Bound By Thugs, Sat on Jewels.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Bound by burglars with silk stockings on her bed, Amelia Bingham, famous actress, saved most of her jewels by sitting on them.

Two youths also bound two maids with silk stockings in the home of the actress on Riverside Drive, Wednesday night. They missed $20,000 in jewels because Miss Bingham concealed them. They got $1,200 in jewelry from a safe, however.

The Bingham burglary came a few hours after Mrs. Celia Tobin Clark, divorced wife of Charles Clark, son of the late Senator William Clark, copper magnate, revealed that she had missed a $10,000 pearl necklace as she was leaving a tea at the home of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

Jewels In Handbag.

She had left the jewels in a handbag in a hallway at the Vanderbilt home while she, Mrs. Vanderbilt and two friends were on the floor above.

About the same time as Mrs. Clark's loss was disclosed a maid surprised a thief in the Payne Whitney home on Long Island Tuesday, and frightened him away empty handed. Mrs. Whitney had jewels valued at $100,000 in the house.

Miss Bingham said the robbery at her home was worthy of the footlights. She and her two maids were forced into her room by two armed youths who entered through a rear door. The maids were bound with silk stockings, gagged and laid on the floor.

As one of the burglars pushed her onto a bed and bound her with a night-gown, Miss Bingham, who is 56 years old and pretty, contrived to sit down on a beaded bag which contained several hundred dollars in cash, diamond brooches and other jewelry.

Forced To Reveal Safe.

Angered because they could find only six dollars, the men forced Miss Bingham to tell them of a safe in the room which had been her husband's, the late Lloyd M. Bingham, who died aboard the Ford "peace ship."

Before they found the safe, a telephone rang. The robber standing over Miss Bingham became nervous and thrust his weapon into her face.

"Who is that?" he demanded.

"How should I know? Why don't you answer it and find out?" she answered.

The burglars found the safe and got about $1,200 in odd jewels. Ten minutes later, Miss Bingham freed herself and, taking a heavy Masonic sword from the wall, sought the burglars. They had gone and police were called.

KELLOGG TELLS OF U.S. POLICIES

Warns U. S. Bankers Against Indiscriminate Loans to German States.

OTHER POINTS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press)—The foreign policies of the Coolidge administration and the reasons behind them were explained here last night by Secretary Kellogg of the State Department. Using a meeting of the council of foreign relations as his forum, the secretary advanced these pronouncements to United States citizens and to foreign chancellories.

A warning to United States bankers against "indiscriminate" loans to German states and municipalities although the state department "has not felt itself called upon to object to such loans as against the public interest."

A re-affirmation of the government's desire to cooperate in European rehabitation, but to keep clear of European politics.

A declaration that he set as much store "by the spirit of Locarno as upon the treaties of Locarno."

An expression of hope that China will realize her aspirations for freedom from unequal treaties.

An exposition and reiteration of United States war debt funding policy.

The "chief distinction" of American policy and that least understood abroad, the secretary said, was the "fixed determination to avoid participation in purely European political matters."

THE LEGEND OF LOVESICK LAKE.

A new book of Canadian verse that is of peculiar local interest is "The Legend of Lovesick Lake and Other Poems," by Emily Marguerite Marshall, a Toronto writer, who has a summer home at Lovesick Lake, and who tells in this fine poem the story of the Indian maiden whose death in the rapids is supposed to have given this beautiful body of water its name.

The poetess offers us in the title poem not only a graphic recital of the romantic end of the Indian girl, but some word pictures of the Lovesick district that will linger in the memory of the reader.

"Springtime came and laughing waters,
Laughing waters glittering bright,
And the brilliant summer sunsets
With such opalescent light,
And the rapids sang sweet music
As they dashed and rolled along."

"The Legend of Lovesick Lake" is only one of a number of splendid poems in this new book of verse which has just been published, and which is likely to be in demand among Canadian readers.

MUNICIPAL EXPENDITURES.

The per capita municipal expenditures of a number of Canadian cities for the year 1924 show some striking contrasts.

Particularly is this true of the amounts expended on pubic health, a subject that is of considerable local interest just now.

Toronto, it is not surprising to find, tops the list with an expenditure of $6.42 per head of population for health and sanitation.

Montreal, on the other hand, although the largest city in the country, spends only about a third of this amount.

Toronto's health record is shown by official figures to be much superior to that of Montreal, which justifies the conclusion that public health can be bought, that it is possible by wise methods and sometimes at considerable expense to bring about better conditions and a healthier community.

In the provision of recreation facilities Toronto leads by a wide margin, spending $2.63 for every man, woman and child of her population to supply parks and athletic grounds, civic rinks, toboggan slides, etc.

Is the Queen City on the wrong path in the expenditure of over $9 per capita each year to protect the health of its citizens and supply them with ample opportunities for exercise and recreation?

In face of its low death rate, its small percentage of juvenile delinquency and its good record in regard to crime, it would be difficult to say so.

SPENDING YOUR MONEY.

Hamilton is one of those Ontario cities in which the indifference of the citizens to civic matters is most clearly demonstrated, as is evidenced by the fact that at the election last week only 38 per cent. of the electors cast their ballots.

A striking feature was that this apathy was most pronounced in the wards where the city's workmen reside and where the pressure of high taxation is the most keenly felt.

It is difficult to say why this should be so.

Not one of us in private life would willingly allow some one else to dictate how our money is to be spent, but in Hamilton apparently two-thirds of the voters are quite reconciled to letting the other one-third do that very thing.

The money spent by municipal bodies is not taken out of some mysterious fund; it is simply your money, taken out of your pocket and expended for municipal purposes.

And when you refuse to help in bringing out candidates and to vote at elections you are to all intents and purposes letting other people have complete control over your money.

That, to say the least, is not businesslike.

One-third of the electors may chose wisely, but there would be a much greater guarantee of efficient government if 80 per cent. of the people marked their ballots.

Peterboro's showing has never been quite as bad as Hamilton's 38 per cent., but it has been far from good, nevertheless.

NEGLECTING THE BALLOT BOX.

The funny part about all this discussion over the failure of many electors to use their franchise or to interest themselves in politics is that such people are really boycotting the ballot box, which is the symbol of our determination to be free, the instrument by which we may say what measures we approve and what men we are willing to have carry on our business.

The ballot box should be all powerful—and yet 50 per cent., sometimes more, of the people refuse to exercise their right to make use of this powerful agency.

"Vote as you like, but vote" may not be an ideal slogan, for a ballot case in ignorance is often not very valuable, but at the same time conditions would be infinitely improved were the advice lived up to generally.

Unfortunately, too, it is not always the ignorant who stay away from the polls, and the intelligent who vote.

In the 1923 election for the office of Mayor of Chicago, 740,000 of the 1,400,000 adult citizens who might have voted failed to vote. One-half the adult citizens of Chicago threw away their right to a voice in the government of their city.

Competent investigators interviewed 6,000 of the 740,000 citizens who failed to vote, asking them why they did not vote. Charles E. Merriam and Harold F. Gosnell have compiled the results of this research in a highly suggestive book on Non-Voting. Twenty distinct reasons for their failure to vote were given by the 6,000 non-voters interviewed. The four groups of reasons were as follows:

First—Physical difficulties: (1) Illness; (2) Absence from city; (3) Detained by helpless member of the family.

Second—Legal and administrative obstacles: (1) Insufficient legal residence; (2) Fear of loss of business or wages if time were taken to vote; (3) Congestion at the polls; (4) Poor location of polling booth; (5) Fear of disclosure of age.

Third—Disbelief in voting: (1) Disbelief in woman's voting; (2) Objections of husband; (3) Belief that one vote counts for nothing; (4) Disgust with politics; (5) Disgust with own party; (6) Belief that ballot-box is corrupted; (7) Disbelief in all political action.

Fourth—Inertia: (1) General indifference; (2) Indifference to particular election; (3) Neglect, intended to vote but failed; (4) Ignorance or timidity regarding voting; (5) Failure of party workers.

See which of these was your reason for not voting in the last election, and ask yourself whether it was a worthy reason that should guide you in the next election.

"RED" GRANGE CASHING IN.

All the boys are talking about "Red" Grange. Every youngster that gets a stranglehold on a goose-shaped football and makes a gain of a yard before he falls a victim on some mud lot imagines he's another "Red" Grange, says the London Advertiser.

And the old boys, the ones with the creaking joints who blow like a smithy's bellows if they run half a block for a street car, are reading about the half-million dollars that seems destined to fall into his lap. They wonder if they didn't make a mistake in settling down too soon, for half a million in a very short space of time is really a lot of money even in this day of high figures.

Yes, "Red" Grange, the Chicago rugby plunger and smasher, is very much in the limelight. Makers of sweaters wait on him; he signs a document saying it's a very fine sweater, all wool and a yard wide—and for his signature writes another $12,000 on the receipts side of his vest pocket memoranda.

Moving picture people wait on him, urge that he play a star role in something or other. He never was in the movies before, but they want him because he's "Red" Grange. Decides to work for the movies and writes down $300,000 this time in his notebook.

He's lucky in the name he's got, too. That first part of it, "Red," does the trick. William, John, Angus, Philip—no, none of them reach out and grip public fancy like "Red." If Caesar had had a name like that Mark Antony might never have had a chance to deliver his oration.

He's a very wise young man to use his scythe freely while the harvest is ripe before him, for just as certain as colic and little green apples made dividends for the man who thought out the pain-killer plan, some one greater and more daring than "Red" Grange will arise. He will grab "Red" around the middle and toss him to one side. 'Twas ever thus.

COLONEL WILLEY'S REPORT.

Colonel Willey, President of the Federation of British Industries, has made a tour of United States industrial centres with the idea of finding out why factories there are employed to a greater extent than those in Britain. The Manchester Guardian regards his report as an effort to arouse Britain to the fact that it can no longer take refuge in the belief that her troubles are all due to war conditions. The Manchester Guardian says:

"We have no reason to be ashamed of this country's efforts since the Armistice in the cause of political understanding, economic order and financial prudence. Most Englishmen believe, though they may not like to say so publicly, that their country has done more to restore international stability and amity during the last five years than any other. Yet it is Great Britain which seems to have been singled out for severest punishment. But the time has come when we shall no longer be able to attribute them to the lingering consequences of the war. It is no longer true to say that our difficulties are not partly of our own making."

Colonel Willey does not pay much attention to tariff policies, but attributes the success of U. S. factories to the fact that "production has, through increased efficiency, increased much more rapidly than the number of wage-earners employed." In the last decade for a given volume of output the number of wage-earners has fallen by 23 per cent. and—which is even more astonishing—the amount of power used in the plants has decreased by 12 per cent.

Colonel Willey found tha temployers and employees had a much better understanding than in Britain. The men seemed to have caught the idea that the maximum of service on their part would bring them the maximum of reward as their share of the earnings. They had advanced much farther toward the idea of co-partnership in business than in Britain; that made it possible to adopt every worth-while idea in labor-saving devices, and there was no limit placed by the men on their own output.

The Guardian contends that the first move in Britain must be to "break the vicious circle where bad workmen create selfish employers, and selfish employers create bad workmen." It is not a hopeless task, because it has been done before. There are industries in Canada, plenty of them, where there has never been a strike or threat of a strike. There are places where in dull seasons employment has been steady at the expense of profits. When large production has been called for it has been forthcoming without any urging. Humanity in industry will do more than any other agency to close up the gap between the factory and the office of the employer, and it is in that gap that most of the discontent and misunderstanding strikes root.—London Advertiser.

ART UNION LOTTERY BEFORE THE COURT

Ottawa Man Subagent of a Montreal Firm.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Magistrate Hopewell in police court Monday committed for trial Eugene LeBlanc, of Hull, who is charged with a breach of the lottery act, in conducting the sale of tickets for a drawing purporting to be made in England by the Art Union of Great Britain and the Art Union of Ireland.

LeBlanc, through his counsel, Dr. Gordon Henderson, accepted the commital without defence, preferring to have the case dealt with by a higher court.

The case, when settled, will dispose of an important point of law. At present, according to a clause in the Lottery Act, two Art Unions are exempt from the provisions of the Act, for the purpose of encouraging, throuhg lotteries, the sale and distribution of oil paintings and other art objects.

Local police, who are prosecuting LeBlanc, contend that he is not a bona fide agent of the Art Union, LeBlanc is a sub-agent of a firm in Montreal, supposed to be agents of the Art Union, and Montreal police also have a charge pending against them, but the Montreal courts have adjourned the case there until such time as the Ottawa case is disposed of.

Henri Hurtubise and Ernest Clairoux, both of Ottawa, who were arrested along with LeBlanc and charged with receiving lottery tickets, were allowed to go and the charges against them were withdrawn.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

APPRECIATES SAND.

To the Editor of Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Congratulations to Alderman J. O. Fife, Chairman of the Board of Works, and his staff for the prompt and efficient way the main streets were sanded on Saturday morning after the worse sheet of ice for many years. Success, J. O., the right type of a man for the civic life of a city like Peterboro with a class of citizenship unsurpassed by any city in the Dominion of Canada.

Thanking you, I remain,
Yours, etc.,

A THOUGHT.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE

I'd rather be a Could Be
If I could not be an Are,
For a Could Be is a May Be
With a chance of touching par.
I'd rather be a Has Been
Than a Might Have Been, by far;
For a Might Have Been has never been,
But a Has was once an Are.

If only people had a little flivver sense to replace horse sense.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 14.—The top price paid for a load of export steers as $8.65 a cwt. For two choice butchers' steers Gunns paid $9 a cwt. and for choice heifers $7.50 a cwt. For average quality butchers' steers and heifers the prices were $6.50 to $6.75 a cwt. Butchers' cows sold at steady prices, average good cows bringing $5 a cwt. and medium cows $4.50 Prices all round were regarded as steady with last week and the movement was promising for a clean up. Five loads of western stockers sold from $4.65 to $5.70 a cwt. the former averaging 600 lbs. each. The stocker trade was active. Export bulls were $4.75 to $5.75 a cwt. Canner cows were easier at $2 to $2.25 a cwt.

Today's calves were mostly rough and a few good but not choice sold at 13 and 13½ cents a pound. One bunch of good mediums sold at 12 cents. This market was firm and a little higher.

The lamb trade was steady. For a few choice lambs 15½ cents was bid with 16 cents asked. Good quality lambs sold at 15 cents and heavy lambs at 14½ cents a pound. Sheep were quite steady, the good ones bringing 7 cents a pound.

The packers' hog buyers were out to Essex and Kent last week and made heavy purchase of corn fed hogs. Receipts here are light and it is felt that last week's price of $12 f.o.b. will be easily held and an attempt will be made to jack the price up to $12.25 a cwt. f.o.b. and this paid during the morning

Sterling demand $4.84 7-8.

Sterling cables $4.85 1-4.

EGGS AND POULTRY

OTTAWA, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—The outstanding feature of the egg market today is the increasing receipts throughout the West especially in Calgary and Edmonton. A reduction in turkey prices is going into effect at many points this week.

Toronto — Unchanged. Country shippers report increasing receipts and are paying extras 60, firsts 50, seconds 30, pullets 40, and making sales extras 70, firsts 60, seconds 35, pullets 50 f.o.b., offering lower prices this week. Turkeys firm at recent advance.

Montreal—Eggs unchanged. Poultry offerings light. Edmonton asking 35 over 12 pounds; 33, 10 to 12; 31, for 8 to 10; 29 for 6 to 8; 25 for toms over 10; 23 under 10; 28 for old toms. Montreal dealers are bidding a cent less. Winnipeg reports sold States 37 down, and Moose Jaw 36 down.

Winnipeg — Egg market quiet, fresh receipts show increase over last week. Movement of storage stocks reported slow, egg prices unchanged. Poultry receipts of dressed heavy, prices unchanged, lower prices looked for on Wednesday.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press). — Notwithstanding an unlooked-for decrease of the United States wheat visible supply, wheat values today showed a downward trend the greater part of the time. Weakness of foreign markets, including Winnipeg, led to persistent selling here. Chicago closing prices on wheat were unsettled at 3-4 to 2 3-4 cents net decline, new style, December 167 1-2 and May 164 3-4 to 163 7-8, with corn 1-4 to 5-8c down. Oats 1-8 to 1-4c off and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 25c decline.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—A steady feeling prevailed in the local market for cash grain with a moderate amount of business passing in car lots. Sales of Ontario and Quebec No. 2 white oats were made at 53c, No. 3 white at 51 1-2c, and No. 4 white at 50 cents per bushel, ex-track. Canadian Western grades were steady.

There was no change in the condition of the millfeed market, prices being firmly maintained with a continued good demand for supplies and sales of straight car lots of shorts were made at $33 per ton, ex-track, but there was no official change in prices.

According to latest cables received from Glasgow, the market remains firm at 115s. per ton, c.i.f., for Canadian baled hay, but the Liverpool and the Manchester markets have shown no improvement, the prices being still 90s per ton, c.i.f., a good deal of hay is being shipped to the United States on consignment, but apart from this the trade is quiet and spot prices for extra good No. 2 timothy were quoted at $14.50 to $15 per ton.

The export business in cheese was much quieter owing to the fact that the bulk of the make of the tail-end of the season have been disposed of to English buyers and as they are not disposed to operate in earlier makes at higher prices at present, the demand has fallen almost flat for the time being. The feeling was steady and prices were unchanged with current receipts quoted at 18 1-4 to 18 3-4c per lb; October make at 21 to 21 1-2c per lb. and earlier makes at 22 to 22 1-2c per lb.

ANNIVERSARY OF MILLBROOK CHURCH

Rev. G. J. Bousfield of Peterboro Was Special Preacher at St. Thomas' Church.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 15.—The fortieth anniversary of St. Thomas' church was marked by special services on Sunday, Rev. G. J. Bousfield, B.A., rector of St. Luke's church, Peterborough, preaching in the evening.

Mrs. (Dr.) D. C. King, of Peterborough, assisted the choir, her solo number, "Be still and know that I am God", which followed the sermon, being appropriate to its subject and much appreciated by the congregation.

Unfortunately the roads were in such a state that friends from the other churches of the parish were prevented from attending, but local members turned out well, and a number from the other churches of the village were present for the service.

Rev. Mr. Bousfield chose his text from Second Corinthians, 4:18, "While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, and the things which are not seen are eternal," and stressed throughout his discourse the difficulties which are encountered by those who would experience themselves the height of spiritual realities, and also lead others, in putting aside the temporal things and exalting those of eternal value.

"In all ages men have thought they could do things which would last into eternity as when they built the Tower of Babel, or when Nebuchadnezzar, in his pride of heart said, 'Is not this great Babylon which I have built?' yet to-day, after months and months of digging into the desert sands, its ruins stand exposed.

"Generally speaking, things of which we are conscious through the senses are temporal. We see life in nature expanding in beauty, entrancing the eye, yet passing into decay and death. Even the universe itself will return again into the elements from which it originated. Religion and science both say, 'there will be a last day.'

"Paul has given us a rule by which we may recognize the eternal things —'things which are not seen are eternal.' "No rule is absolutely rigid for I know the devil and his subtle works are unseen, and we have to keep in mind possible modifications when we say that things not perceived by the senses are eternal.

"Love is what God is and lasts in this life beyond; our souls, the centre of our personality, where our character resides; the graces by which we grow spiritually; these are unseen things but very real, and certainly not to be destroyed. The rule of spiritual things is very largely the rule of the unseen. Prayer, systematic study of God's word, worship which includes church attendance, devotion to religious practices, these all assist in the growth of the unseen spiritual life which then gives outward proof of its real development in the daily walk and conversation.

"Let the merely temporal predominate and the life will reveal the trend of the nature. If you want to be thought of as a follower of Jesus Christ, and as a member of the great Anglican communion, and yet absent yourself from your place in the public worship of Almighty God, offering flimsy and nonsensical excuses for non-attendance, you are most decidely imperilling your soul. I do not say that, having been baptized and confirmed, this will mean an unending hell of torment, but if we sin, and wilfully miss opportunities for soul growth, this will not tend to enrich our eternity of existence.

"To be a Christian is not a one man affair. Paul speaks of it in terms of membership of a body, and Jesus said, 'I am the Vine, ye are the branches'; it is never present in its best and ultimate manner if regarded as something entirely individualistic. Each is essential to a perfect whole.

"The great truths of Divine relation cannot be seen in their full lights without being viewed in connection with eternity. Let us then, striving for a mark which is really worth while, place eternal value upon the things which are not seen but which alone will endure."

FRENCH FINANCE MINISTER'S FALL FORESHADOWED BY REJECTION OF BILL FOR IMPOSING OF NEW TAXES

Briand May Avoid Defeat By Accepting Help From Other Groups.

MEETING TODAY

Cabinet to Give First Attention to Finance Committee's Action.

PARIS, Dec. 15. — (Canadian Press).—The Finance Committee of the Chamber of Deputies placed M. Loucheur, Finance Minister, personally, and the Government generally in a difficult situation last evening by rejecting two of the principal Government measures for financial stabilization — the bill creating a sinking fund commission and that for the imposition of new taxes. The committee, however, at the same time, decided to continue the discussion of the bills designed to curb tax dodging and the exodus of capital.

This latter decision was eagerly seized upon by the Government supporters as evidence that all was not yet lost, but it is extremely unusual for Government measures to be thus rejected in committee before their introduction in the Chamber, and the natural effect is to diminish the prestige of the Cabinet, particularly of the Minister of Finance.

Loucheur May Resign.

M. Loucheur's position, which has been regarded as very shaky during the past week under persistent attacks even of the Government majority's organs is now considered well nigh hopeless, and the Cabinet, which was due to meet at ten o'clock Tuesday, will probably take up the Finance Committee's decision as the first business, unless M. Loucheur has forestalled any action on this by resigning.

The decision of the Finance Committee—taken on motion of the Socialist M. Renaudel—caused scant surprise in the Chamber lobbies, because the press has been occupied the past week with speculation as to what would happen after M. Loucheur had had his chance and failed.

The general opinion is that Premier Briand must accept the inevitable and decide further to enlarge his majority in the Chamber by taking in representatives of groups heretofore not possessing spokesmen in the Cabinet or elect to fall with M. Loucheur.

Discuss Successor.

The supposition of enlargement of the Cabinet is so strong that there has been much discussion over the names of the representatives of the National bloc—the present Right Centre opposition — likely to be summoned by the Government, with Senator Bokanowski, member of the Washington Debt Mission, most favored to succeed M. Loucheur.

Meanwhile, the franc is on a downward course, and grave anxiety is felt by the French people at its continued fall. The 'sacred union' is being invoked by the newspapers, and some new form of government, whether dictatorship, or "committee of public safety," is being advocated in various quarters.

In order to stop as far as possible speculation in the franc, a 40 per cent. margin on all purchases of foreign stock quoted on the Paris Bourse, will be demanded by the brokers at the request of the Government.

LINDSAY MAN HURT WHEN HORSE BOLTED

Was Driving Into Cambray Village Alone—Lay on Road Several Hours.

LINDSAY, Dec. 15.—Mr. George Fitall, who resides on the boundary of the town, is lying in an unconscious condition at the home of his sister, Mrs. Sinclair, of Cambray, following a mysterious acident about a mile south of that village.

Mr. Fitall was driving into the village in a single wagon, and it is believed that his horse took fright at a passing vehicle, and made a bolt for freedom, throwing him out on the highway. The horse ran into the village where it was captured. Mr. Fitall lay for some hours on the roadway before he was discovered. He was taken into the village where he received medical attention, but the attending physician was unable to ascertain the extent of the injuries. He has been in an unconscious condition. It is believed that his injuries are of a very serious character.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS INVITES RUSSIA TO PARTICIPATE IN ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

Another Effort to Restore Normal Economic Relations Between Soviets and Outside World—Secret Session of Council.

GENEVA, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—The League of Nations took another step Monday calculated to hasten Russia's return to the political and economic life of Europe, when at a secret session the League council decided to invite a representative of Russia to sit on the special committee which is to pave the way for an international economic conference.

This action, coming immediately after the despatch of an invitation to Moscow to participate in the preparations for a disarmament conference, has created extraordinary interest. It means that the Western powers of Europe here are determined to make another attempt to restore normal economic relations between Russia and the outside world and are not dismayed by the failure of the Genoa and Hague conferences.

Linked with the statements of members of the council earlier in the day at the ceremony in connection with the depositing of the Locarno Treaties with the League of Nations that the Locarno accords are aimed at nobody, yesterday's action is also interpreted as a move to accelerate Russia's entrance into the League.

The council definitely decided upon the creation of an economic committe the membership of which will be publicly announced Tuesday.

SUPERINTENDENT OF ESSEX HOME FOR AGED ASKS INVESTIGATION OF GRAND JURY CHARGE OF CRUELTY

Denies "Boot is Swift and His Hand Heavy" as Alleged.

CONSULTS LAWYER

Firm Measures Against Fractious Inmates—Uses Detention Room.

WINDSOR, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).- That he will consult his lawyers before taking any action against members of the grand jury for their report that his "boot is swift and his hand heavy," was declared Monday by Daniel Kennedy, superintendent of the Home for the Aged at Leamington. On Sunday, Kennedy declared that he was demanding an immediate investigation into the charges made against him.

In giving his side of the case, Superintendent Kennedy refutes all hints that the aged people under his care are not receiving proper treatment, or that anything untoward ever occurs in his administration which would prove unfair to the inmates. The report of the grand jury also criticized the clothing of some of the inmates, saying: "It does not look well to see inmates of a county institution with overalls in rags and shoes open enough so that the feet show through, especially when some of these men are required to do chores around the barn these winter days."

To Relieve Bunions.

When interviewed, Superintendent Kennedy drew a picture in direct contrast with that painted by the report. According to Mr. Kennedy, only two inmates have holes in their shoes. These holes have been cut, he said, to relieve the pain caused by the growth of bunions, etc. The wearers of these shoes, incidentally, he said, are never called upon to do chores, mainly because of the other general infirmities of their age.

In reference to the report that some of the inmates were being mistreated, an immediate reply was forthcoming from the superintendent. He admitted that some of the inmates became fractious at times solely because of their apparent sensibility, and in these cases it is often necessary to assert some firm method of correction. Sometimes the misdemeanors warrant the placing of an inmate in a separate room in the basement, where they are kept for a short period.

RETURN OF PASTOR SOUGHT BY CHURCH

Spiritualists Charge That Police Fabricated Evidence Against Hildreth.

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Charging that the Toronto police fabricated the evidence that led to charges being preferred against their pastor and that these charges were not later pressed on the understanding that he would leave the country, a deputation of some 20 people representing the Eastern Hamilton Spiritualist Church awaited on Attorney-General Nickle yesterday. The deputation, which was represented by H. O. E. Braden as counsel, urged that the charges of fortune telling and fraud be relieved and that Pastor Arthur M. Hildreth be permitted to return to Hamilton and resume his charge. Mr. Hildreth was arrested in Toronto by the police as a seance.

"It would seem to me that it would be best for Mr. Hildreth to return and face the charges," stated the Attorney-General.

"I have no power to bring a man back any more than I have power of banishment."

21 Widows Of War Of 1812 Still Draw U. S. Pensions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The Government's pension rolls showed a decrease last year of 13,002, Secretary Hubert Work was informed in the annual report, made public by Winfield Scott, Commissioner of Pensions. A total of 512,531 was enrolled as pensioners June 30 last.

The loss during the year was the result of the death of 46,646 pensioners, which largely was offset by the additions of 33,644 to the rolls.

Although the War of 1812 was brought to a close 110 years ago, the name of 21 widows of soldiers who served in that war were on the pension lists at the close of the year.

The total payments for pensions decreased from $229,994,777 in 1924 to $217,150,612.

RECOGNITION OF SOVIET IS NEAR

Sessions Held in the United States By Soviet and American Leaders.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Certain indications suggest that the recognition of Russia may be nearer than generally is supposed.

A recent session in New York of some of the most important business men of the United States with representatives of Soviet commerce is not the least significant in the trend of events. Reference is made to the dinner given by Reeve Schley, vice president of the Chase National Bank, last Thursday evening at the Bankers' Club, at which influential Russian and American business men were guests. The dinner was kept secret, details first coming from Moscow.

MOMENTOUS WEEK IN FRENCH HISTORY

Many Plans Are Advanced For Government During Present Crisis.

PARIS, Dec. 15. — (Canadian Press).—The present week is likely to prove a momentous one in French political history, as extraordinary changes in the manner in which France has been governed for the last fifty years are recognized as imminent by the press of all political shades. Some of the newspapers demand and others plead for changes in the governmental regime, ranging from the establishment of the dictatorship or a "committee of public safety," to the more conventional proposal that parliament sit in secret while the financial bills are being discussed and voted.

The Paris Midi, one of France's foremost noon-day papers—of which Finance Minister Loucheur is reported to have acquired the ruling interest some months ago—in a leading article asks for creation of a ministry of national union and the appointment of a committee in which all classes of the nation would be represented as well as eminent technical experts.

Le Matin and L'Intransigient ask for the dissolution of parliament and the establishment of a dictatorship by a committee of public safety.

Hope is expressed on all sides that M. Briand, with his great diplomatic ability, will find the best way out of the country's difficulty but meanwhile Finance Minister Loucheur and his financial bills appear to be doomed.

NEW AGREEMENT FOR SETTLEMENT

Larger Payments Will Be Made By Governments For Approved Settlers.

DETAILS WITHHELD.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—A new overseas settlement agreement between Canada and Great Britain has been signed and will be published later in the week, according to information obtained by Canadian Press.

While details of the new immigration agreement are being withheld for the time being, Canadian Press is creditably informed that the main feature thereof will disclose the fact that a substantial reduction has been made in the amount of money which an approved migrant from Great Britain to Canada will have to put up under the assisted passage scheme. The agreement involves larger payments by the two Governments. The emigrants themselves will furnish approximately £8 10s each for passage to Halifax, £5 to Winnipeg, £7 to Edmonton and £9 to Vancouver.

Of the extra amount required the British Government is to provide the greater portion.

ELECTIONS A FARCE.

Labor Opponents Refused To Vote in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, December 15. — Canadian Press. — The Labor Party insisting on the legality of yesterday's muncipal elections in the Federal district, which includes Mexico City, retains its hold on the various city administrations involved and is preparing for the selection of labor mayors by the boards of aldermen chosen on Sunday.

Opponents of the Labor party declare that the late elections were a mere farce. There seems to be little chance however that they will succeed in having the elections declared illegal. The opponents of the labor party refused to vote. Mayors are not elected by direct vote but each vote of aldermen will elect its mayor in the near future.

Boston Society Leader Walked From Providence

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press). — Miss Eleanor Sears, Boston society leader and all round athlete, yesterday completed a walk from Providence to her home in Boston to win a wager. She covered the 44 miles in a little over 11 hours, four hours within the time limit set by the wager. She was apparently fresh when she pulled up at the finish line. Forty minutes taken for breakfast and a rest at Dedham reduced the actual walking time to a little more than ten hours.

The terms of the wager, made with Howard Sturgess of Providence, were not disclosed, further than Miss Sears took the walk for "money and something more"

KEENE NEWS

KEENE, Dec. 14. — The last meeting for the year of the United Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society, was held at the home of Mrs Robert Nelson, on Tuesday, December 8th, with 39 members and two visitors present.

Although this society lost several members in June it has gained many new ones since and is carrying on splendidly, having passed their allocation.

During the afternoon the lucky ticket for the cushion donated to the Society by Miss Weir of Toronto, was drawn, and Mrs. John Edwards claimed the cushion. The Society realized $45 on the sale of the tickets.

The President, Mrs. James McFarlane on behalf of the Society, in a few well chosen words, expressing the love and goodwill of the members presented Mrs. (Rev.) John Archibald, with a life membership certificate and pin.

Although completely taken by surprise Mrs. Archibald expressed her appreciation.

The business part of the meeting was followed by a social hour and refreshments.

KEENE, Dec. 15.—Mrs. Arthur Newman of Belleville is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Burley of Keene.

Mr. Harry Drummond has accepted the position of caretaker for the skating and curling rink and is busy preparing the surface for flooding.

Miss Minnie Edwards was a visitor to Peterboro friends on Thursday.

Miss Violet McNevan was visiting her parents over the week end.

Narrow Escape.

A number of youngsters narrowly escaped fatal injuries while sleighriding on the hill at Keene. A car was turning off of the Mill Road when the boys coasted down the hill and went right in under the car while it was in motion. On account of the car going slow the boys escaped with a few bruises and a bad scare.

Mr. Bob Keitle is fox hunting in Dummer township.

Miss Ethel Collins entertained a number of friends at a dance and social evening on Friday last.

The congregation of the United Church had a treat on Sunday when Miss Mitchell, Dominion Secretary of the W.M.S. delivered one of the finest addresses ever given in Keene in connection with the work of the W.M.S. in Canada and the foreign fields. Miss Mitchell has a fine delivery also, and the congregation was exceedingly appreciative of this fine address.

Mrs. John Edwards, Jr. won the cushion in the guessing contest put on by the W.M.S. of the Presbyterian United Church recently.

The play given by the Otonabee Young People's Club was fairly successful in a financial way, about $70 being taken in. The hall was not nearly filled owing to the inclement weather, but the play was enjoyed by all, judging by the continuous applause through the whole performance.

Mr. George Barry narrowly missed getting upset on a hill east of Keene, when his car started backwards down the ice-coated hill. A rut near the bottom of the hill stopped the sliding of the car and with the assistance of a team he succeeded in getting to the top. The roads were very bad on Saturday, but the snow which fell on Sunday night will help to make them safer to travel on.

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

IMPORTANCE OF THE FARMER IS SHOWN AT INTERNATIONAL

Holds Foremost Place as Food Producer For the Nation.

BIG CONTRIBUTION.

Canada is Rapidly Becoming Main Contributor to the World's Wheat Supply.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 15 (By Canadian Press).—One of the convincing facts disclosed by the International Live Stock Exposition and Hay and Grain Show, held at Chicago, is the importance of the farmer as a producer of the food supply of the nation. In an address broadcast through a Chicago radio station, Fred James, assistant director of publicity of the department of immigration and colonization of Canada, declared that the exposition, the greatest of its kind, helps to place the farmers of the United States and Canada in the position of importance in the perspective of public opinion and appreciation to which they are entitled. At this Exposition and show farmers from all parts of the United States and Canada enter the best of their live stock and field products, and in this friendly competition each undoubtedly learns something from the other to the mutual advantage. The event is one of the best opportunities offered to Canada to demonstrate to the people of the United States its importance as a producer of the highest quality foodstuffs. Last year Canada won the world's championship for wheat for the thirteenth time, 25 out of the 30 prizes for Hard Spring wheat, 25 out of 30 prizes for oats, first prizes for alfalfa, flax, peas and flint corn. The majority of the honors for sheep and some of the most coveted ribbons for other live stock went to Canadian exhibitors.

Because of the fact that the harvest of 1925 gave a yield of 422,000,000 bushels of wheat, Canada again will be making a significant contribution to the world's food supply. Of this huge crop from less than 23,000,000 acres, over 90 per cent is Hard Spring wheat. The United States finds itself this year with a considerably smaller wheat crop than a year ago and a shortage of about 50,000,000 bushels to meet the food seeding purposes, is anticipated. This shortage will naturally be supplied from Canada, now the largest wheat exporting country in the world. Canada had the advantage in this market because of the superior quality of its wheat and close proximity and lower freight rates. It is significant that last month for the first time since the U. S. tariff on Canadian wheat was raised to 42 cents per bushel a considerable quantity was exported to the United States for purposes of consumption.

In addition to a huge wheat crop the Dominion has phenomenal yields of oats, barley, rye, and other grain and field crops. But wheat is not the only food product that Canada is exporting to the United States. For the twelve months ending September 30, 1925, the total value of Canadian exports to the United States was $450,000,000, of which about one-fourth was agricultural and food products. Each succeeding year shows an increasing demand from the United States for the products of the Canadian farms and orchards. The natural and spacious pasture areas of Western Canada are the most economic source of supply of feeder cattle for farmers of the corn-growing States. These cattle were being sent to the American buyers until a few years ago. When the demand again becomes acute, as it inevitably will, due to the growth of the U. S. population the importance of Canada as a source of supply of stocker cattle to the farmers of the United States will be more fully appreciated.

There are some people who are inclined to think that Canada's productive area is a limited acreage comparatively close to the border of the United States. But Canada has breadth as well as length. In area it is larger than the United States, Alaska and the Philippine Islands. While it is true that a large part of the 3,729,665 square miles which comprise the Dominion of Canada lies in the far north and must be regarded as non-productive from an agricultural point of view; it is also true that the non-productive area is being reduced as scientific agriculture advances. The discovery of Marquis wheat, which now forms fully 90 per cent. of the spring wheat grown in Canada and 65 per cent. of that grown in the United States, made possible the growing of wheat on a productive basis farther north than was ever thought possible. Canada now has a new wheat known as Garnet, which will ripen from ten days to two weeks earlier than Marquis, is more resistant to drought and wet weather, equally productive, with as good milling qualities and can be grown with the assurance of good yields still further north than the present areas of production.

It is estimated that Canada has 300,000,000 acres of land suitable for farming. Only 60,000,000 acres are under cultivation. Of the 240,000,000 acres awaiting settlement millions of very fertile acres are close to railways, capable of growing grains, including corn, and excellently suited for mixed farming and raising live stock. This land can be purchased at prices ranging from $15 to $20 an acre. The population of Canada is under 10,000,000, or less than three persons to the square mile in the United States. It seems logical to assume that even with the normal increase of the present large population of the United States it will not be long before this country will have to rely upon other lands to supply a greater part of the essential food products and Canada is the natural source of that supply.

Canada's only limiting factor in production at present is lack of population. But the population is coming. Our wheat acreage has doubled in the last eleven years. Many of the successful farmers in Canada are former residents of the United States. They have carried to their northern neighbor American practices in agriculture.

GALLOWAY AND WEST HIGHLAND UNCOMMON HERE

Former Has Lost Ground in Ontario of Late Years.

GOOD BRIEF BREED.

West Highland is Small Breed, Low Set and Broad.

Galloway cattle were developed as a breed in the counties of Wigton, Kirkcudbright and parts of Ayr and Dumfries, where, for many centuries, hornless beef cattle have been common to the district. Some breeders claim that Galloway cattle always showed true polled character. Others believe that the breed descended from polled wild cattle. Early breeders who did much to improve the Galloway chiefly by selection rather than by in-breeding were Murray of Broughton, Craik, Dalyell, Herring, the Gordons of Greenlaw, the Earl of Galloway and many others. Most of the early improvement was done in the eighteenth century. Galloway cattle have always stood high in the beef competitions of the Smithfield Show in the Old Country.

The breed was first introduced into Ontario in 1853 by Graham Brothers of York County, and in 1861, Thos. McCrae of Guelph, another pioneer, made his first importation. Comparatively speaking, the breed has not made headway in Canada and in recent years has lost ground in the Province of Ontario. In size, Galloway cattle are a little smaller than the Angus. The polled character is distinct. The head is short and broad, but does not show as sharp a poll as does the Angus and the whole body is covered with a coat of thick, long, slightly curly hair which serves to distinguish the breed from the Angus. While the Galloway is set on short legs it does not show the spring of rib that the Aberdeen Angus does, is flatter on the rib and generally longer in the body, although the body is somewhat cylindrical as with the Angus. Strength of top, straightness of underline, depth and thickness as generally found in the beef type are all desirable and the breed is noted for length and fullness of hind quarter. Sometimes a brownish or reddish tint is noticed in the colour, but white markings are a disqualification.

Galloway cattle are very hardy, good grazers, and producers of a high quality of meat. Cows are not noted for heavy milk production, but in the matter of prepotency and fecundity the breed stands well to the fore. Owing to the thick coat of hair, Galloway hides are valued for the production of rugs and robes. The breed is not widely distributed outside of Scotland and the United States. Comparatively few herds are found in Canada, where breeders have criticized the breed on its slow maturing nature and tendency to flatness of rib, weakness of top, and lack of feeding qualities. It may be said, however, that the best type of Galloway is a fairly good animal from the standpoint of the producer of beef.

The West Highland.

The West Highland breed of cattle originated in the hill country of Western Scotland and is one of the oldest breeds. In colour, West Highland cattle may be black, brindle, yellowish red, or a mixture of red and black. In size, they are rather small, 1,200 pounds being considered a fair weight for a mature bull. The head is very bold and carries long, graceful horns which, with the coat of long, curly hair make a very attractive front. The neck is short and thick and the animal very low set, broad, deep and thick throughout. West Highland cattle are rather small, cows averaging about 900 pounds and bulls about 1,200 pounds.

Other Breeds.

There are three other breeds that might be mentioned in a discussion of beef cattle, namely, the Red Polled, Devon and Brown Swiss, but as these are generally considered dual-purpose breeds we are discussing them in a dairy cattle bulletin rather than with the beef cattle. None of these three breeds has taken a prominent place in Ontario. There was a time when there were a considerable number of Devon cattle in the Province, but they were not big enough to increase in popularity. The Red Polled breed has found some favour in Western Canada but has not increased in Ontario, while the Brown Swiss has never become firmly established in this Province.

The Christmas Urge —By Nina Moore Jamieson

In Country Homes It Means Feverish Activity in Kitchen—Crocks in Pantry Criterion to Character—Why Not Give Dozen Fresh Eggs as Christmas Present To Friends?

The papers are daily reminding us to get our Christmas shopping done early, and they are bringing themselves to the verge of bankruptcy, as usual, to provide the bargains that shall tempt us to comply. They have lists of things to get for Dad—and all he wants is to see his tax bill receipted, and his coal bin filled. Things to get for Mother—and she is the one who is working the ropes to get things for everybody else. Things to get for Big Sister—and they are all so expensive, from gloves and stockings to rings and fur coats! And so on, and so on—everybody in a turmoil over getting presents for everybody else, and the turmoil thickening as the days hurry past.

In the country our Christmas urge starts early and stays with us well. We do not feel the same need to shop that our city sisters do, but there are other matters calling for attention. Those chickens that are destined to grace some table on Christmas day are carefully shut up by themselves and fed with scientific generosity. The geese, all unaware of any ulterior motive in the mind of the dispenser of grain, find that they are delightfully popular! Their corn is always ready for them, and their water pail is kept full and clean, as they enjoy it. Geese are most fastidious creatures, you know—they will not tolerate anything that is not as it should be.

The duck is another bird altogether. A scoop-shovel on legs, I always think. Can't even stop eating long enough to talk, but snuffles and gobbles all in the same motion. You should see the cold disdain in the goose's eye when she looks at a duck as it dabbles in the dirt. The sneer! The contempt! The poor-relation glance! It is a real scorcher, that one!

But just at present we have little leisure for looking in the goose's eyes. There is a pile of work to be done before we can let Christmas come. Cakes to be made—and no picayune little daubs of dough, either. Big square one, pounds in weight, solid with eggs and cream, and sugar and fruit and nuts and peel; not much spice—there are enough good flavors in it without that. Baked in the most careful oven—not hot enough to burn them, yet hot enough to bring out the kindliest gleam on the top, and the very last atom of goodness from the varied ingredients.

The cakes should have been made before November ticked off the calendar, for time is getting short, and must be used to advantage. Puddings—what about them? Where is the suet? Ah, now that there is frost in the air, we are able to have our quarter of winter beef—and suet abounds, sometimes to the embarrassment of the cook! Indeed, a good fat quarter appears at first glance to be largely composed of suet.

Help of a Child.

Cakes and puddings and mincemeat are delectable jobs, with such an air of prosperity about them, such an allure of lusciousness, both present and future, such a rich fragrance to promise richer performance by and by, such a sweet and sticky and thumb-sucking sort of business that if there is a child within reach that child should be brought to the kitchen to help in the work.

With sleeves rolled above elbows, an apron tied around under chin, and a chair with cushion on it for kneeling on, behold the youngster make a fine fist of washing raisins and stoning dates! He will not mind sampling the raisins to be sure that all the sand is out of them. He will be generous with himself over the dates, for fear that the cake might be too rich, and give some one a pain. He will earnestly measure out for you the exact cups of sugar, reserving a "lump" of it for himself. And what fun this is! In the hard-fighting years that will come later, when the stress and grind of making a living and holding down a job take the glitter from life, he can look back with a smile of pleasure to the days when he helped to get ready for Christmas.

When the apples are peeled and quartered, and each quarter cut again, and the candied peel, slightly warmed so that it will be soft, is laid in slice nearby, and the other fruit, darkly gleaming, waits in its appointed dish, then I like to see some well-muscled member of the tribe appear on the horizon. For the food chopper takes a lot of turning, and the apples and peel must alternate to make smooth work, dan the dates are best sent through with the apples, and half of the raisins have to be chopped as well. I have the brown sugar bag, and the molasses jar, and the excellent sweet cider that a neighbor sent us, and I have to see that each layer in the crock gets its dose, for who could stir a four-gallon crock of mincemeat?

I try to keep it well mixed as it is made, for otherwise there is nothing for it but the method one uses in mixing bread or cookies—take the hand to it! And I do not like to take my hand. It is something to think of, at such work as this, that everywhere, up and down the line, in countless farm kitchens, brisk, cheery, capable women are doing much the same sort of thing, and their families are unanimous in approval.

Of course we must always sample it. As soon as the mincemeat is made we must have a pie, so that we may know whether it is sweet enough or fruity enough or thick enough or juicy enough. And then if it is agreeable to the family, it gets clapped into sealers because we need the crock, and need it in a hurry!

A Woman's Crocks.

Just let me see the crocks a woman has, and I'll tell you a bit about her and her household! If she uses big ones for lard and cookies and doughnuts and buns and pickles and packed eggs and packed butter, and perhaps for the homemade sausage that makes the reputation other sausage sells on, her establishment will be in a class quite apart from that of the woman who buys her lard and butter by the single lonely futile pound, and never makes a bowl of headcheese no matter who may hanker for it.

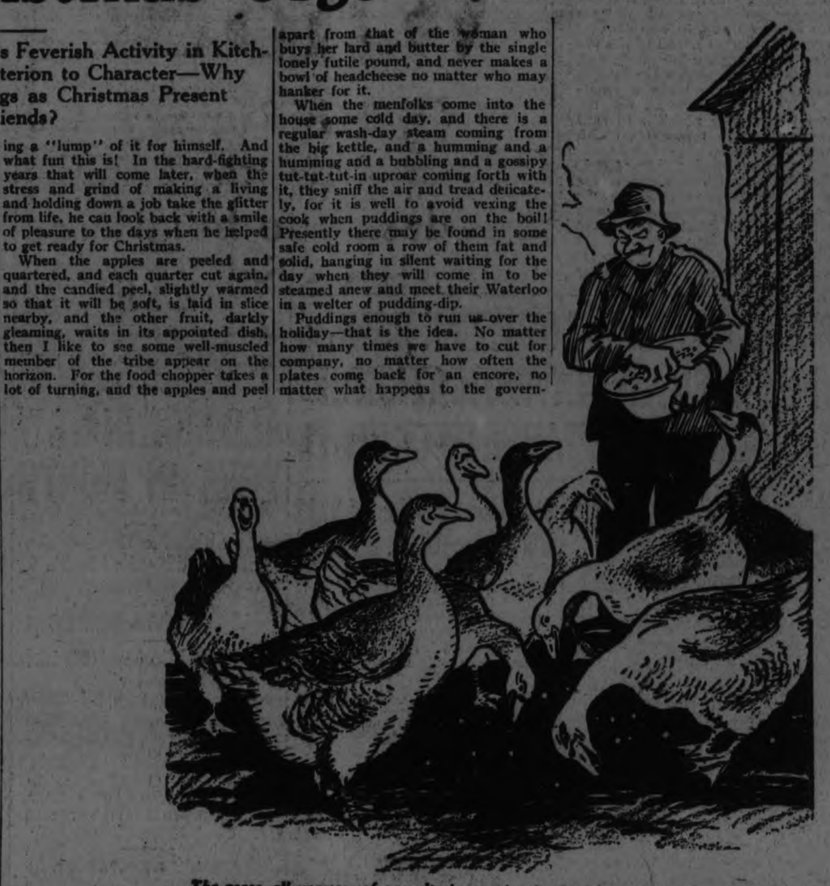
When the menfolks come into the house some cold day, and there is a regular wash-day steam coming from the big kettle, and a humming and a humming and a bubbling and a gossipy tut-tut-tut-in uproar coming forth with it, they sniff the air and tread delicately, for it is well to avoid vexing the cook when puddings are on the boil! Presently there may be found in some safe cold room a row of them fat and solid, hanging in silent waiting for the day when they will come in to be steamed anew and meet their Waterloo in a welter of pudding-dip.

Puddings enough to run us over the holiday—that is the idea. No matter how many times we have to cut for company, no matter how often the plates come back for an encore, no matter what happens to the government or the weather, we like to be sure of puddings at Christmas time.

And now, having these matters well in hand, we must see about our tree. For with us it is not a commercial undertaking, bargaining for one in the dreary market where the snow is dirty underfoot and the air is heavy with smoke. No—we make a pilgrimage to the stillness of the white swamp, where sombre cedars stand in family groups, or to that place we know of old where firs and balsams make their home.

It is dusk when we get home with our tree, for the days are short and night comes on with a pallid haste that is chilling and sharp with frost. But the tree will wait as long as we want it to—it will not wilt or cast its leaves, but patiently abide in its place until the day—the day when the secrets are opened to expectant eyes, when the mysteries that have crowded the house come to a merry end, and the tree plays its part in the fun.

So you see, with all this to look after, we cannot spare much time for shopping. And besides, we have so many gift-possibilities arising from our various undertakings, that we are in a position to dispense with store-made offerings. Why not give a dozen fresh eggs, warm from the hen, rather than sell the eggs and invest the money in some gift not a bit more certain of popularity? This year, a bag of potatoes will please many a person better than a laundry bag would, though the latter might have all kinds of fancy work on it, and the former would be coarse and of an unpleasing texture!



The geese, all unaware of any ulterior motive in the mind of the dispenser of grain, find that they are delightfully popular.

EAST EMILY DAIRY HAD GOOD SEASON

Number of Patrons and the Amount of Milk Were Good.

EAST EMILY, Dec. 15.—A meeting of the shareholders and patrons of East Emily Dairy Co., was held at the creamery on the afternoon of Dec. 4th. While the attendance was not as large as was expected, possibly on account of the dismal weather prevailing, the enthusiasm of those present served to offset the lack of those who were absent.

Last year the business at East Emily Creamery was operated at a considerable financial loss, but this year the tables were turned and the management is quite delighted with its success, which is credited to co-op eration on the part of the patrons in furnishing a good article to begin with, a new and improved staff handling the pen and pencil and also to the able and efficient directorship of Mr. K. A. Murray the manager.

The Balance of Trade this year showed such a marked improvement over other years that the Board of management, seconded as it is, by the stockholders finds itself up against the problem of installing new and costly improvements in the form of a new well and an improved boiler in the power house. Both of these fixtures have proven themselves out of date and not in keeping with the enterprise anticipated from East Emily Creamery henceforth.

To defray these and other expenses, the shareholders and some of the patrons present contributed generously. A committee was formed to interview those who were absent, and a big "drive" is expected from the adherents of East Emily Dairy Co., before the year closes.

Mr. Walter Moncrief and Mr. Bert. McCarrell, with the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. Chas. L. Graham—comprise a committee to secure information regarding the latest and most improved type of boiler, and it is needless to say no pains will be spared to secure ample power consistent with the demands of East Emily in years to come.

The following is a summary of the season's business:

Pounds butter fat delivered, 17,700; pounds butter manufactured, 21,900; distributed among patrons, $5073.13; total expenses for season, $1873.05; total amount disbursed, $7946.18; average price of butter fat, 34.31; average price of butter, 35.5¼.

The creamery opened April 21st and closed Nov. 11. To those who are well versed in creamery and cheese-factory work these are interesting figures, particularly so when it is understood that the patronage was somewhat limited, commencing as it did with eight and reaching at its height, to thirty five.

"Everything entirely on the square" was the slogan of the East Emily Board of management when business was commenced this year, and the satisfied patrons and the feeling of good will prevailing among the stockholders, testifies in no small degree that their efforts have not gone unrewarded.

East Emily Creamery, formerly East Emily Cheese factory, was a farmers' organization, originated twenty-five years ago. It has had its lean years and good years up to the present time.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press.)— The body of Augustus Arcand, of Kemptville, Ont., who had been missing since Thursday morning, was found on Saturday in 15 feet of water in the Rideau river, within a very short distance of his home. No inquest will be held.

DURHAM COUNTY HOLSTEIN CLUB ENTER COUNTY HERD NEXT YEAR AT C.N.E. AND ROYAL WINTER FAIR

Annual Meeting Was Held Last Week at Bowmanville.

SALE IN MARCH

Herd of W. Fred. Fallis, ex-President, Made Good Showing in Tests.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 15.—The Durham County Holstein Breeders' Club held its annual meeting in Bowmanville last Friday with over thirty members in attendance.

The retiring president, W. Fred Fallis, of Millbrook, was in the chair. The treasurers report showed all bills paid and a satisfactory balance in the bank.

During the discussion of business items, it was decided to have a county herd for exhibition purposes at the Canadian National Exhibition and the Royal Winter Fair next fall, the following committee being appointed: W. F. Fallis, F. C. Paterson, R. R. Stevens and J. Tamblyn. An effort was made to enter a county herd this year at the exhibitions mentioned, but it was realized that a beginning had not been made early enough—a mistake that was remedied by making arrangements for the initial steps in the immediate future, the matter being left in capable hands.

A regulation intended to protect accredited herds from infection, passed by the government at its last session, requiring a second fence enclosing the field where accredited animals are pastured five feet from the one originally surrounding such ground, came up for discussion, the general feeling being unfavorable. A resolution, which will be sent on to the proper authorities, was finally passed, protesting against such legislation as entailing unnecessary labor and inconvenience without sufficient compensation in the results attained.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Archie Muir, Courtice.
Vice-President, H. I. Seymour, Cavan.
Secretary-Treasurer, L. C. Snowden, Bowmanville.
Auditors, Neil Mutton, R. M. Cale.
Directors: Darlington, N. Metcalf, J. D. Stevens; Hope, A. I. Runnals, W. Bickle; Cavan, T. W. Belch, Wilford Elson; Clarke, A. A. Gibson, H. Jose.
Sales Manager, R. R. Stevens, Bowmanville.
Sales Committee, J. D. Stevens, A. L. Pascoe, R. M. Cale, with the President and Secretary.

On motion it was decided to hold the annual sale in March, 1926, at Bowmanville.

Adjournment was then made to the Balmoral Hotel where the annual banquet was held, the guests gathering about the tables at 1:00 p.m.

Music was furnished by the Maple Grove orchestra, and the speakers included, besides the newly-appointed officers, Christopher Houk, of Chippewa; R. M. Holtby, Field Representative of the Holstein Association; L. E. Franklin, of Toronto, official auctioneer; and F. C. Paterson, Agricultural Representative for Durham.

Those attending from Cavan were W. F. Fallis, T. W. Belch, H. I. Seymour, and Wilford Elson.

R. O. P. Inspector Round.

The official R. O. P. inspector, A. Brady, of Campbellford, was at the farm of W. Fred Fallis from Tuesday to Thursday of last week testing his fine herd of pure-bred Holstein cattle.

Satisfactory results were obtained from the seven cows tested, one registering as high as 4.2, a particularly good record. Mr. Fallis has over twenty animals in his herd at present, and has for some time been among the list of owners of fully accredited herds.

None of the Holstein breeders in this vicinity now go in for the Record of Merit test, the results being apparently not considered worth the labor involved, and Mr. Fallis appears to be only one who continues the Record of Performance test. Practically the only expense incurred is offering hospitality to the government official for the two days or so he is about his work and knowing the correct standing of the cattle has a good deal to do with determining prizes when a sale takes place.

ROADS RUINED BY HEAVY RAINS

Dummer Farmers Didn't Welcome Downpour of Saturday.

TRAVELLING HARD.

WARSAW, Dec. 15.—Many farmers are taking their wheat to Indian River, as the price by Wednesday had gone up to $1.30. The sunshine on Thursday morning was welcome, but the rains since then, especially on Saturday, have been heavy. Saturday, about none, there was a short, sharp thunder-storm, the first for some time. The frost came out of the ground and soil was washed away as it seldom is. The Dummer road was very bad, and the boundary from the Dummer road to Gordon Payne's gate almost axle deep. Even the upper part is broken through in several places.

On Thursday last Robert Selby was drawing a load of wheat when the truck was unable to make one of the hills. Several teams passed before anyone offered aid. Finally, after he had backed down the hill several times, a farmer put his team on the truck and drew the whole thing up. A cracked porcelain was the cause of the trouble.

MANY FACTORS SPELL DISASTER TO YOUNG ANIMALS IN WINTER

Joint Ill May Effect Coming Young of Horses.

ABORTIONS.

Hopes of Profit From Cattle or Sheep May Be Blighted.

Each season of the year has its special worries and responsibilities for the farmer but winter, on account of the many factors which may spell disaster to the coming young animals, undoubtedly plays a disproportionate part in the process of silverising the farmer's raven locks.

Joint-ill may effectually hinder increased progeny among the horses; abortions and premature births may be the forerunners of a downward curve in profits from the cattle barns; and the sheep pens and hog yards may be graves of disappointed hopes instead of sources of profit and satisfaction.

Importance of Right Feeding.

While we are as yet only at the beginning of the task of solving the nutrition problem, a weighty volume of evidence has already been accumulated, pointing to the conclusion that the rearing of a healthy stock depends on the knowledge and zeal of the feeder. A slight addition of certain minerals, and a few drops of vaccine judiciously administered to the pregnant mare has proved wonderfully efficacious in reducing the losses from joint-ill and weakness in the foal—even in cases of mares that have lost many of their offspring from this cause.

Mortality Among Sheep and Swine.

Among the sheep, goiter, and its invariable associate, lack of stamina, has been responsible, more than any other cause, in recent years, for diminishing returns and unfulfilled expectations. In this case, the expenditure of a few cents per day on potassium iodide—two grains daily, along with an admixture of mineral ingredients, is almost invariably followed by healthier animals and a lessening of mortality among the young.

As for swine the difference between success and failure lies to a great extent in the number of healthy young pigs produced by the sows in return for the feed consumed. Here, again, those grains of potassium iodide, especially if given daily along with the food for the last two or three months of pregnancy, are an invaluable help to the harassed breeder. Given this daily dose, a varied diet and, if possible, daily exercise, the majority of gestation ills in the hog yard are generally wiped off the slate.

The elaboration of the theory of vitamines has given a rude jolt to traditional conceptions in animal husbandry. Just as many human ills have been traced to the badly balanced rations favored by modern standards, so a large proportion of the diseases that result in decimated herds and bankrupt breeders have their origin in wrong methods of feeding. Animals living in an artificial man-made environment have been debarred from adapting themselves to conditions which instinct had taught them, were most suitable for the fulfilment of that elementary natural law which decreed that all tribes and species may reproduce their kind. Our treatment of these animals seemed, until recent years, to be all that was required, and in the diet provided, we plumed ourselves on having attained a very high standard, one that was calculated to help in every way towards the multiplication of the desired species. Recent researches by patient and scientific investigators have disturbed, in no small degree, our smug feelings of complacency.

Cause of Sterility.

It has been fairly well demonstrated that many seemingly well nourished animals are in point of fact in a condition approximating actual starvation—not that they are given insufficient food, but that certain essential and nutritious elements are missing from their diet, with unfavorable results so far as reproduction is concerned.

Experiments have been made on rats, which show that the omission of a certain vitamine from the diet, causes sterility among these animals, and that immediately this vitamine is replaced, normal powers of reproduction again become evident. Similarly it has been demonstrated that lack of the needful vitamine-containing foodstuffs from the diet of cows results in abortions, retained placentas, and a lowering of the milk yield and general health.

Faulty nutrition is a prolific source of disease among all animals, but especially among young animals and those that are pregnant. On the other hand, foodstuffs containing all the elusive but necessary elements, result in good health, and the healthy animal is immune to the vast majority of ailments that afflict its kind.

More Discoveries Coming.

It is evident that we are on the verge of fresh discoveries, fraught with tremendous importance in the science of breeding and rearing livestock. Science, which has placed in the hands of the modern farmer tools which surpass his predecessors' wildest dreams, is ready to enable him to overcome some of the greatest disadvantages under which he has labored from earliest times. Points that have been brought out up to the present are: the necessity of giving animals carrying young, the fullest possible amount of summer pasture, for the storage of a supply of needed vitamines; of supplying well cured fodders with roots or silage during the winter; the need of including minerals; and the importance of potassium iodides, which ensures the action of the thyroid gland of such momentous importance during the gestation period.

FOUNDATION OF LIVE STOCK IS GOOD BREEDING

Success Cannot Follow Unless Good Breeding is Practiced.

PEDIGREES.

Relationship of Animals Cannot Be Very Close For Good Results.

In all live stock work, breeding methods are at the foundation. Success cannot follow, even with the best of feeding, unless care in breeding has been practised. There are three systems commonly used by the average man in an effort to maintain and improve his beef cattle, and these are: pure-breeding, grading and crossing, and it is well that we discuss these methods.

Pure-breeding.

Most advanced forms of breeding are found among the systems followed by breeders of pure-bred stock who are striving to improve the breed they are working with. A pure-bred is an animal with no unimproved blood, and for matters of record pedigrees are given to these pure-bred animals. A pedigree is simply a history of the animal's ancestry as to blood lines. Perhaps the various methods followed for close concentration of blood lines are as prominent in beef cattle breeding as in the breeding of any other class of stock. Breeders of pure-breds who have outstanding herds are forced to stick to a close concentration of blood, but perhaps the most favoured system is the selection of pure-bred sires and females not closely related one to the other. Most of our breeders of ordinary herds of pure-bred cattle prefer to use a sire not too closely related to the females, believing that line-breeding and in-breeding are rather dangerous practices, except in the hands of very experienced breeders who have outstanding herds for which it is difficult to find, outside of the blood lines represented in the herd, sires of sufficient excellence to ensure improvement. It is a law in breeding that unless the sire is an improvement on the females in the herd he can do no good and is likely to work harm. Breeders in outstanding herds follow either one of two systems in their pure-bred work relying for improvement on line breeding or in-breeding. The latter is simply the first mentioned carried to the extreme. We generally speak of line breeding as the mating of animals that in blood relationship are no closer than cousins. So far as beef cattle are concerned it is the mating of a bull and female of similar blood lines but not closer than cousins, whereas in-breeding may consist of the mating of animals that are very closely related such as sire and daughter, mother and son, brother and sister, and half-brother and half-sister.

It will be noted, then, that in line breeding the breeder selects males and females of the same line of descent. Pedigrees of both show very similar blood lines and it must be said that line breeding has done a good deal for the improvement of our breeds. It brings out the strongest hereditary influence, but can only be practised where the breeder is careful to select animals of outstanding individuality as well as strong pedigrees. The danger is that the inexperienced breeder may pay more attention to pedigree than to individuality and, if he does, the concentration of blood is liable to bring out all the weak points of the inferior individual selected. Line breeding is the safest, quickest and best system of improvement but can only be practised successfully by experienced breeders.

Line breeding carried to great length involves the mating of animals even more closely related. The tendency is, after having met with some success in line breeding, to carry the practice on to in-breeding or in-and-in breeding. The breeder hopes to so concentrate the blood as to bring out the most desirable qualities of his stock, and while it is true that this close concentration may bring out these desirable qualities, it is also true that any defects peculiar to animals with the blood lines represented are liable to crop out, and in-breeding should not be practised by any outside of a few of the outstanding breeders and it is always more or less of a dangerous practice which, if carried too far, will injure the vigour, virility and fecundity of the herd. In-breeding is not a safe practice for the beginner and should be used only to a limited extent by the older, experienced breeders.

In the discussion of the various breeds we have mentioned the more important families as recognized by breeders of these pure-bred cattle. It should be pointed out here that, while it may be a fad or a fancy to lay stress on certain so-called families in the various breeds, the breeder of pure-bred cattle, if he is going to make headway in his herd, must pay some attention to family, which, after all, means blood lines. So-called plain-bred pure-breds rarely meet with ready sale, and in the three breeds, Shorthorn, Hereford and Aberdeen Angus, which are commonly bred in the Province of Ontario, pure-bred breeders can only make progress by paying attention to family lines. In the discussion of these breeds the outstanding families are named and it is well that the breeder understand how families are shown in pedigrees. In the Shorthorn and in the Aberdeen Angus the families are named through the breeding line on the dam's side of the pedigree, whereas in the Hereford, the families are named from the breeding lines on the sire's side of the pedigree. There is, of course, a weakness in both systems. In Shorthorn and Angus cattle it is important that the animal should be attached to some family as shown by the dam's side of the pedigree, but it is equally important that the top bulls in the pedigrees are themselves outstanding bulls of a distinct line of breeding. In Herefords, it is well to see to it that besides having a number of outstanding bulls in the pedigree, that the cows represented are of the right kind of breeding and blood lines

Would the following date be an auspicious one for me to enter into an important transaction or engagement?

(day) .....(month) .....(year) .....

E. G. N.—You are very winning, persuasive and fascinating in manner, and delight to make others happy. You have excellent intuitive powers, and are seldom mistaken in your first impressions of people. You have good mental powers, but not trained to their fullest extent, perhaps through lack of schooling or because of carelessness since. Reading good literature will correct this and add to your charm of manner, besides deepening your outlook. Your desires are not many, and you are happy in your position in life, but you should never let satisfaction deaden your ambition. One can always progress. Your color is opal, formed of varying shades of gold and brown.

Bobbie.—You give evidence of great mental power, although not developed yet, of course. Many of the world's greatest leaders have had your characteristics. You are even-tempered, and do not like "rows," but are able to hold your own in a tussle. Cultivate initiative—don't wait for the other person to lead. Your color is gold. You were born on a Thursday.

Tiny.—You have a fair degree of firmness and decision of character, but not enough for great undertakings. You are inclined to be changeable, and will yield to persuasion, but will not be driven. You have good mental ability, and should go far in whatever career you choose. Aim high. You are highly capable of combating adverse circumstances in daily life. You have a conscientious regard for the rights of others, and you show great sympathy with those in need or distress. Cultivate constancy and concentration. Your colors are red and brown.

M. H. McD.—You are highly developed for your age, and would succeed in almost anything you turned your hand to. Your understanding and sympathy are unusual; you must guard against favoring others at your own expense. Great achievement may be yours if you so desire, but you have also the natural talent and inward desire to build and preside over a happy home. You have abundant creative power, and believe in sticking with a task until it is done. You must guard against developing a material outlook on life, by cultivating and preserving that spiritual tendency. With your creative talent and your excellent perception of time you might excel as a musician, or in another art. You would have made a splendid nurse. Your colors are blue and green. You were born on a Monday.

Buddy.—You were born on a Thursday.

Mac.—Your characteristics are high individuality, business acumen, and feminine charm. You would be successful in commerce or finance, but have the adaptability to take up other pursuits with profit. A decided fineness of character and depth of moral beliefs qualify you for posts of importance. You are steadfast, reliable, and determined. You are peace-loving and gentle. If you wish to succeed you must develop initiative and assertiveness, traits which are so often lacking in persons of your standard. Do not be satisfied with a mere clerical or routine position. Aim at a high mark. Your color is white. You were born on a Monday. Do not make important business changes on the day you name, but you might conduct personal business with success. The 4th would be a better day for business.

M. C. M.—You are fond of popularity and praise, and are keenly alive to public opinion. You are ambitious to shine, yet will not seek to gain your ends by mean measures. You like to see others happy, and are congenial in company, though inclined to be backward. You have good mental powers, and with perceptiveness are likely to show success in whatever you undertake. You are honest and upright in your motives, and sincere in your affections, but are inclined to be happy-go-lucky in everyday affairs. Cultivate dependability and stick-to-it-iveness. When you set an aim, do not stop until you reach it. Finish one task before starting another. Develop system. You have considerable personal charm, and will be liked more for this than for your capabilities as a manager. There is a strain of art in your make-up, and if it were brought to the surface it would add greatly to your pleasure. Your colors are tan and buff. You were born on a Saturday.

G. J. J.—You are fine-grained, high-toned, and sensitive; refined in your tastes pleasures and aspirations; you possess great clearness of mind. With suitable education you would be a leader. You have social and personal attraction, and have made conquests. You think ahead of your position, and you should bring yourself nearer facts and not incline so much to "castles in the air." Realize the hard facts of life, and use your power to combat them. Stop dodging issues. When a crisis develops walk right up and face it. That is what your mentality is given you for. Cultivate steadiness and resource. Your color is pink, and you will feel more rested in a room done in that shade than in any other. You were born on a Thursday, not Friday, as stated.

Garry.—You are not self-assertive and should strive to overcome self-consciousness. Avoid off-color stories and the fellows who tell them. Your sensitive nature assimilates impressions too easily for you to trust it in bad company. You have a hardness in your nature that should be subjected; cultivate sympathy for people and animals. Play the game fairly with yourself, and there is a future of achievement before you. Keep your mentality clean. Your colors are gold and white.

Kay.—You have managerial ability above the ordinary, and would excel in that capacity. If, however, you seek success through a career you must develop power to originate and incentive to carry out. You are gentle and friendly disposed, and the influences of art, philanthrophy, and inspiration are strongly manifested. You have good perception of sounds, are fond of music and singing, and with "time" and practice would make a good performer. You have a courageous spirit, but are not contentious. Your perception of first principles is not highly cultivated; you rely a great deal on intuition. Opportunities presenting themselves on the day you name should be grasped. It is a good day for business ventures. Your colors are orange and gray.

V. M. M. H.—You have only a fair share of self-confidence and should associate yourself carefully with others in most business matters. You value the good opinion of others, and are stimulated by praise but will not go after it. You are generally quite buoyant and enterprising; yet like to be on the safe side. You are credulous, and likely to accept many things that are not proven by the other faculties. You just know that certain things are so and right. You can originate and create, but are inclined to the practical rather than to the purely ornamentative. Cultivate individuality and poise; move carefully in matters of the heart. Your colors are orange and heliotrope. You were born on Thursday.

Mara.—You show traits of individuality and will move alone in projects you attempt. You seldom quarrel, and are always ready to admit you are in the wrong—if it is proven. At 12, not enough characteristics have developed to give a positive indication of character. The day you mention will bring nothing unexpected. You were born on a Thursday.

M. M. C. H.—You will find material success in life, but should take your mind off that to some extent and set it on gaining charm of manner and grace of movement. You are considerate, but not over-sympathetic. You have a soul for music and should not neglect it. The next three years will set your course for life; use your time wisely and well. You react to violet, but gold is your color. You were born on a Tuesday.

Sambo.—You are lacking in honesty and are inclined to be avaricious. You are deficient in reverence and respect; have a feeble sense of the responsibilities of life; and are inclined to be sceptical. At your age there seems to be not much to do except adopt such corrective measures as to study the works of nature and cultivate an interest in the Divine order of things. To scoff at the honest convictions of others shows a want of nobleness of character. You have an ear for music, but other things less noble clutter up your soul so there is no room there. You react to no color, hence your color is black, the absence of color. You were born on a Friday.

Peggy.—You have great stability of character, but are inclined to fuss over trifles while being quite competent to meet the larger issues of life. Any service you render will be inspired by love, and none given from altruistic motives. You may have great musical ability. You have tenacity of purpose that enables you to carry out apparently difficult tasks. You have ability to copy others, but have also creative talent of a high order. Try this, as it may be your destiny. Your natural taste and ability will combine to make a beautiful home. Overlook trifles and don't worry about them. Look on the bright side of things. Cultivate a wide sympathy. Assert yourself. Your colors are blue and cream. You were born on a Friday. On the day you mention you must decide to be patient and agreeable for a long spell. It is a good day for entering new social relations, but exercise care beforehand.

Mamie.—You possess extraordinary perception of configuration and with training would excel at drawing or embroidery. Your nature is domestic, though you have ability to achieve success in business life. You are influenced by writing, singing, dancing and painting. You have pleasure and good cheer and make a sought-after companion. You possess a good share of perception of analogies; can classify, compare, and illustrate well, and have a good flow of language. This should be aided by reading of good literature and the consequent addition of new phraseology. You are capable of strong love, and have much attachment. You will gain your ends by persuasion rather than force. Use the velvet glove. You were born on a Friday. Your reading vibrates to no color, hence its keynote is black, the absence of color. The day of which you inquire is a day for diplomacy. Nothing will be gained by forcing matters. It will be uneventful.

MILLBROOK KIDDIES SENT OUT PRESENTS

Box Was Packed for Shipment to Western Mission Field.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 15.—Parents and friends of the forty or more members of the Sunshine Mission Band filled the basement of the United Church on Friday evening for the annual "White Christmas" entertainment, the underlying principle being that the children give, rather than receive, gifts.

For several weeks past Mrs. Offa Williamson, the popular superintendent of the mission band, has been unsparing of time and energy in training the boys and girls who gave the entire programme. Doubtless the creditable manner in which the young folk acquitted themselves, and the evident interest and pleasure of the audience, provided sufficient reward for the labor incurred.

The Christmas Tree, gay with silver tinsel and other bright ornaments, and laden with gifts, which filled the right corner of the platform, while admired by all, was the feature of particular delight to the children, who divided their attention between it and the fire-place, across the stage, with stockings hung at either end of the mantel shelf as if awaiting a speedy visit from Saint Nicholas, a small figure of whom was one of the mantel ornaments.

Evergreens, red shades on the lights, and festoons of red and green in various parts of the room, made very real the Christmas atmosphere.

It was evident that the younger element was on tiptoe with excitement which found some opportunity to express itself early in the programme in the march round the room, with appropriate singing, each handing his or her gift to Mr. Williamson when passing the platform, other helpers taking the many-shaped parcels from her laden arms and depositing them either on, or near, the Tree.

While every number on the programme was heartily applauded, the "Ma-Ma Doll" chorus, by fourteen little girls in white nighties and lace-trimmed caps tied under their chins with blue ribbon, who imitated with stiff movements the Ma-Ma dollies whose label each one wore, deserves special mention.

So also does the "Snow Brigade" chorus, when snow-balls (of white cotton batten) were thrown in a shower across the footlights among the audience. The final "Mother Goose" cantata, with characters in costume representing many of the best known of these popular rhymes, while each speaker added to the quaint verse a helpful reference to mission band activities, brought a real inspiration to the listeners.

Rev. F. H. Howard was chairman, filling the office in his usual capable manner. Miss Ella Elson, and Miss Annie McMahon were the accompanists of the evening.

After the singing of the Doxology, and an invocation by the pastor, the following programme was presented:

"Planting the Tree," by ten girls: Mary Burnham, Charlotte McMahon, Helen Mitchell, Irene Carveth, May Ferrin, Madeline McDowell, Mary Vance, Margaret Fallis, Bessie and Janet Dawson.

March and Song with bringing of gifts for the Tree.

Recitation, "When Daddy tells me Bible Tales," by Marjorie McDowell.

Chorus, "Sing and Laugh," by seven boys—Gerald Todd, Nelson Davis, Jack Stinson, Gordon Muspratt, Arthur Howard, Harold Hawken, Kenneth Little.

Recitation, "My Christmas Dinner," by Elwood Fallis.

Recitation, "When the corners of your mouth turn down," by Bernice Smith.

Chorus, "Ma-Ma Dolls," by 14 girls.

Recitation, "Shooting the cat," by Jack Stinson.

Piano Solo, by Miss Annie McMahon.

Chorus, "The Snow Brigade," by 25 girls.

Recitation, "Lazy Betty," by Irene Carveth.

Recitation, "My Neighbors' Wives," by Bessie Dawson.

"Mother Goose" cantata: characters—Mother Goose, Jean Stinson; Little Jack Horner, Kenneth Little; The Wise Boy, Marshal Fallis; Little Miss Muffet, Bernice Smith;

Mother Pig, and the Five Little Piggies who went to Market—Martha Earle; Esther and Gordon Might, Beatrice McDowell, Lenore Lambert, Dorothy Smith; The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe, Madeline McDowell; Little Bo-Peep, Bryar Edmunds; Simple Simon Jack Stinson; Lucy Locket, Gertie Richards; Polly Flinders, Lenore Lambert; Mary had a Little Lamb, Mary Burnham; Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary, Janet Dawson; Patty Cake, Patty Cake, Baker's Man—Jim Dawson; Jack and Jill, Raymond and Ethel Rowland; Little Boy Blue, Arthur Howard; Rock-a-Bye, Marie Douglas; The Boy who lives in the lane, Reg. Edmunds.

Tableau, "Catching Santa Claus" (Mr. O. Williamson), and four children: Allen Earle, Kathleen Smith, Dorothy Smith, and Bernice Smith.

By the way the little ones clustered about the jolly gentleman in red and white it was evident that, to many of them, he was the real Santa Claus, and they were loth to lose sight of him for a moment. Taking his seat near the tree, Santa held all the small folk his knees and arms could possibly accommodate, while a treat of home-made candy was passed to all present.

The large box, packed to the brim with the generous donations of the evening, including three warm quilts made by the mission band, was expressed to Miss E. C. Hawken, the missionary who represents the local W.M.S. at the United Church Home and Boarding School, Wahstao, Alberta. A number of Miss Hawken's warmest friends, who always remember her at Christmas time, put their personal gifts in the box along with their donation for the Ruthenian children of the school.

The small admission fee charged the grown-ups was for the purpose of paying the express on the box.

WELL BABIES' CLINIC REPORT SHOWS AN INCREASED INTEREST

Babies Brought in Numbered 950 in Past Year of Activity.

THREE LECTURES.

Officers Elected and Retiring President Lauded For Excellent Work.

The semi-annual meeting of the Board of Management of the Well Babies' Clinic was held recently in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, the president, Mrs. W. Galbraith, in the chair. Reports were given of the half-yearly activities and election of officers took place.

The report of Dr. Jessie Birnie, supervisor of the Clinic, showed a very gratifying increase in attendance during the past year. A comparison of attendance figures showed that in the first year of its inauguration, 308 babies were brought to the Clinic for examination and advice, while in the present year, up to November 30th, 950 babies have been brought in. In September alone of this year, over 100 babies were brought to the Clinic by their mothers.

During the year, three lectures were given at weekly meetings; one by Dr. A. W. McPherson on "Indigestion in Babies," one by Dr. J. H. Eastwood on "Infant Feeding," and one by Dr. F. O'Reilly, on "Common Ailments of Children." A demonstration of proper methods in making poultices and compresses was also given by Miss Margaret Stevenson, and a Question Drawer conducted by Dr. McPherson. A noticeable amount of keen attention was given by the mothers at these lectures, showing that they were deriving much benefit from the instruction contained therein.

One of the main objects of the Clinic work is to teach the mothers the proper way of clothing their children and a gratifying portion of the meetings is the clean and attractive appearance of the babies. "It has been said that there is some overlapping in the work of the nurses of the city," said Dr. Birnie, "but that has not been our experience." Dr. Birnie called attention to the fact that the Metropolitan Insurance Company's nurse had been instructed by her company, after she had been in attendance on mothers for eight or nine days, to encourage them to go to the Clinic for advice with regard to their infants, and the same co-operation was carried on with the nurse of the Peterboro Health Association.

Samples of food and cod-liver oil supplied by manufacturers had been distributed by the Clinic, also a number of layettes made by the Thursday Club.

A remark of a visitor to the Clinic was reported at this meeting, who said the most noticeable attributes of the work, in her opinion, were the cleanliness of the babies and the quickness of observation of Dr. Birnie and the nurses.

Financial Report.

Mrs. F. C. Neal gave the financial report, showing a balance on hand at present of $365.37. The balance at the first of the year was $234.27, and receipts totalled $946.93. Expenditures were $815.83. Contributions to the work were made by the following: The Misses Dickson, $40; 57th Regimental Chapter I.O.D.E., $25; the Female Voice Choir, $20; the Catholic Women's League, $5; the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, $10; Major Bennett Chapter I.O.D.E., $20; Mrs. Helson, $2; the Red Cross Society, $50; Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E., $50; the Playgrounds' Association, $33.50; Peterboro' Chapter Graduate Nurses, $25; other donations, $20. Several other friends had also contributed small amounts for special objects.

Mention was made of the indebtedness of the Clinic to the G.W.V.A. for their generosity in giving the use of their rooms for meetings; to the King's Daughters, for providing tea at the weekly sessions; to the doctors, for their attendance and the lectures given by them during the year.

Mrs. W. Galbraith, who has given much of her time for many years to the work of the Clinic, serving gratuitously as secretary for some time and filling the office of president for the last two years, sent in her resignation, much to the regret of the Board members. The services of Miss Marjorie Best, another faithful worker, were also mentioned in complimentary terms.

Election of officers resulted in the naming of Mrs. Galbraith as honorary president, Mrs. A. Mowat, president, Mrs. J. Mills and Mrs. R. Harstone, vice-presidents, Dr. Jessie Birnie, supervisor, Miss Annie Wood, secretary, and Mrs. F. C. Neal, treasurer.

The report of Miss Mamie Foote, the nurse of the Clinic, follows in full:

Madam President and Ladies:

I take pleasure in submitting the report of the Well Babies' Clinic from July to date. Our total attendance was 536, an increase of 25 per cent.

Our largest attendance was in September, 104. The attendance of new babes was 87, an increase of 100 per cent. Some of these were but three weeks old when brought to us.

Total number of calls, 280. These calls mean education—explanation as to the time, place and nature of our work. The necessity of regularity of feedings, need of cleanliness, need of fresh air, proper ventilation, the deadly fly, etc.

The follow-up work was varied, consisting of 1. Eye Irrigation.

2. Intestinal Lavage.
3. Preparation, Application and Removal of Poultices. These instructions were carried out with gratifying results.
4. Preparation of Infant Foods. Many of the children were brought to the Clinic with a good deal of digestive disturbances and undernourished. These, under our supervision, have gained steadily from four to 10 ounces weekly. The marked results of this part of the work can best be realized by weekly observations at the Tuesday Clinic of the children being gradually brought back to normal conditions. The mother, too, deserves credit for the interest and effort made for the welfare of her child.
5. We have distributed a number of layettes and for which we are very grateful to the Thursday Club.
6. We have devised and distributed caps, or protectors, for feeding bottles. These emphasize more necessary care for the bottle-fed baby.
7. In conclusion, I make special mention of the constant and generous services of our medical staff towards our baby welfare work.

—Mamie Foote,
Well Baby Clinic Nurse.

REPORT ON ST. LAWRENCE SCHEME EXPECTED BY NEXT MIDSUMMER

Joint Engineering Board Representing Canada and U. S. Now at Work.

DEFINITE REPORT

OTTAWA, Dec. 15. (Canadian Press).—Something definite as to the feasibilty of the proposed St. Lawrence canal system will probably be available at the middle of next summer. At present the joint engineering board, with its representation from Canada and the United States, is working on the project. The size of the undertaking and the nature of the work make it unlikely that the board will be in a position to report until next July or August. In addition to the board, an inter-departmental committee composed of representatives from various government departments is also at work collecting data and gathering information which will be available when required.

The final decision, insofar as Canada is concerned, as to whether the St. Lawrence canals project is gone on with, rests, of course, with the Dominion Government. The Government will be influenced very largely, however, by the report of the National Advisory Committee which was appointed to examine the scheme in all its aspects and make a finding thereon. Of this committee Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, is the chairman. To this committee the joint engineering board will report, and to it will be available all the information gathered bearing on the project. A similar committee exists in the United States for the purpose of advising the Government of that country.

The suggestion contained in Washington despatches that construction of an all-American water route from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic in preference to the St. Lawrence route was favored in certain quarters, was pointed out to Mr. Graham Monday. The Minister declined to comment, saying that, as chairman of the Canadian National Advisory Committee, he preferred to wait until all the facts were before him before making any statement in regard to the St. Lawrence project.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE OF WOOLER AT HOME

Meeting Was Held at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Terrill.

WOOLER, Dec. 15—On Wednesday afternoon the annual Women's Institute "At Home" was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Terrill. The members of the Institute and their husbands and friends numbered over sixty. The meeting opened with old familiar songs, the minutes were read and adopted. Christmas seals were distributed, amounting to $5.00 to help support the National Sanitarium Association. This being a Grandmothers' meeting, Mrs. S. Palmer, a great grandmother was convenor for the programme. Mrs. Palmer was in a great grandmother times costume, and presided over this part of the meeting. The first number was a solo "I cannot sing the old songs," by Mrs. Esli Terrill; followed by a reading by Mrs. Palmer; a solo, "In the sweet long ago," Mrs. Dr. Anderson; a solo, "My Grandma's Advice," Gwendoline Elford; a very appropriate and interesting paper by Mrs. M. E. Maybee; a duet, Mrs. Palmer and her daughter, Mrs. Dunn, "Home Sweet Home." Short addresses by Mrs. Walter Ireland, Mrs. C. R. Terrill and Rev. Mr. Neal. The report of the 24th annual convention, Women's Institute of Central Ontario, was given by the delegate, Mrs. J. J. McColl, who in her usual bright manner brought many activities of the work of the Women's Institute to the members Special mention was made of the dental services as a public activity of Dr. F. J. Conboy. The needs and possibilities in Rural Education, Music in the Rural Community, How to utilize literature on health. At the close of this report Mrs. L. R. Rowe tendered a vote of thanks to Mrs. McColl for the excellent and practical thought she brought home. Mrs. Geo. Anderson seconded this motion. It being an old fashioned meeting, an old fashioned lunch was served, consisting of ham sandwiches, baked beans, baked apples, pumpkin pie, gingerbread, maple sugar and tea. This brought the afternoon to a close and it was dark when the party turned to their different homes.

'PROGS' TO HELP GOVERNMENT IN HOLDING POWER

Such is General Belief at Ottawa in Pre-sessional Gossip.

OTHER RUMORS

Dunning May Quit Provincial Politics for Federal Arena.

OTTAWA, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—Rumors that Premier Dunning of Saskatchewan will forsake Provincial politics to enter the cabinet of Premier Mackenzie King, are again in circulation. These rumors lack official confirmation, however. While the entry of Premier Dunning has been rumored over and over again, there is no reason to believe that anything has occurred recently which makes it any more certain than in the past. No doubt he would be welcomed by Mr. King and his colleagues. He is considered one of the strongest men in the Western political field today, and he would be expected to bring with him a fair measure of support for the Government in the Prairie Provinces

There is some conjecture in the Capital at present as to where the members of the cabinet will find seats in the event of the Government being sustained by Parliament. One of the more recent suggestions is that the Prime Minister will contest a Middlesex riding, while it is also rumored that Hon. Vincent Massey, minister without portfolio, who was defeated in Durham, will seek re-election in the West. Once again the rumors lack official confirmation. It is unlikely that there will be anything definite in regard to them until the Government passes through the ordeal of the first vote in Parliament.

The feeling among Government supporters at present seems to be that the Progressives will come to the assistance of the Government when division bells ring for the first time, and that Mr. King will be sustained. This remains to be seen.

In the meantime, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, will visit his constituency and make one or two addresses in Manitoba. He will be in Ottawa before Christmas.

L.T.B. MEMBERS THANK PASTOR

For Sermon Preached at Annual Church Parade—Speaker Misquoted.

MAN BADLY HURT.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 15. — After the members of the True Blue Lodge returned to their rooms Sunday, following the services in the Baptist Church, which they attended in a body, a short session was held, several of the members making short addresses.

Joseph R. Wilkinson, recording secretary of the lodge, moved that a vote of thanks be tendered Rev. Edmund E. Ford for his inspiring sermon, to the members of the choir for their excellent musical program, and to the officials of the church for permitting the use of the building which was so comfortably heated. Brother Wilkinson's motion was carried unanimously.

His Remarks Misquoted.

Milton E. Maybee, M.P.-elect for Northumbeland, has called the attention of The Examiner to the fact that part of his address made at the reception to him and Mrs. Maybee recently was misquoted by several newspapers in the district.

When Mr. Maybee referred to the industrial depression in Campbellford and other places, he did not say that this was due to mismanagement on the part of the officials. He made it clear that the fiscal policy of the present Government was to blame, that is as clear as any speaker expected to avoid politics could make it.

Those who heard Mr. Maybee's address here had no doubt as to his meaning. His object was to refute a statement made by an opposition speaker on the platform here during the recent campaign.

Met With Accident.

Manley Blake, who lives on the west side, fell on the icy walk in front of his residence Saturday and broke his leg in two places. He will be laid up for a long time.

Taken to Hospital.

John Jeffs, manager of the Dominion Store, who was taken ill last week, was on Monday removed to a Toronto hospital for treatment. This is the second attack of the kind that Mr. Jeffs has had in a short time, and his condition causes his friends considerable alarm.

Home From Hospital.

Ronald McPherson, who has been for several weeks a patient in the Belleville hospital, has returned home somewhat improved in health, but still far from well.

The Season's Output.

The total output for the past season of the Empire Cheese Factory, the largest in the Campbellford district, was 241,000 pounds of cheese. This represents a turnover of about $48,200. The maker of this factory is Robert Maybee, who has held the position for the past eight years. The annual meeting of the shareholders will be held on Thursday.

Bought More Ayrshires.

F. M. Rutherford of Bonar Law, who some weeks ago disposed of his herd of pure-bred and prize-winning Ayrshires to Gordon Mann, near Peterboro, has purchased 15 head from Hector Wood, of Crookston, and George Stoker, of Tweed, the herd including a number of cows with good milking records and which will freshen in January.

A PRESENTATION

Knox Young Women Gave Silverware to Their Leader.

TAVELOCK, Dec. 15—The regular meeting of the Young Women's Auxiliary of Knox Church was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. John Armstrong. Miss Helen Smith, the president, had charge of the devotional period after which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Leader— Mrs. Stanley Barlow; President—Miss Helen Smith; Vice-President, Miss Mary Cuthbertson; Secretary—Miss Dorothy Watson; Treasurer—Miss J. nette Wright.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a pierced silver cake plate and the following address to the leader, Mrs. Stanley Barlow, who has, in so many ways, been a great help to the class which took this opportunity of showing their appreciation of her great kindness and helpfulness to them.

Dear Mrs. Barlow.—Happy in the realization of what your friendship and leadership has meant to us, we, the members of the Y.W.A. of Knox Church, avail ourselves of this opportunity to express our sincerest thanks, and to assure you of the warm affection with which we hold you in our hearts, and beg you to accept this token of that esteem as tangible evidence of our appreciation, and in token of past, present and continued friendship, we hereby record ourselves.

The usual social hour was enjoyed at the close and a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

FREIGHTER OVERDUE.

Great Lakes Vessels on the Lookout.

DETROIT, Dec. 15. (Canadian Press).—All vessels and wireless stations on Lake Superior Monday were asked to keep watch for the steel freighter Thomas Barlum, owned by the Barlum Steamship Company of Detroit, which is nearly 48 hours overdue at Fort William, the company announced here.

The Thomas Barlum, with a crew of 33 men, passed the Soo Friday evening upbound for a cargo of grain. The ship carried no wireless. No serious storms have been reported in the region.

BRITISH "CHAMP" ARRIVES.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15. (Canadian Press). — Roland Todd, British middleweight champion boxer, arrived here Monday on the Mauretania. He is en route to Vernon, Calif., where he will meet Harry Greb, world's middleweight champion, January 12.

Aspiring Young Musicians Drive Out Domestic Pets

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 15. —In a musical centre like Campbellford it is only natural that the ears of even the domestic animals should become accustomed to harmony.

William Pearson, leader of the Northumberland Regimental Band, is training a class of 16 young men who, in a short time, it is hoped, will be able to take their places with the veteran players. Some of these young men are devoted to their art and practice assiduously. One whose instrument is the clarionet, the story goes, filled the atmosphere of his community with such volume of sound that the family dog, a highly intelligent and favorite household pet, has disappeared.

On the other side of the river another yuong man is learning the bass horn, and he is now regarded as something of a public benefactor. The feline population in his neighborhood has decreased since the young man started to take lessons and the lifeless bodies of nine cats have been picked up in the alleys.

One shudders to think of what would have happened if the young men had been taking lessons on the bagpipes.

Air Mail Tied Up in Rocky Mountains—Snow Inches Deep.

COLDER WEATHER.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15. (Canadian Press).—Blizzards and snowstorms virtually stopped the air mail in the Rocky Mountain district, and the railroads brought out their snowplows in Colorado and Wyoming yesterday, while colder weather over spread sections of the Middle West. Snow drifts in some western towns piled up several feet in the streets. At Laramie, Wyo., the snowfall was reported as 10 inches. Cheyenne had 14 inches and Denver, Colo., had 5 inches.

FLEW TO WOODSTOCK.

Party of Four From Toledo Guests of Rotary.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 15.—hard frozen surface of a ploughed field of the Ontario Hospital Farm, a four-passenger aeroplane which yesterday forenoon made a flight from Toledo to Woodstock, smashed one of its skids.

The plane, which was piloted by Lieut. Ballou, formerly of the Royal Air Force, was in charge of Lieut. J. L. McDermott, who took this means of visiting an old friend, W. G. Rupay, manager of a local theatre. The others on board were Rev. George Mackay, a former Embro boy, now pastor of the Uxton Avenue Presbyterian Church, of Toledo, Ohio, who re-visited his home county in this way for the first time since 1889, and James K. Cameron of Toledo, Ohio.

The aviators were the guests of the Woodstock Rotary Club at luncheon and started back for Toledo in the afternoon.

OBITUARY.

DR. ROBERT LEE

BETHANY, Dec. 15.—The remains of Dr. Robert Lee, who passed away at his home, Frobisher, Sask., on Saturday, December 5, arrived on the 11.45 C.P.R. train at Dranoel Junction on Saturday, December 12, and were met by the brothers, William and Samuel, and a few other intimate friends. They were conveyed by motor to the home of Mr. William Lee here in the village, where they rested for a few hours previous to interment.

APPEAL TO COOLIDGE.

A second appeal was transmitted to Congressman Charles J. Thompson, who was asked to supplement the plea with personal representations to the President.

NECKLACE GIVES CLUE TO EARLY DAYS OF FRANCE

Was Worn By Some Mighty Hunter About 25,000 Years Ago.

AT MAGDELENA.

Four Cave Bear Teeth Are Pendants, Strung With Shells.

A necklace believed to have adorned some mighty hunter of Magdalena (a civilization of 25,000 years ago) has just been added to the collection of anthropological and ethnological date by means of which scientists are gradually revealing the history and habits of ancient peoples.

This latest addition to the scientific knowledge of the past was brought from France several months ago by Dr. George F. Collie, curator of the Logan Museum of Beloit College and professor of anthropology in that institution. Completion, now announced, of the difficult task of piecing together the parts of the necklace in its original form, reveals hitherto unconfirmed facts concerning a people about which little has been known.

The necklace has four cave bear tooth pendants, each almost three inches long. One section of fish vertebra appears at the top of the necklace, the continuity of which is maintained with sixteen dentalia (little inch-long shells shaped like elephant tusks) and two turitella, similar to ordinary small shells.

The presence of the shells in this necklace is of particular interest to the anthropologist, since they are said to provide another link in the well-established chain of primitive magic—the employment of the shell cult—found among early peoples.

"The Egyptians buried shells with their dead to insure resurrection," Dr. Collie explains. "The American Indians—of the plains tribes as well as of the coast tribes—used shell neck laces for various purposes, as do primitive people of African and Asia. The dentalium was an ordinary gastropod which stuck up straight in the mud, sometimes twenty to thirty feet under water. Securing it by carefully driving a long, slender rod down until the opening of the shellfish was found proved a particularly trying task. The effort to secure the dentalium at seacoast places, and its employment so widely by peoples far removed from the seacoast means that much more than merely ornamental value was placed upon it."

According to studies which Dr. Collie has made in the mile-deep limestone caves of Southwestern France, where the pieces of the now restored necklace were found, definite traces have been discovered of the "Lost Atlantis," that historico-mythical continent of high civilization of which Plato wrote.

A Lost Kingdom.

Copies of drawings found in the caves have been made by Dr. Collie, and these point to the existence of a lost kingdom, now probably submerged where civilization flourished in its highest form. Dr. Collie has drawn a graphic picture of the Magdalenians, basing it upon these drawings and upon his long investigation of this period in the world's history.

"Magdalenians, highest of the Cro-Magnons, one of several peoples of whom traces are found in France," said Dr. Collie, "lived toward the end of the glacial period. Eroded caves along the Venzere River, near Les Eyzles, Frances, run back for a mile or more into the cliffs. On the walls are paintings and drawings of high artistic worth.

"The drawings were scratched into stone, probably with harder stone or with tooth implements. The paintings were made with red and yellow ochre and black manganese. They depict the animals of the time—the extinct cave bear, cave hyenas, the mammoth, the reindeer and other northern forms.

"The pictures give unmistakable evidence that the Magdalenians practiced a form of 'magic' common to many primitive peoples. The animals are pictured as pierced by arrows or spears. This magic, they believed, enabled them actually to pierce the bodies of the animals when encountered.

"What a struggle they must have had! The cave bear was eight or nine feet long and stood as high as a man. He contested the occupancy of these caves with the Magdalenians. This necklace, which has been restored in as nearly the original form as possible, gives evidence, as do the paintings, of belonging to a civilization we cannot find to-day.

"We can trace the Magdalenian art back to Spain. There it abruptly begins, and as abruptly does it end in the caves of France. There is no trace of it in Northern Africa.

"The art of the Magdalenians, their employment of the shell cult in their necklaces, the fact that no trace of them beyond Spain has been found, indicate to me that they obtained their culture from a land to the west, just as the Egyptians borrowed the shell cult from some land of which we have no trace. May they have come from the land of Atlantis, submerged these many millennia in the ocean?"

Railroad Shares Strong While Other Stocks Lose

NEW YORK, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press)—The inactivity and strength of railroad shares, in apparent reflection of a large reinvestment demand, and the weakness of motors were contrasting features of today's stock market. Nearly a score of carrier stocks had been elevated to new high levels for a year or longer, before the end of the third hour, with demand stimulated by reports of large current earnings, prospects of special dividend distributors and merger developments. Among the many issues to attain new peak prices were Pennsylvania, New Haven, Atltantic Coast line, Norfolk and Western, Chesapeake and Ohio common and preferred.

Argentine Crop Report Caused Rise In Wheat

CHICAGO, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press)—With an Argentine government crop report at hand indicating that the wheat yield in Cordoba and Santa Fe provinces will amount to less than 50 per cent of the average yield, the wheat market took a decided upward jump early today. Commission houses and previous speculative sellers turned strongly to the buying ide of the market. In some quarters the Argentina report was taken to imply that the usual pressure of export offerings of wheat from Argentina in January would be lacking this season.

Chicago opening prices: 1 1-2c to 2 3-4c higher, new style, December $1.69 1-2 to $1.69 7-8 and May $1.66 to $1.66 1-2 were followed by a rise to $1.70 3-4 for December and $1.67 5-8 for May.

Corn and oats went up with wheat. After opening at 3-8c to 7-8c advance, May 84 1-2c, Corn continued to ascend, May touching 85c.

Oats started unchanged to 1-4c higher, May 44 7-8. Later all months showed a moderate advance.

Provisions were firmer, responding to the upward trend of hog vaules, and of grain.

Weaker Tendency Develops After a Strong Opening

TORONTO, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—Following a strong opening on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, a weaker tendency developed which in a number of cases carried the stocks to lower levels than were registered at the close of yesterday's market. B. C. Fishing, Consolidated Smelters, and Brazilian led the decline, the Western company stock losing 2 3-4 at 58 1-2. Smelters, after a strong opening which carried it up to 152 1-4, lost ground rapidly and finished the morning with a net loss of 1-2 at 150 3-4. Brazilian was active but lost 1 1-4 points at 80 3-4.

The selling movement spread to papers and Brompton, after a promising opening, which carried it up to 29, fell back to 27 at noon, this figure being 1-2 under last night's closing quotation. Elsewhere the changes were fractional.

Prices Held Up Well Although Trading Light

TORONTO, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—Prices held up well on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, although trading was light in the great majority of stocks. Nipissing featured the morning's business, more than five thousand shares changing hands, and the price increasing 10 cents a share to 6.40 Yesterday this silver stock advanced 20 cents to 6.30. McIntyre was in demand in the gold section, selling up 23 cents to 31.95. Declines were recorded by Dome Mines, which lost 25 cents at 17.00, and Wright Hargreaves down 27 at 7.13.

FROZEN BODY IS FOUND IN WOODS

Lumberman Missing Since Tuesday Had Apparently Lost Way.

LEFT BIG FAMILY.

CAUSAPSCAL, Que., Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—The frozen body of Ernest Beaudoin, who left his home on Tuesday last and had not been seen since, has been found in the woods about 60 miles from here. He lived at Canton Blais and was employed by the Chaleur Bay Mills Company. He left home to return to camp, and when he did not return at the time expected a search was organized. Beaudoin, who was 36 years of age and leaves a wife and eight children, is believed to have lost the way in the woods and fallen, exhausted by hunger and exposure.

NO SOLUTION OF FRENCH CRISIS

Nothing Done To Quiet Uncertainty—Loucheur May Resign.

BRIAND NEEDED.

PARIS, Dec. 15. (United Press). —The latest French Cabinet crisis failed of a solution to-day. A meeting of the Ministers, called following yesterday's Finance Committee rebuff to Finance Minister Loucheur and his disliked tax proposals, terminated with nothing accomplished to quiet the uncertainty or to check the falling franc.

Before the session, it is understood, Premier Briand declined (at least temporarily) an offer by Loucheur to retire if it would help Briand. However, though the Cabinet took no action toward either the retirement of Loucheur or of the entire group, it is generally held that the present impasse cannot continue.

The Cabinet Ministers were in accord that the country needed Briand now, the skilful diplomat and politician who had been Premier eight times. Hence, it is believed, that if the Cabinet finally does resign he will probably undertake to reform the regime, but without Loucheur.

While the firemen were fighting the East 14th Street base a fire starting under similar circumstances, threatened the tenants of a tenement in East 16th street, about three blocks away, both fires originated in ground floor hallways and swept to the top of the buildings.

PIANO RECITAL.

The art rooms at the Conservatory of Music were filled last evening with an audience gathered to hear a very pleasant recital given by the piano pupils of Miss Bessie Elcome, A.T.C.M., assisted by the Misses Ida McBride and A. Batten, vocalists, and Miss Shirley Pettit, reader. The comments made at the conclusion of the recital expressed much pleasure at the work of the pupils, especial mention being made of their remarkable technical ability and their powers of interpretation and expression. With one or two exceptions, the selections were played from memory.

Miss McBride and Miss Batten, pupils of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, each sang a group of songs that were very well rendered. Their accompaniments were played by Mrs. Park and Miss Elcome. Miss Pettit gave a very charming reading of the life of Johann Sebastian Bach, finishing with a rendition of one of his compositions, a Minuet. The programme was as follows:

"March," by Orville Huffman and Melville Robinson; "Daisy Chains," by James Trotter; trio—"Dutch Kiddies," by Barbara Ackerman, Frances Jennings and Elizabeth Mulholland; "Lullaby," by Edward Huffman; "Evening Song," by June Best and Eleanor Brown "Waltz," by Jean Ackerman; "Santa Claus Guards," by Jean and Donald Howson; "The Merry Peasant," by Muriel Porter; "Pony Race," by Helen Reid and Marion Wood; "Doll's Dream," by Jean Howson; "Minuet in G," by Sadie Levine; "The Robin's Lullaby," by Helen Morrison and Doris Cooper; "A Curious Story," by Frances Jennings; "Thistledown," by Donald Best; "Arcadian Shepherds' Dance," by Jean McKone and Margaret Warne; "Whispering Waves," by Jean Dawson; "Sonatine 2, Opus 24" (Diabelli), by Elizabeth Mulholland and Margaret McCulloch; "The Spring on the Mountain Top," by Barbara Ackerman; "Sonata, Opus 49, No. 2" (Beethoven), by Helen Bonney; "La Parisienne," by Margaret McCulloch; "Minuet in G," by May Thorns "Polish Dance," by Miss France; Ackerman; "Rainy Weather," by Fern Rahmel; "Country Gardens," by Miss Alda Bartlett; "The Enchantress," by Margaret Johnston; "Roses de Boheme," by Miss Madeline Willis; "March Militaire," and "Butterfly Etude, Opus 25, No. 9" (Chopin), by Miss Mildred Morphet.

NO STREET CARS OVER CHRISTMAS

London Fears Trolleyless Holiday— Railway Board Order Causes Fuss.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 15. — Facing the Christmas season without a transportation system as a result of the decision of the London Street Railway to cease operation on Wednesday at midnight following the order of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board that the company must abide by its franchise and sell seven regular and nine limited tickets for 25 cents, the London City Council has called a special meeting for this evening in an effort to either make some arrangement for a continuance of the street car service or to provide some other means of transportation.

Mayor Wenige has expressed the opinion that it is folly to force the street railway back to the old fares and held a conference with street railway officials before issuing the call for the special Council meeting. He declares that the company cannot operate at seven and nine tickets for 25 cents and that it would be a disaster to allow the cars to be removed from the streets. He believes the company can operate successfully on a five-cent fare.

Want Order Held.

In this connection it is pointed out that the only way the street cars can be kept in operation is to have the order of the Railway Board held up temporarily. If the Council were to ask the Board to delay enforcement of the order for a month or so, it could probably be arranged, and this would give the company an opportunity to submit a proposition for a new agreement to the Council. This they have hitherto refused to do, claiming that it was up to the city to take the initiative.

At the present time there is an abbreviated bus service in the city, and it is understood that the operators have made plans to bring in a fleet of busses if it is seen that the company are to be allowed to take their cars from the street. In some quarters it is argued that the street railway should be allowed to withdraw their cars and the busses given an opportunity to show that kind of a service they could provide.

When Mrs. Lillian Moller Gilbreth, noted as Americas first woman consulting engineer, went to Brown University to receive her Ph.D., she took six of her twelve children with her.

G.W.V.A. AUXILIARY ELECTED OFFICERS

Mrs. Joseph Mills Was Chosen To Succeed Mrs. Devey as President.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A. was held in the rooms at the G.W.V.A. hall last evening, and was preceded by a very enjoyable supper, attended by thirty-six of the members, and prepared by Mesdames Clark, Austin, Devall and Hughes.

A business meeting took place later, with election of officers, as follows: Honorary president, Mrs. W. R. Morris; past president, Mrs. R. J. Devey; president, Mrs. Joseph Mills (acclamation); 1st vice-president, Mrs. E. McKinstry; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. A. Tamblin; secretary, Mrs. R. Bugg (acclamation); treasurer, Mrs. E. Patterson. Convenors of committees:—Sewing, Mrs. A. Thorndyke; Kitchen, Mrs. A. Clark; Social, Mrs. W. Hughes; Visiting, Mrs. B. McLeod; Representatives to Local Council of Women, Mesdames J. Welsh and J. Black; Auditors, Mesdames Sharp and Thorndyke.

Mrs. R. J. Devey, the past president, who refused to stand for re-election on account of indifferent health, spoke very feelingly of the support given her during the year by the members and thanked the ladies heartily for their co-operation, expressing herself as being much pleased with the success of the recent bazaar held by the Auxiliary. Mrs. Devey was presented with a handsome bouquet of flowers by the ladies.

Reference was made during the evening to the wonderful work done by the Visiting Committee, with Mrs. J. Black as convenor. Three hundred visits were made during the year by this committee. Mrs. W. R. Morris had very generously loaned her car for needy cases.

Mrs. B. McNeely, delegate at the recent convention of Auxiliaries in Toronto, gave a fine report of the meeting.

It was announced that the lamp offered at the recent bazaar was won by Ticket No. 10, held by Mrs. E. McKinstry.

DELEGATION ASKS RELEASE OF SMITH

Remission of $100,000 Fine Also Requested—Heard in Camera.

OTTAWA, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—The release on parole by Christmas of Peter Smith, former Provincial Treasurer of Ontario, now incarcerated in Portsmouth Penitentiary, and the remission of the fine of $100,000 imposed upon him by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario, in connection with the Ontario bond scandal, were urged by a delegation which waited upon Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice this morning. Careful consideration of the request was promised by Mr. Lapointe.

While representations were heard by the Minister of Justice in camera, and no official statement was forthcoming following the interview, the members of the delegation, it was stated afterwards, felt that "an early release" of Peter Smith on parole would be granted.

PROSPECTIVE CANDIDATES FOR THE CITY COUNCIL

Names Are Being Freely Mentioned With Prospect of Many Staying.

Around town is heard the names of a number of business men and those engaged in other pursuits entering the field as starters in the race for Aldermanic honors.

A number of young men have been approached from the standpoint that they should be sufficiently interested in the city and in municipal affairs to allow their names to go before the public at the coming municipal elections and take a chance on surviving the ballot.

It is notorious how many can criticize but few will help out in the governing of the city, and it is the duty of many who have hitherto refrained from taking active part to get into the game and help those who have given of their time and ability in many of the city's activities.

Names that have been heard on the street today are Manson Comstock, furniture dealer; J. A. McNab, merchant; Wm. Lytle, contractor; Reg. H. Turner, manufacturer; Keith Lech, of Wm. Lech and Sons; with Dr. Holloway and A. H. Stratton also mentioned as probable starters in the Mayoralty race.

TALK ON TARIFF BY W. BREYFOGLE

Monthly Meeting of Baraca Class at Murray Street Baptist Church.

Mr. W. R. Breyfogle was the speaker at the monthly supper of the Baraca Class of Murray street which took place last evening in the basement of the church.

The "Tariff" was the subject of Mr. Breyfogle's talk and he dealt with it in such a way as to bring home to his listeners its importance to the country and to each individually.

Canada derives its revenue from two sources, namely, customs taxes on imports and exports, and the income tax. The speaker expressed the opinion that soon a more equal division as to the sources of revenue will be made when more importance is attached to the income tax than to the customs duties.

The two things that make the import taxes necessary are the need of revenue and protection. The political patronage, etc., which enters into that of protection, makes this side of the question complicated.

Speaking upon the "tariff walls," the speaker said that the tariff between Canada and the United States is about equal. Canada's tariff can be divided under the three heads: (1) General; (2) Intermediate; (3) Preferential. The third named is where Canada's tariff differs from most countries.

This tariff was formed to give Great Britain preference and show her something more tangible in good feeling than mere flag-waving. Mr. Breyfogle said that by Order-in-Council, the Government shows a very willing spirit to correct any mistakes made in tariff during session at Ottawa. Canada also has special tariffs with France, Australia, New Zealand, British goods entering by way of foreign ports, etc.

The tariff has three results on trade: (1) to accentuate it, on goods which on tax is non-existent or law, (2) restrictive, where the home-made product is given more than a fair show, (3) prohibitive, when a tax is placed upon foreign goods, making it absolutely impossible to buy it.

Brands Toronto Smug And Moral Leper Spot

compared to the moral miasma of the rural Ontario which he has castigated in "Comber Cove." He read to the interviewer flaming iambics about its tongues of slander, its hatred of poetry, its malicious gossip, the lewd and leering bullies who sang around its street corners, its deacons who pray on Sunday and prey all the rest of the week. He explained the rural exodus. He outdid Edgar Lee Masters. Comber Cove is no sunshine sketch of a little town.

"Mean Human Microbes"

Interviewing Wilson McDonald is something like interviewing Orpheus in Hades or Dante in Exile. "I can love," said he, "but I can hate. And I hate shams and slanders, fake and gush, the mean human microbes who crawl all over everything beautiful and make money."

Some time ago a report came from Philadelphia that he had wiped the dust, gold dust as well as star dust, of Canada forever from his feet, and vowed himself to eternal exile, as did Shelly and Byron. Was that true? Did he hate Canada?

It was not true, in spite of the generous support and encouragement of poetry in the United States, that he preferred that country to Canada. "I would leave this continent forever," said he, "if Canada were joined to the United States."

He based his judgment of its cultural value not on the hospitable poetry lovers of Philadelphia, but on a sunset-hating policeman on the shores of Lake Muskegon, near Chicago. If the tragedy of Canada was "the Poet and the Publisher," the tragedy of the United States was "The Poet and the Policeman."

The poet was taking a stroll in the dust along the shores of the lake when he was stopped by a park ranger.

"What are you doing?" asked the policeman.

"I am looking at the sunset," replied the poet.

The policeman was suspicious. He felt that he had to do with either a madman or a bandit. "Why do you want to look at a sunset?" said he. "Isn't there a movie in town?" "He ran me in as a suspicious character," said Wilson McDonald, "because I had a love for landscape."

"Onions Are Gorgeous."

"Canada, as a whole," said Wilson McDonald, "has no use for poets, particularly for masculine ones."

One of the reasons was that women buy the country's verse as they buy its sugar. "If you go to a woman's club," said he, "strike an attitude and recite 'Lilacs are wonderful, onions are gorgeous. Oh joy, Oh bliss, Oh peace,' they will flock and gush around you and say 'I simply adore your poetry'."

But hard-hitting, man-sized satire in the style of Juvenal was another matter. The feminine poetry clubs stabbed a Canadian juvenal with their tongues as Marc Antony's wife stabbed Acero's tongue with her knitting needles.

Then the poet, who was a real Canadian, full of national feeling, had to suffer from the scorn of those who were not Canadians. When Wilson McDonald came to Victoria with his prairie songs and an opera, the music as well as the verse of which he himself wrote, an English lady said, "How utterly preposterous it is for a mere Canadian to dare to write either music or poetry."

Over-Weight Prayers.

Just as Socrates felt himself a divinely appointed gadfly to sting the Athenians, so Mr. Wilson McDonald, in his forthcoming comber covex, is nettle rash to arouse rural Ontario from its unpoetical torpor.

When he gives public recitations of his sombre comber covex the public will be able to see for itself that in its man-sized verse, though it is rather hard on country merchants who hand out over-weight prayers and under-weight butter.

SOCIETY WOMAN HIKES 45 MILES

Miss Eleanora Sears, Boston, Won Her Bet.

TRAINED 8 WEEKS.

BOSTON, Dec. 15—Miss Eleanora Sears, Boston society woman, arrived at her Beacon street home at 12.06 p.m. Monday, having walked 45 miles from Providence, R.I., to this city in 11 hours, six minutes.

Miss Sears had wagered she would cover the distance within 15 hours. She crossed the finish line three hours and 54 minutes ahead of schedule.

A score of Boston society men and women motored to Providence last night to see the famous sportswoman begin her hike.

At 1.45 a.m., a newspaperman interviewed Miss Sears as she passed through Pawtucket.

"Can you spare the breath to tell us with whom your wager was made?" he asked.

"I have plenty of breath to spare," she replied. "I made the bet with Howard Sturges in Paris, but they ran out on me—there was no one home there tonight, so we started from in front of the house anyway."

The wager was made about a year ago.

Miss Sears had been training for today's test for nearly eight weeks on the Blue hills reservation, near Boston.

She slackened her pace occasionally during her hike today to partake of refreshments carried by an automobile that followed her party.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie: I am coming to you for advice. I am a young girl, considered nice-looking and take well with the girls.

And I cannot seem to meet a fellow I like, that likes me in return. Have been out with different fellows; the ones I would like to go with never seem to be bothered with a steady girl or even ask you to go out the second time.

As for the others, they seem too ready to talk about girls.

I am not a petter and do not keep late hours. Is that the reason? I hope not.

Don't you think there are a few nice fellows who do not care for "petters"? I am by no means a "dumbell." My girl pal has a steady and I feel rather lonely at times and often wonder if there is not one fellow in this city my sort. How can I attract the attention of a nice fellow? This town seems to be swimming with those "sheiks," or rather those nickel guys, who would ask you to go for a car ride, at the same time would not ask you to attend a show or go out in public. Have never gone out with fellows in cars I did not know, as my own brother tells me about girls going out in cars, and the same fellows have a good line for their working companions the next day. My own brother of course overhears this. He is not a sheik but goes out with different girls but always speaks well of them.

Dear Annie Laurie, do you think I am too particular. I am not very particular but naturally I pick my company the same as any other young girl should do.

Please, Annie Laurie, I trust I have not hit the sheiks too hard, or taken up too much space, but am just asking for your advice, and at the same time letting you hear what I have to say in regard to the fellows who call themselves Peterboro's sheiks. Thanking you in advance, —Prudence Prim.

Prudence Prim: The fact that you are not a "petter" may have something to do with your lack of a steady beau, then again it may not. Possibly you are too self-couscious. You may have the idea from what your brother has told you that all the young men who look your way are "sheiks," as you call them. Sometimes, not always, it is the girl who calls the tune, which means that you can have "petting" or not, just as you like. Of course, if you are not a "petter," you will have to develop some other attraction, like snappy dressing or a breezy line of talk or musical ability that will charm your companions. The willingness to "pet" is probably the easiest way of entertaining a certain type of man. If you want something better, and there really are better types than the "sheik," you will have to give something better in return. Of course, you must remember that in Peterboro' the girls seem to out-number the young men. If you lived in Toronto, for instance, you might have numerous admirers of a much better type than you could attract here. It is a rather sad fact that the quality of the girls in Peterboro' really is better than that of the majority of men. The young men who are of the "sheik" type are much more in evidence than the other sort of man, the really worth-while one, while the reverse is the case among the girls. So many of the fair sex who are looking for something more than midnight joy rides with a bottle and a befuddled escort have to content themselves with girl friends. But after all, a nice girl companion is better than the type of escort who, as you say, asks you to go for a ride but doesn't offer you anything more. The moral of it all being: if you want something better in the masculine line, you may have to seek elsewhere than your own home town. And remember, too, that you may not be looking in the right direction. Possibly you are letting worthwhile youths pass you by every day. There may be one right behind the counter of your grocery store, a quiet type with a freckled nose, or the one you see in the library with his nose in a book might prove to be an admirable companion. Did you ever think of that? The best people are not the showiest. The best goods in the store may be on the shelves instead of in the window.

Savoy Hotel Chef Gives Recipe For His Pudding

LONDON, England, December 15.—Every year the head chef of the Savoy Hotel superintendents the making of about 5000 Christmas puddings that are sent to America. He has been persuaded to reveal his recipe. Here it is:

Twelve ounces of Malaya raisins.
Twelve ounces of currants.
Twelve ounces of suet.
Nine ounces of flour.
Four ounces of chopped apples.
One ounce of orange peel.
Eight ounces of brown sugar.
Half a pint of milk.
Twelve ounces of Smyrna raisins.
Twelve ounces of crystallized peel.
Ten ounces bread crumbs.
One ounce ginger.
One ounce citron peel.
One teaspoonful salt.
Six eggs.
Quarter of a pint of brandy or sherry.

This recipe makes a seven pound pudding, of fine rich flavor. In making it all the dry ingredients should be well mixed together. Beat the eggs and add them to the milk and brandy, then pour over the dry ingredients and thoroughly mix once more. Pack into greased molds, and boil for six hours at the time of making. The pudings should be boiled again, according to the chef, a further six hours when wanted for use.

For all household washing, cleaning or scouring nothing gives so much satisfaction as Gillex.

OLIVE TRADE IN PALESTINE GOOD

Machines Now Crush Fruit —Steady Market Assured.

OLD WAY GOING

The sound of stone ground against stone may still be heard in the mud huts of the Arabs of Palestine as oil is crushed out of the fruit of the olive tree. In the side streets of Jerusalem the blind camel still traces his weary circle, turning the grindstone that accomplishes the same end on a somewhat larger scale. For centuries, since early Biblical times, oil has been extracted in such ways; but soon the camel will be retired and the mortar will be put on the shelf. Olives now go the factory to be crushed.

Of all the changes that have come into this country on the eastern fringe of the Mediterranean Sea, none is considered more momentous than the revolution in making olive oil. A plant with a high white tower, rising from a grove of palm trees, has appeared in Haifa, the seaport of Palestine. Here the Palestine oil industry receives from the peasants all the olives they can pick and crushes them with modern electric machinery.

For the first time in its history Palestine is now turning out olive oil fit to pass straight to the most fastidious table. Formerly its product bore the mark of factories in Italy, Spain or France, which refined the crude stuff extracted by the grindstones of Palestine. For the first time, too, a profitable market is at hand for all the olives the country can raise. The crushing plant guarantees this.

Olive Trees Grow Wild.

As one journeys from Jerusalem to Galilee he sees hillsides overrun with scrubby little olive trees. Some of them have been there for a thousand years, the Arab guide declares. They have grown to a gnarled and bent old age, bearing still, without any care from man, in places nobody bothers to claim. The peasants come out in season and pick the fruit, much as farmers' children in the country gather wild blackberries from fence rows and woods. In times past they have marketed their pickings as best they could or kept them for home consumption.

Olive trees were never cultivated. Often they suffered mutilation. In the time of the Turks whole groves were destroyed, but now that word has passed around that there is a new demand for the fruit people everywhere are setting out olive trees. Any one with a parcel of ground realizes it has value as a location for olive trees, and more than a million trees have been planted, it is estimated, since the new utilizing plants appeared.

Changes in the ancient Palestine land system are predicted as a result of the new importance of the olive. There one sees a combination of feudalism and the old communism.

Many more olive trees than formerly are appearing on all these holdings and many of the holdings are changing hands. Newcomers are buying the property. Immigrants under the Zionist movement are eager to get hold of it. The oil industry buys land and rents it out to tenants, who agree to raise olives.

The new electrical plant was built by foreign capitalists who have been successful in the olive oil business elsewhere. Their move at Haifa has been prompted by their desire to develop the country and to improve the chance of its people. The plant has capacity for crushing 25,000 tons of seeds a year. It uses the mash for fuel and fertilizer.

Besides olives, it makes soap, crushes sesame seed and makes castor oil, which was formerly imported into Palestine. To supply castor oil the company encourages the growing of certain plants on which, it happens, feed the worms that produce fine Syrian silk. Thus in this enterprise the oil industry is cooperating to aid the young silk industry of Palestine.

TEA CADDY PROTECTED

Speaker Told of Golden Age of Cabinet Maker and Furniture.

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—(By Canadian Press).—When tea was introduced into England, the orange teacaddy of the time was equipped with a musical lock to protect the priceless treasure, said Miss Doris Haines in the concluding lecture of her series on the history of English furniture in the Home-makers' Course at the Museum. Her talk, which was on the subject of "English Homes in the 18th century," included an account of the introduction of domestic architecture with illustrations from the master craftsmen of the cabinet makers' golden age.

It will come as a relief to the modern girl to learn that the outcry against women powdering and using their lip-sticks in public comes three thousands years to late. In ancient Egypt it was considered a suitable amusement at a feast for women to continue the embellishment of their faces in this maner.

ONCE UPON A TIME — RIP VAN WINKLE—I (WASHINGTON IRVING) — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

ON THE BANKS OF THE HUDSON RIVER, AT THE FOOT OF THE KATSKILL MOUNTAINS, THERE LIES A LITTLE VILLAGE THAT WAS FOUNDED BY DUTCH COLONISTS IN THE EARLY DAYS OF AMERICA. MANY YEARS SINCE THERE LIVED HERE A SIMPLE, GOOD-NATURED FELLOW, NAMED RIP VAN WINKLE.

HE HAD A SCOLD FOR A WIFE AND AT HOME WAS AN OBEDIENT, QUIET, HENPECKED HUSBAND. BUT THROUGHOUT THE VILLAGE HE WAS A GREAT FAVORITE AND THE CHILDREN WOULD SHOUT WITH JOY WENEVER HE APPROACHED.

Connemara was obedient, and watched Sweetie, fascinated, as the girl shook out the ample breadths of the nun's robe. "Lot's of stuff here, even if it is kinda ragged out. I isten—I'm going to cut you a new dress, a one-piece slip, and sew it together so you'll look human. You can't go round here with all this mess flapping round your feet, specially when you got such good looking feet. Lemme hold this up to you. Gee, you certainly got swell underclo'es."

She held the stuff against Connemara, and then hacked away at it boldly. She seized the needle and thread, and made stitches so swift that Connemara's eyes could not follow them. She was fiercely concentrated and did not speak, except once, to murmur, "Gee, this brings back the days at Madame's."

Connemara, watching her, realized that Sweetie was really a very pretty girl, and that with her bold bandit manner laid aside she was rather a nice one with considerable strength of character in her features.

It took Sweetie hardly half an hour to do her work. She stood up and slipped the garment she had made over Connemara's head. She tore off a long strip of the stuff that was left and tied it deftly about her waist. "'Course I haven't hemmed it, but fringe around the bottom of the skirt is good enough style. And it ain't got sleeves, but that's style too. And believe me, girlie, the sewing ain't any worse than lots I've seen in French models. Say, you look swell; honest you do. I always was the one to get good lines, if I do say it myself."

Connemara craned her neck at her reflection in the little mirror. The dress in the essentials was exactly like many others hung in her wardrobe at home, a sleeveless one-piece slip, with a simple tie belt. "Pretty nifty, eh?" said Sweetie, "I'll tell the wor d it is. Say, you and me—we look like a high-class boating party now. This shingle bob of mine goes grand with my pants."

Shingle bob! At the words Connemara turned and looked at her companion, her eyes distended—it might have been with fear, or perhaps merely excitement. Her hair—it must be hidden. But how? Sudden decision seized her. She stooped and gathered up the remains of her nun's costume, and tore another strip off it.

"I need a hat to go with my dress," she said briefly. "Look—a woman in Paris showed me how to make a turban right on your head. She used tulle, but this will do." Deftly and carefully she folded the strip of white stuff. Deftly and carefully she bound it round her head with a clever twist over in the front that give it character and shape. "It's on the same principle that the Hindus wind their turbans," she explained, not remembering that Sweetie's knowledge of Hindus and their turbans was probably nil. The little box that had held the sewing materials yielded several big pins, regular man's size spikes of pins. Connemara tucked the ends of the strip under at the side and secured them with two of these pins. A pin on the other side, and one in front held the rest of the turban perfectly taut and trim.

"There," she said to Sweetie, "what do you think of it?"

Sweetie was moved to genuine admiration. "Kid, you're there!" she exclaimed. "If you didn't get into a strong light, anybody's say you looked like a million dollars. That's the niftiest bonnet I've seen in a thousand years. Show me how to do that trick sometime, will you?"

"I certainly will," said Connemara. "The best of this is it hides my hair completely, and that's what I want. There's a reason, Sweetie, and though it seems remote now, during a night like this I feel that I must prepare for any contingency. But I haven't thanked you for making my dress. It's a wonderful dress, Sweetie, and you're the cleverest girl I ever met. And oh, how different I feel with it on!"

"To say nothing of how wonderful you look," added Sweetie. "Say, take a piece of the left-over goods and use it for a scarf. A scarf's all you need to make you right up to the minute and a couple seconds beyond."

She rummaged through the wreckage of the nun's costume once more. "There musta been twenty yards of goods in this rig," she exclaimed. "Lucky there was too. Here, how's this?" She brought out a long piece and laid it over Connemara's shoulders. "Throw it round your neck sort of swell and careless. That's the idea. Well, come on, let's go and see what the babies on deck are up to. I'll bet their eyes will pop when they see us. Pants do give you such a good free feeling—I wisht women never wore skirts."

They came out of the bunk room into the dimness of the deck, and as they did so David Lacy came forward.

"I've missed your sweet society, dear ladies, very much," he started to say, and then his voice sharpened to amazement. He was staring at Connemara, metamorphosed from a nun into a modern girl, white frock, white turban, white scarf. "Why," he exclaimed breathlessly, "why—you are—you are—I did see you at Auteuil—I could swear—but no, it's too fantastic——"

He broke off, aware that the girl was staring past him with puzzled eyes.

"What's the matter with that little light on the mast?" she asked. "It's been giving the queerest flashes for the last two minutes—long and short ones like somebody signaling."

CHAPTER X.

By Robert Gordon Anderson.

"Flashes from the masthead!" Lacy's words were half startled ejaculation, half question, his glance following the direction of hers.

Sure enough, the lantern winked once, then relapsed into its usual fixed white stare. The signaling, if signaling it was, had ceased.

Perplexed, for he had never rigged up any such outfit on his boat, he looked around for the cause. McTish was again bending over his engine; Pooch and Doc were still lying hog-tied, forward. But no! Doc had moved from his position—undoubtedly by rolling—several widths of him, aft to the heel of the mast.

"Didn't I tell you to stay where you were put?" Lacy demanded of the recumbent Doc, and tried to prod him away. Doc, however, proved stubborn, and the young man drew back his leg in that arc which Charley O'Hearn—and the reporters—so gracefully describe, when he tries for goal in the Yale Bowl. But apparently the beauty of that line from heel to hip had no charms for Doc. Under its threat he moved reluctantly, and Lacy, bending over, discovered a button sunk a little below the level of the deck so that no passing heel could depress it.

Did you ever stop to consider how many rubbers are lost by bad play? One very famous player is authority for the statement that four out of every five rubbers are "chucked," that is, lost by bad play or bad bidding. This observation is particularly true of a long, close rubber where the cards are breaking fairly even. In such a rubber, a close observer will notice many a slip before the rubber is finally settled. The writer was watching one of these close struggles the other evening and noted two hands, each of which if played correctly, would have won the rubber. See what you can do with them before reading the analysis.

Z is in the lead and playing the hand at no-trump. He needs all the rest of the tricks for game and rubber. How can he get them against any defense? Z is in a position to force discards from B. That is the secret of the problem. Z should lead the eight of diamonds. Y should discard the seven of clubs and B the seven of hearts. Z should now lead two rounds of hearts, winning the second round in Y's hand with the queen. B follows suit on the first round of hearts but what can he discard on the second round. If he discards a club, Y will play two rounds of clubs and then put Z's hand in the lead with the ace of spades and Z will make the jack of clubs. If B discards a spade, all of Y's spades are good. In either case, therefore, YZ must make the balance of the tricks.

Spades are trumps and Z, who is playing the hand must take all the tricks to win game and rubber. The dummy hand, Y, is in the lead. How can Z so play the hand against any defense that he can take all of the remaining tricks? This problem is one where Z must shorten his trumps. To do so, he must lead the queen of hearts from Y's hand. B should discard a club for if he trumps, YZ win the balance of the tricks. Z, however, must trump this trick. In no other way can he win the balance of the tricks. He should then lead the ten of clubs. Y should now lead the jack of hearts. If B trumps, Z should overtrump and thus win the balance of the tricks. If B refuses to trump, Z should also discard. Z should continue the heart lead for two more rounds, discarding if B does. On the sixth trick, B and Z each have two trumps but Z has the tenace position and must win both tricks. This is a situation that comes up repeatedly and should be carefully studied. The trumping of a good trick to shorten one's trump holding has been called the "Grand Coup" and is a play that all the experts love to brag about. Study over this problem and if you understand the principles and application you will be surprised how often you will have a similar opportunity.

Celebrating With Pancakes.

WHERE THE MARDI GRAS IS A FESTIVAL OF JOY.

Shrove Tuesday is regarded throughout the Christian world as a day of festivities and wild joy. With forty days of abstinence and penance before them, the people indulge in a riot of happiness on the last two days of their freedom. It is a sort of advance recompense for the sobriety of the ensuing period.

In all Catholic countries, the loveliest of pageants and celebrations mark these days. Masked balls, flower-battles, revelry and glorious hilarity are the order of the day. In Nice, in Venice, in Rome, we find the most ancient reports of Shrove Tuesday carnivals. France and England celebrate the day with sports of all sorts and processions.

In England cock-fighting, bear baiting and pancake-throwing always marked the celebration of Shrove Tuesday. And everywhere, masked processions wended their joyful way through the thronged streets.

The Mardi Gras of New Orleans is one of the most famous of these yearly spectacles and it is one of the most brilliant of social and public festivities. It was established in 1830 and since that time it has steadily grown in importance until now it attracts travelers from all over the world.

The festivities begin at sunset on Monday. Bells, whistles, trumpets and yells announce the fact that the King, "Majesty Rex" as he is called, is about to ascend his throne. From banquets all over the city, the throngs gather in the streets to watch his approach. He and his escort visit the City Hall, get the keys to the city and they disappear until Shrove Tuesday. At 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning the procession is on.

The identity of the king is always a complete mystery. Not even the members of his court always know who he is. The secret is never revealed. Year after year the revellers bow to king after king and never know to whom they are bowing.

One of the unusual aspects of the New Orleans Mardi Gras is the fact that the mob is never masked. No woman wearing a mask would be admitted. Even the queen reveals her face. Majesty Rex is the only masked person in the festivities and his mask becomes a permanent hiding place for his identity.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Not long ago Richard Washburn Child told a story about a man who worked for an electric light company. It was this man's work to install lighting fixtures. A young lady expressed her wonderment that anybody could be satisfied with such a job.

Jimmie Birch made a wonderful reply. It reminded me of that other book where the Master proudly exclaimed, "I am the Drain Man!" Jimmie said: "Most people don't realize how much light affects life. Why, I've lighted dining rooms in this city in a way that has prevented divorces. I can put lights in the front parlor of a workingman's cottage in a way that will keep his daughter off the streets. I can light a night school so that students can actually think in it. And I am sure that I have lighted churches so that people could actually feel the worshipful atmosphere of the place."

Good for you Jimmie! I'm with you!

How anybody can flounder around in a dim religious light and feel religious I could never understand. How anybody can imagine a dining table is made more seductive by the dim light of a half-dozen red candles, is beyond me.

Man loves the sunshine. He wants the light to flood the very corners of the room. Nobody can be happy to live always in the twilight.

I have told you many times of the economical trustees who built a blind asylum without windows. Since the inmates could not see, the trustees thought it was a sad waste of money to put expensive windows in the building.

Of course the poor inmates sickened and died when they were deprived of the beneficial rays of the sun. The healing and growing qualities of light are just as important as the illuminating powers. We must have light to be all we want to be.

Neither can we escape the psychological effects of light. We have always associated gloom with sadness and darkness with evil. Children readily learn to fear the dark and the animals seek the sunny spots.

There is cheer in the glow of an open fire and hospitality in the brilliant lighting of the rooms. The shadeless windows which permit the rays of light to cross the lawn and to dance out over the snow, are the certain signs of a real welcome to a happy home.

Health is influenced by the surroundings. Things which add cheer and promote happiness, make the heart beat more rapidly and strongly. They stimulate the body and give vigor to the brain and nervous system.

I think Jimmie Birch has the right view of life. He states a solemn truth when he says "light affects life." It does. Let us have light!

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

THE LITTLE STRANGER IN PALE GREEN.

"Have you seen her? Have you seen her?" gasped Johnny Grasshopper to Creaky Cricket and the Tumblebug twins. "Oh, but she is a dear, dainty little Lady."

"What in the world is the trouble with you?" questioned Creaky Cricket merrily. "One would think you had seen a ghost or something."

"Who is the Lady, this dainty, dear little Lady?" laughed Tilly Tumblebug. "Oh, Johnny Grasshopper, but you're funny. I never have seen you so up-set before in all my life."

"Who Is the Lady?"

"Whew! I never have been," answered Johnny Grasshopper, mopping his face with his front feet. "Why, it's our new neighbor. I don't know her name. Haven't you seen her? She is about as long as I am, of a lovely pale green shade. The back of her body isn't quite as thick as mine; then the front part narrows down to a very slender neck, and the cutest little three-cornered head you ever saw. I never saw a head like it. It's so fixed on her slender neck that she can turn it anyway she wants to. Two lovely green eyes are in the two upper corners of her head, above which wave two soft feelers."

"How many legs has she?" questioned Tilly Tumblebug. "I hope six, for all gentle folks have six."

"Well, now, come to think of it," and Johnny Grasshopper scratched his head, "she has four legs attached to the back part of her green body, up under her neck, you might say, she has two more legs or hands, but she keeps them up in front of her most of the time. Sh, here she comes now. I'll bet anything you'll all like her. She's so dainty and——"

"Good morning friends," said the little Lady in Green, "I hope I'm not intruding."

"Indeed you are not," replied Tilly Tumblebug, who, like Johnny Grasshopper, fell head-over-heels in love with the stranger. "I'm Tilly Tumblebug. This is my twin sister, Johnny Grasshopper, and Creaky Cricket, all your neighbors."

"And I am Lady Praying Mantis," replied the little Lady in Green, bowing politely to each in turn. "I'm very glad to know you all." Lady Praying Mantis astonished her new friends, by showing them four little pale green wings she had hidden on her back. "I just wanted you to know I had them," she declared. Then she twisted her funny little three-cornered head first one way, then another until everybody laughed. "Well, I don't blame you for laughing, I guess there are not many of you that can twist you heads as I can."

So it came about that Lady Praying Mantis won the hearts of every one in that meadow and Johnny Grasshopper took her from one house to the other introducing her.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 16.

Although there may be found some adverse figures in this day's astrological chart, yet the influence may not make for a downright failure of well directed efforts. At worst, there may be annoyances and complexities, and with proper attention to important affairs, moderate success is assured. In all social, domestic and affectional relations there may be lively and gratifying episodes, since Venus is in happy aspect with Luna.

Those whose birthday it is may reap a moderate success in their business interests by proper attention, despite some slight annoyances or complications. In the realm of heart and home affiliations there may be happy and prosperous conditions. New projects should be postponed. A child born on this day may be talented and accomplished and also well liked. It should make a moderate success of its affairs if it be properly grounded in perseverance and straight forwardness.

MOSUL DECISION FAVORS BRITAIN

Vilayet Is Awarded To Iraq Provided Britain Renews Mandate.

GIVES TURKS RIGHTS.

(By Henry, United Press Staff Correspondent)

GENEVA, Dec. 15 — A decision favorable to Britain was handed down by the League of Nations' Council today in the Mosul dispute between Turkey and Britain. The Council decided to award Mosul, the valuable oil district, to Iraq, provided Britain renewed her mandate over Iraq for 25 years, and undertook to negotiate a Turko-British economic treaty granting the Turks commercial privileges in Mosul.

The council took its decision in a one hour secret session confirming an agreement determined upon yesterday. The decision is provisional pending receipt of formal assurances from London accepting the mandate with all provisions governing mandated territories, inasmuch as the renewal of the mandate hitherto exercised by Britain necessitates parliamentary approval.

Will Make Adjustment

GENEVA, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press)—Making a definite committment as to Great Britain's future intentions concerning Mosul in case the League Council's decision should be favourable to the British thesis, L.C.M. Amery, secretary for the British Colonies, in a statement to the press last night, declared that the British Government would be only too willing to discuss with Turkey any minor adjustments of arrangements.

This would be, he said, with the idea of making the situation mutually more satisfactory and conducive to the establishment of permanent good relations. The British spokesmen told British press correspondents last night that Great Britain was quite ready to accept the so-called Brussels line if the Council so decided.

SONG SERVICE

Favorite Hymns Were Sung in Time Usually Allotted to Sermon.

BETHANY, December 15. — On Sunday evening, the services in the United Church, took the form of a song service. The pastor, Rev. A. Poulter, read for his lesson Psalm 34, and in the usual place for text and sermon Mr. Poulter chose some well known and dearly loved hymns, which were sun gheartily by the congregation, led by the choir. Mr. Poulter told the life history of the author and what prompted the writing of the particular hymn used.

Some of the hymns sung were—"Rock of Ages." "Abide with Me." "I Gave my Life for Thee," while a great many others were referred to, among them being "My Faith Looks up to Thee," and "Just as I Am, Without one Plea."

Preston Defeat Petes 4-3 in Overtime Semi-Final of S.P.A. Series

PETES YIELD S.P.A. TROPHY AFTER YEAR'S POSSESSION, LOSING SEMI-FINAL GAME TO DAD ASHLEY'S GANG

Preston Tied Up the Contest Before Full Time and Batted in the Winning Goal in Over time.

GUNNER ARNOTT WORRIED THE PETES

Locals Displayed Best Form of Season and Deserved to Win—Jerry Laflamme Enraged as Coach.

(By F.D.C.)

Outlucked rather than outplayed and looking infinitely better in defeat than they did in victory over Kitchener last week, the Peterboro Seniors were eliminated from the S.P.A. Series by Preston in the semi-final game at the Toronto Arena last night, the Riversides winning a grand game by 4 goals to 3 after ten minutes of overtime.

The Petes came from behind to take the lead in the last period only to have victory snatched from their grasp just when the right to meet Port Arthur in the finals seemed to have been securely won.

The prowess of one player, "Gunner" Arnott, formerly of Belleville, was the factor that dropped the Petes into the discard. Elusive and tricky, most dangerous when close in, it was Arnott who flashed inside to tie the score three minutes before the end of the game and again it was Arnott who followed in fast on his own shot in the overtime and scooped in a rebound off the end of the arena to win the verdict for Preston. Arnott also scored the Riversides' first goal, thus being responsible for three of his teams four counters.

The Petes, however, should have won.

There is no apple-sauce in that statement.

They had far more license to have beaten Preston last night than they had to defeat Kitchener last week.

Petes Outplayed Preston.

In the Kitchener game they were a mile below form and were dead lucky to win; last night they outplayed Preston from start to finish, had five shots to one throughout and were extremely unfortunate to lose.

It was a disappointment to the Petes not to reach the finals against the Allan cup holders their first defeat after six successive victories in the S.P.A. series last year and this was brightened by the fact that the team returned to its last season form last night and for the first time looked like the outfit that won so much renown in the previous campaign.

Make no mistake about it the Petes played smart hockey last night. They had a world of speed, showed a lot of clever stickhandling and played with a dash and aggressiveness that delighted the small coterie of fans who made the trip to the Queen City. Save in their failure to cash in on their opportunities to score, the Petes showed little resemblance to the outfit which beat Kitchener last Wednesday. On that occasion their form was a decided disappointment and the improvement shown against Preston was so marked that it atoned for the sting of a tough luck loss.

And last night's defeat was undoubtedly in that category.

Battled Against Breaks.

After badly outplaying Preston in the initial stages only to finish the first period behind one goal to nothing, and the second two to one, the Petes battled on in the face of break after break going against them, finally had the satisfaction of tieing the score and taking the lead, and then when their triumph seemed assured a smart play by Gunner Arnott changed the whole complexion of affairs.

The Petes played a brand of hockey that should have won, they had far more oportunities to score than the winners and, although the fortunes of war decided that Preston and not themselves should reach the final game for the trophy that the blue and white won so brilliantly last season, the performance of the Petes gives ample grounds for optimism in regard to the O.H.A. race.

LaFlamme To Coach.

The fact that Jerry LaFlamme, former St. Michael's hockey star and now equally famous as a referee, has consented to coach the Petes, on top of what the outfit showed last night gives reason for the brightest of hopes.

The material is there for a crack outfit and with the benefit of LaFlamme's helpful suggestions the Petes should be a powerful machine when they open their O.H.A. campaign on New Years' Day.

As in the Kitchener game, Bert McLeod, although far from being in condition, was the Petes' outstanding player last night. The veteran defence man worked himself into the ground and had to retire several times but his effective rushing put all kinds of fight into the Petes. He shot down in raid after raid, going through the Preston team a half a dozen times in spectacular fashion and it was the toughest kind of luck that only one of these dashes was rewarded with a goal. Twice McLeod shot over the net with ohly Schmaltz to beat, an unusual performance for him.

Harold Parker, handicapped by a sore leg, turned in a great card nevertheless, his long poke check wrecking many an attack while he also contributed some effective rushing.

Front Line Better.

All the forwards gave a much better performance than on their last time out. Ranger's poke checking mussed up many Preston plays and he did some fine stickhandling on his own account. Bailey was going at top speed in the early stages and scored Peterboro's first goal on a brilliant effort, but a heavy body check from Skelly as Bailey let drive from outside the defence to beat Schmaltz left the Petes' right winger badly shaken up and he finished the game on his nerve, having to be given frequent rests. Collins' great backchecking was a thorn in Preston's side all night and he was also effective going the other way, while Rose, used in all three positions on the forward line and as a relief for McLeod as well gave a good account of himself whenever he was called upon to serve. Cox and Bogardis both turned in useful games and were used frequently.

It was a peculiar game for Joe Dwyer who hadn't a quarter of the shots to deal with that he had to handle in the Kitchener fixture and yet was given little chance to save on any of the four that beat him. At that the Petes goaler made some fine stops of close in drives.

Arnott, of course, was the Preston star, not so much because he scored three goals but because his trio of counters were made possible by his own efforts, all three being the result of clever individual work by the former Belleville boy, Dad Ashley the defence star and Schmaltz the little goalie were the other Preston heroes. The Petes succeeded in kepeing Ashley off the score sheet but he did some pretty rushing and was very effective on the defence. Schmaltz performed spectacularly in the nets. There is no particular style to this boy but he continues to get some part of his outfit in front of the shot and he beat the Petes time after time when they were within scoring range.

Clarke was the Riersides best forward after Arnott, the left winger showing a barrel of speed and helping his team immensely by his backchecking.

It was a great game of hockey with scarcely a dull moment. The teams set a hectic pace and the see saw nature of the scoring added to the thrills from the spectators' viewpoint.

The line up:

Preston.

Goal—Schmaltz.
Defence—Talbot, Ashley.
Centre—Arnott.
Right wing—Groh.
Subs—Skelly, Burns, Groh, Julke, Ware.

Peterboro.

Goal—Dwyer.
Defence—Parker, McLeod.
Centre—Collins.
Right wing—Bailey.
Subs—Rose, Burgess, Bogardis, Cox.

Referee—M. J. Rodden, Toronto.

The Petes opened the first period with a burst of speed. They were all over the Riversides and they skated away from the Preston forwards so fast and buzzed in around the Preston nets so persistently that a Peterboro victory seemed assured. Right of the reel Bert McLeod uncorked a splendid rush and Schmaltz had to move fast to stop his low shot. A lone rush by Bailey gave the Preston goalie another chance to shine and a few moments later Bailey, Collins and Ranger almost scored on a pretty passing rush. Preston seemed unable to shake the Petes off and it was five minutes after the start before they made a dangerous rush, on Ashley-Arnott play giving Dwyer his first real shot to handle. McLeod retaliated with a rink length rush in which he worked right inside by beautiful stickhandling, only to shoot over the top of the net.

And after all this attacking by the Petes it was Preston who finally scored. Seven minutes after the start Arnott pickel up a loose puck at mid ice, got away from the Petes' forwards, slipped between the defence and caught the top of the net with a swift high shot.

The Petes returned to the attack with a vengeance but close-in opportunities were missed by inches or were foiled by Schmaltz. McLeod repeated his feat of the early part of the period by carrying the rubber through the whole Preston team and then shoot over the net. Although the Petes had three shots to one for the rest of the period they could not score and the Riversides were a goal in front after twenty minutes of hockey in which they were distinctly outplayed.

Early in the second period Collins drew the only Peterboro penalty of the game for hooking but Preston were held safe while he was off and when the sides were even again the Petes battled valiantly to sew up the game. They had opportunities enough but could not cash in on them. Half way through the period Bert McLeod went off for a breathing spell and almost immediately after Preston increased their lead when Groh broke away and, shooting as he circled across the defence, beat Dwyer with a scoop shot.

The Petes came back with a bang and a minute after Bailey broke away, skated around Arnott at mid-ice and let drive a pretty shot as he reached the defence that completey beat Schmaltz. Skelly crashed into the Petes right winger as he shot and Bailey was badly shaken up and had to retire for repairs. The bump took a lot out of the Petes' captain. For the balance of the period honors were fairly even.

Early in the third session the Petes tied up the game, taking advantage of a penalty to Talbot, who drew the gate for tripping Bailey. From the face off that followed the puck travelled over to Ranger, who beat Schmaltz with a shot from the side. For the next few minutes the Preston goaler was the busiest man in the arena. The Petes attacked almost continuously and were finally rewarded when McLeod broke away in a beautiful rush that wound up in a swift shot that crashed past Schmaltz and the Petes were in front for the first time.

It looked like a Petterboro victory with only a few minutes to go, but Gunner Arnott saved the day for Preston. Coming back on the ice after a rest, with only three minutes to go, Arnott almost immediately tied the score with a repetition of the play that earned him his first goal. He worked inside by good stickhandling and his fast high shot crashed into the top of the net putting the teams on even footing, and they remained that way when the period ended.

The first five minutes of overtime saw the deadlock maineained, with the teams setting a lightning fast clip, but they hardly switched over for the second five minutes when Arnott won the decision for Preston Taking the puck from the face off he drilled a shot from outside the defence that went wide of the nets and then dashed in at top speed to scoop the rubber past Dwyer as it rebounded from the boards. It was quick thinking and quick action and it won the game for Preston, although the Petes battled until the bell rang and came with in an ace of tieing it up more than once. McLeod nearly turned the trick with a fine rush on which Cox took a close in shot which Schmaltz blocked to save the game. McLeod was hurt in the play and got a great hand from the crowd as he was helped off the ice. Preston shot the rubber down the ice to kill time and preserved their slender lead until the gong rang.

VICTORIAS READY FOR PORT ARTHUR

Exhibition Game Wednesday Night in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 15 (Canadian Press)—Montreal Victorias Senior Champions of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, concluded their training with a practice last night for their game with the Canadian amateur champion Port Arthur club at the Forum on Wednesday. The team held practices every night of last week and are reported in the best of shape.

The locals will not be greatly changed from the one that last season landed the Quebec title and gave such strong opposition to Niagara Falls in the Allen Cup play offs. With two exceptions the regulars will again be found in their old positions. "Gri" Scott will be missing from the nets as he is at present on a business trip in the Western provinces. His place will be taken by Hugh McCormick, last season with the Provincial champion Montreal amateur athletic association intermediate team. Sig Slater will start in 'Boo' Anderson's position at centre ice and a number of promising substitutes give the team a good outlook for the season.

Goal, McCormick; defence, Mallinson and Shirley; left wing, King; right wing, Valois; centre, Slater; subs, Bowles, Bunne, Parsons, Hodgson, Carlin and Larose.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

If the Tammany Tigers, senior western football champions, had been as strong as the junior representatives of the wide-open spaces, what a battle the game at Ottawa might have been! remarks the Hamilton Spectator. Regina's youngsters stepped into Montreal on Saturday, after a long and tiring train ride from the west, and battled the strong M.A.A.A. juniors off their feet for three quarters, losing by a 6 to 4 score that came as the result of a hard-earned try for the homesters in the final frame. Montreal trounced the strongest junior teams in Eastern Canada to get the eastern title, and as the Pats came within an ace of beating them, they undoubtedly had a really fine team.

Tad Jones, famous Yale coach, is one football authority who thinks that Grange is inot the greatest football player of the day. In Jones' opinion, Grange does not rank with Jim Thorpe, when the Carlisle Indian was in his glory.

The possibility of an Eastern Canada professional soccer league will be interesting to one member of the Hamilton Michigan-Ontario Baseball league team. Clarence Roper, star infielder for the last two seasons, is a pro. soccer player of real ability, but the shortage of professional teams across the line prevents him from playing as much as he would like. With a strong league in Canada, Roper would undoubtedly make application. He has intimated as much on several occasions.

"Bucky" Harris, manager of the Washington Senators, is the first big hold-out of the winter season. Harris and Griffith, president of the club, are deadlocked over salary demands. The pilot thinks he has a substantial increase coming for heading the American league for two seasons and winning the world's title once. If the club fails in the race next year he is willing to take a cut. Griffith has made no move toward a settlement, but he hints that "there is no reason why another conference should not bring a settlement."

Bobby Eber, "the seventh wonder of the world," will undoubtedly hold to his word and give Vic Foley a return match in Vancouver, but it will hardly come off before the spring. Before the fight last week, when the Canadian crown changed hands, Eber promised Foley he would give him a return bout, but for the present the services of the new champion are in such great demand that he will not have an opportunity of leaving the east for some months. Toronto promoters want Eber to fight some of the top-notch bantams from across the line, and the Miracle Man will likely get into action against some of them right after the New Year. A series of fights in the near future may lead to a scrap for the world's title.

This Montreal team cannot be overlooked in the N.H.L. race. On their standing so far they look about the strongest and best-balanced squad in the hunt for the Prince of Wales trophy and the Calder pennant. Ottawa is at the head of the list with four games won and one lost, but the Maroons and Pittsburgh are tied with them in the point standing, for all three teams have won four games and the latter two have played one more than the Sentaors. The Maroons have scored 20 goals against 12, or four more goals on the right side than St. Pats, who come next. Canadiens, in past years rated a fast-scoring machine, have accounted for only seven counters in five games and have had 16 registered against them.

HOCKEY EXODUS ACROSS BORDER

Senators, Maroons and Canadiens Left Montreal Last Night.

U. S. INVASION.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 15 (Canadian Press)—There was a general exodus of professional hockey players and supporters from Montreal last night when Montreal Maroons, Canadiens and the Ottawa Senators all left for destinations across the border. Twenty cars were required to transport the players and club followers.

The league-leading Ottawa Senators were passing through on their way to Boston where they will play the Bruins in a National Hockey League fixture tonight. Canadiens and the bulk of the hockey fans, some 250 strong, were bound for New York where Canadiens are to battle the New York Americans in the first pro hockey game in the new Madison Square Garden — a game which will mark New York's official entry into the league contests at home.

The Montreal Maroons left a day earlier than necessary that they might witness the New York inauguration before proceeding to Pittsburgh where they will play the Pirates Wednesday night.

It is likely that Canadiens will use Herbie Rheaume, former Ottawa and Quebec amateur goalkeeper in the game at New York tomorrow night. Rheaume showed smart net guarding in a workout with the Canadiens yesterday morning.

By CHESTER HORTON

It is true that expert players often make very long shots using woods when the ball is in the rough. This doesn't imply that the wood is advisable for such shots so much as it indicates that the expert player knows how to appraise his shot and knows how to make the wood behave in the circumstances There are various degrees of rough. Sometimes the grass may be only slightly longer than fairgreen grass, and also whether it is dry has considerable to do with it. Thin dry grass, even though designated as rough, might offer a better opportunity for the brassie or spoon than the fairway itself. But the player should always reckon on moisture being squeezed from the grass onto the ball, so hit down on the ball and straight through it. If moisture then adheres to the ball it have have the best chance you can give it to break downward to the ground and roll if the mosture affects its flight at all.

BATTLING SIKI IS MURDERED

Senegalese Pugilist Found Dead in New York Street.

WOUND IN BACK.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15. (Canadian Press).—"Battling" Siki, the Senegalese pugilist, whose real name was Louis Phal, was found murdered early to-day on the lower West Side. Death had been caused by either a gunshot or a knife wound in the back. The body was found lying face downward on the sidewalk about 100 feet east of Ninth Avenue, in the district known as "Hell's Kitchen." Identity was established by Policeman John J. Meehan, a friend of Siki's, who found the body.

Patrolman Meehan said he had met the Senegalese fighter a short distance from where the body was found a little after midnight, and that they had exchanged greetings. Siki, Patrolman Meehan said, shouted that he was on his way home. The Senegalese lived with his wife and a pet monkey. Four hours later Patrolman Meehan was walking through 41st Street when he saw the body of a man lying on the sidewalk. He turned the body over and recognized Siki. A revolver was found in the gutter a short distance away, from which two shots had been fired, and it was believed by the police that the weapon was used to commit the murder and then thrown away as the slayer fled from the scene. It is the theory of the detectives working on the case that he went into one of the numerous night clubs nearby and became involved in an argument and that he was followed into the street and murdered.

NEVER ANOTHER 70,000 GATE FOR PROFESSONAL RUGBY IN GOTHAM

Immense Crowd Disappointed By Mediocre Game on Sunday.

GRANGE THE MAGNET.

NEW ORK, Dec 15.—Professional football Yaind its greatest height at the Polo Grounds Sunday afternoon, when 70,000 spectators—most of whom had paid for their tickets—assembled to see the Chicago bears play and defeat the New York Giants.

The magnet for this bumper outpouring was, of course, Red Grange, who played left halfback for the Chicago team. Exploited only as Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth have been, this young athlete is entitled to the sole credit of causing such furore over a game of football between two mediocre, mercenary teams, a furore such as might be expected of a world's series baseball contest, or a ring battle for the world's heavyweight championship.

Crowd Apathetic.

Only the furore did not last long. When the mammoth throng discovered that Grange, for one reason or another, including lack of effective interference or poor footing, was not going to produce any of his famous long-distance crow-hopping stuff, complete apathy became dominant.

Continuous line-bucking and punting and sloppy forward-passing do not affect the spirit of the crowd at an intercollegiate game because of the intense partisan spirit that prevails; every inch gained, every little advantage sets into frenzy one side or the other of a college gathering. Enthusiasm never ceases, and all the circumstances and color of a crucial game between university teams does not wane.

That was the great flaw in the Polo Grounds show—lack of zing. In this respect it was about the most spiritless athletic exhibition which the writer has seen since he attended a previous pro football game. A pretty poor show, all told. If Grange had been able to get away on any one of the runs that had made him famous the situation would have been helped materially.

What They Wanted.

But he did not and when in the last quarter he stood on the spot where Jack Dempsey kayoed Firpo, and intercepted a forward pass and ran for a touchdown with no one to oppose the crowd began to quit the stands in droves. They had seen what they had come to see, and they knew it would not happen again that afternoon; so they went home. And they did not act like persons who felt they had received their money's worth. To be perfectly frank, when Grange was withdrawn toward the end of the first half the sagging of interest in the contest was a painful thing to contemplate. And when in the third quarter he did not appear at all it seemed as if the stand would collapse with boredom.

"We want Grange!" angrily at first, then desperately and then the thunderous chant rolled around the field and out on the gridiron. "Bring on the ice man!" and then, "Gypped by heck!"

It would seem that educators and those who wish to keep football supremacy in the hands of the colleges need never worry about the pro game. It lacks elements essential to its large success. And while promoters may make a living it certainly does not seem that the drab stuff on exhibition at the Polo grounds Sunday can ever menace so fine and clean a game as intercollegiate football.

Even Grange's famous 77 became obliterated by the mud after five minutes of play, and three-quarters of the time no one knew whether or not he was doing anything or whether he was on the field.

But his reception when he first galloped up on the gridiron and his jersey was nice and clean was really tremendous. An old New Yorker would have to go back through the years to the time when Admiral Dewey returned from the Philippines to obtain an adequate analogy.

He was cheered, roared at, backslapped and addressed in most familiar terms. He posed for movie cameras and for stills, eminent citizens grasped his hand and looked unutterably proud of the whole business. The band played "Hail to the Chief." In brief, being, as they say, an unspoiled young man fresh from college he must have wondered greatly.

Back To Other Days.

One thought of Urbana, where Red went to college—a beautiful educational seat, full of dignified trees, fine buildings and lawns; the visitor there is struck by an inspiring combination of intellectual solidity and the bravery of athletic prowess.

And then of other arenas where Grange as an undergraduate won his fame, all no less alluring—Ohio State's big, beautiful ampitheater set in its stately collegiate environment; Minnesota's artistic stadium which overlooks the attractive domain of the Gopher university; and so on throughout all the college towns which in the course of Red's undergraduate career have seen his exploits and applauded them.

Looking about the Polo Grounds stands with its huge Sunday crowd of sport lovers, curiosity seekers, hero worshipers, and what not, one wondered whether this lad of Wheaton could appreciate the significance of his transition from the classic shades to this maelstrom of mercenary sport. Possibly as a student he may have had some acquaintance with the satires of old Juvenal. If so, his philosophical view upon his initial dip into the valley of dollars that lies under Coogan's Bluff might be worth as much to the thinking few as his touchdowns are worth to the average fan.

The New York Crowd.

It was not a college crowd that filled the stands at the Polo Grounds Sunday—far from it. There were college folk present, of course. For who does not wish to see the great Grange plant his cleats into sequential yards of turf? But the collegians were lost in a huge, roaring palpitant human medly such as can be found only in the metropolis when a heralded sporting event of magnitude is on.

Any cross section of this crowd would have yielded names to be found in all city records, ranging from the card index at police headquarters to the social register.

As for the teams the Chicago eleven evidently had paid some attention to coach and trainers; New York suggested that it had done a great deal of neither. Chicago was a team—only a fair team by the way—and New York was composed of individuals—all of whom used to be good, and the score was 19 to 7.

Finally not even Grange is likely to drag such another crowd out on a pleasant Sunday afternoon—not in New York anyway.

OLD COUNTRY SOCCER NEWS

Close upon half a million fans attended the games in England, and although nineteen games in the second round of the English Cup were scheduled the first Division League games were better patronized. To teams like Durham City, Newport County, Luton Town, Brentford, Watford, Darlington, Bradford and Gilingham the 1925 cup competition is so soon nothing but an unpleasant memory. The results of league games made little or no difference in the standings.

Hard luck attended several teams, Queen's Park Rangers were winning their cup game with Charlton Athletic, when Figg, without being hard pressed, ten minutes from the end, unluckily shot straight into his own goal, the game ending in a draw, one goal all.

Fulham seemed well beaten at one period of their Second Division game with Port Vale. They staged a spectacular rally and got on top only to be robbed of victory by a last minute goal, which made the affair a draw. Coventry had bad luck with a goal kick, which their goal keeper muffed, and Hartlepools won by three goals to two.

Rapid Scoring.

There was an orgy of scoring in the last seven minutes of the Leeds United-Manchester City game, won by the latter by 4 to 3. In this brief period five goals were scored. There was a scene at Crewe during the local team's cup tie with Wigan over a disputed goal. The game was held up for several minutes and ended in a draw of 2 to 2.

One of the finest performances of the day was the defeat of Southampton by Sheffield Wednesday, the latter winning 2 to 1, showing real promotion form.

The West Ham-Birmingham game was a tragic one for Morley of the "Hammers." In the second half he gave away a penalty from which Birmingham scored, equalizing the score at 2 to 2, at which the match ended. Earlier he had misjudged the distance and in attempting to kick back to his goal keeper presented the opposing centre forward with an easy shot on goal.

FAMOUS COACH IS PERTURBED

Knute Rockne Given "Dirty Deal" By Some One.

VISITS NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Columbia athletic officials will start an investigation to determine the responsibility for the statement that Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football coach, had signed a three-year contract to coach at Columbia.

The football committee was said to have admitted the responsibility for the statement issued to the press, but one of the members of the committee said that James R. Knapp, chairman, had told him that Rockne had written on December 7 that he couldn't get his release at Notre Dame, and that the deal was off.

After a day of hectic conferences Saturday, Rockne said that he had been given a "dirty deal," and that the statement issued by Columbia officials that they didn't know he was under contract at Notre Dame was an attempt to put him in a bad light with the public.

Rockne returned to Notre Dame Sunday to see if he still had a job there.

"I'm just an employee at Notre Dame," he said, "and if the faculty doesn't want me after what has happened. I'll have to look for another job." Coach Rockne said he was to sail on January 6 for a month's vacation. In France—the first he has had in ten years.

It is understood that Charley Crowley, Rockne's team-mate at Notre Dame and the coach at Columbia last season, is going to Harvard, and Columbia is now without a coach.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS IN "THE BEAUTIFUL CITY."

The charm of the youthful star, Richard Barthelmess, and of Dorothy Gish, who is the leading feminine character in "The Beautiful City," makes it a notable and entertaining picture. Those who have seen this dark eyed young man in his characterizations of old time cavaliers, will like him just as well in the role of Tony Gillardi, the Italian flower-vendor of New York streets. There are moments when Barthelmess steps out of the Italian part and becomes distinctively American, but there aren't any moments when he fails to hold the interest and sympathy of his audience. Idealistic and young and clean, with the eyes of a dreamer, he sees self-sacrifice as something absolutely unescapable and when the clutches of the law twine themselves about his elder brother, Carlo, his mother's favorite, and the weak one of the family, he goes to jail instead, taking the blame for theft on his own shoulders. Nobody but Barthelmess, with his tense young face and his dreamer's outlook on life, could put this across in just the same way, and he gives an aspect of absolute realism to the scenes that convey his unalterable purpose and the sacrifice he makes for what he thinks is right. Even if the audience feels disgusted with his useless sacrifice, it can't help but admire the dark lad and rejoice with him when things come out right in the long run.

Tony makes love to his girl, Mollie O'Connor, on the steps of the fire escape that decorates their tenement home. He serenades her with a mouth organ and the strains of "The wearing of the Green," and takes her to the "Automat," where one gets a cup of coffee for a nickel, as a diversion. He cannot understand the hold that Nick di Silva (William Powell) has on his weaker brother, Carlo, but he determines to break it. The berserk fury of righteous wrath comes to him on the night of his return from prison, when Nick still haunts Carlo's life, and the two have a terribly realistic fight on the stage of a Chinese theatre, scattering the slant-eyed patrons of the show in unholy terror of the two struggling men.

It is a story of New York, the New York of the tenements, and the mean streets, with the light of "a city beautiful," in the minds of the two young things who make love on the front door steps and go on a honeymoon trip to Coney Island. Tony should have been a young Irishman, because the Irish are supposed to value their dreams more than the realities of life, but he is a dark-eyed young Italian American, and puts it over in splendid style. "The Beautiful City" is full of human interest, realism, and the romance of youth and love under difficulties.

A very popular addition to the programme last evening was the Charleston Revue, given by a number of local young ladies and children, under direction of Miss May Perry. Loud, enthusiastic, and repeated applause greeted every moment of this sparkling interval. Miss Perry gave a solo interpretation of the New Charleston that brought her a double encore, and this was followed by five young ladies who went through the same saucy, nimble figures. A trio of tiny girls finished the Revue, doing the Charleston in the same sophicated style as their elders. The costuming for the dance is particularly attractive. The "Charleston jazz costume," as worn by this group, is a combination of black and white, with tight black bodices, white-frilled divided skirts, ending at the knee, and saucy white ruffles at neck and wrist. It is particularly adapted to the wriggling movements of the new dance. Those taking part under Miss Perry's direction were the Misses Mary Dunlop, Dorothy Graham, Alma Stinchcombe, Kathleen Cooney and Mathilda Dunlop, with tiny tots in Moira Cotts, Dorothy Cooney and Sophia Yeotes. —Jeannette.

MODERN MAIDS OF JAPAN SEEK INDEPENDENCE

Uncertainty of Matrimonial Future Causes Influx to Professions.

MORAL CHANGES.

Athletic Trend and Dress of Occident Partially Responsible.

By DR. S. WASHIO
(of the Japan Advertiser Staff)
(Written for the United Press)

TOKYO, Dec. 12 (By mail to the United Press).—In the conference of principals of the girls' high schools recently called by the order of the Monbusho the foremost question discussed was the extent to which girl students are affected by "dangerous thoughts."

The unanimous opinion of the conference was that they are affected little in their way of thinking but that morally they are changing fast. Particularly, it was said, girls are losing the old fashioned sense of shame and the growing vogue of athletic sport was felt to be the principal cause. It might have been added that the fashion of dressing in the Western style is another reason.

However, what is there to be deplored in the modern girl's losing that bashfulness that was the characteristic of their grandmothers? Our new girls so far are simply throwing away the shackles of the old tradition that has no virtue in the changed modern environment. This is a part of liberal education and a tendency to be encouraged. And in so far as athletic exercise is on the whole not to be condemned and the growing fashion for the Western dress among children and young girls can't possibly be reversed, the moral change from bashfulness to freedom is, in fact, to be encouraged.

Nevertheless, the conference's apprehension about "moral laxity" is not unfounded. The real problem begins when the girl students so splendidly recovering their birth right as children of nature are graduated and face practical life.

A neighbor of the writer has four girls and every one of them is being prepared for a profession. He tells me that a chance for matrimony is now-a-days so undependable that the girls must have a profession to support themselves. That is a universal tendendy in the middle class family. The time is gone when girls after graduating from the higher schools stay at home learning sewing, a bit of music or the art of flower arrangement, and otherwise preparing for matrimony.

No girl today will sit idly at home waiting bashfully for a chance that is one to ten. They have to make their own way in the world or have to remain miserably dependent on their fathers or brothers. And most girls instead of feeling the old sense of shame feel that to remain thus inactive with such miserable prospects is the most shameful thing to do.

In a symposium of professional girl's outlooks on life I have just been reading there is one example that is typical of a great majority. After graduating from the girls' high school this girl entered a typist training school, finished its courses and sought employment. She found it in a certain trading concern where, except the telephone operator, she was the only girl employee among some dozen men.

She is remarkably self possessed girl and besides performing her routine tasks she watched carefully the conduct of her male associates. She soon found that they could be divided into two categories; those who had grown up in the concern as apprentices and those who were university graduates. The one worked on a fixed salary averaging 100 yen a month and the other on a commission basis netting from three to five times this sum.

The men of the practical set spent liberally among geisha girls and whenever they were not working talked proudly and with disgusting taste about their new "exploits." She feels that by marrying one of them she may be financially well supported but there will always be a moral danger. Besides, her own education and taste rebel against the idea of sharing life with such a man.

But when she sees a married man of the poorer paid class wearing a worn-out and re-dyed suit of clothes eating surreptitiously a home-made lunch she shrinks instinctively from the idea of marriage. She says that she is still twenty-two and has not yet despaired of having her own family, but after seeing this practical society of men she can't marry blindly, even if she has to remain an old maid.

The girl puts her problem very rationally. But what if the same problem, the same shyness and disillusion from married life is faced by less balanced girls? What if this girl herself has to endure much longer the same hopeless society of men with greater temptation and under the influence of crowd psychology?

Our young girls, unless they are insensible, must of necessity be morally different from their elders. It is not the preservation of the old sense of shame but a new moral integrity adapted to this changed circumstance of life that is required. In such a transition period as this country is facing now with its economic structure more undependable than the people's moral character, a certain degree of moral laxity revealed in the fashion of "modern girls" and increasing divorce and women's desertion of home and children is, indeed, inevitable.

It is not a phenomenon to be checked by the irrelevant counsel of educators. What kind of moral integrity is ultimately going to take the place of the old homely sense of shame is a question to be left to further development, but it seems certain that our home life has to be much more simplified and that there must be moral sanction for birth control, instead of its being a criminal act punishable by law.

It is certain that our new girls, whatever the law may be, will not consent to be the same prolific child bearers their mothers were. They may even come to consider marriage as an accident and not an indispensable condition to women's life. And 10 years from now we may see for better or worse a different prospect in the population question of this country. Nothing less than this seems to be involved in this moral conflict between the new tendency and the old habit.

GENERAL SAYS WAR WILL COME

"Useless To Deceive Ourselves," Says General MacBrien at Ottawa.

BE PREPARED.

OTTAWA, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—"It is useless to deceive ourselves into believing that there will not be another war," said Major-General J. H. MacBrien, to members of the Anglican Fellowship Club here last evening. General MacBrien stated that the cause for this next war to come might well be the adjustment of frontiers in European countries.

"The most efficient way of delaying this war," continued the chief of the general staff," is to be prepared by up-to-date knowledge of modern war methods and by readiness in point both of training of military officers and of possession of latest scientific devices and equipment."

CITY REJOICES WHEN GOVERNOR WINS VICTORIES

General Li Chang Lin, Governor of Chihli, Drove Armies Back From Tien-Tsin.

CHANG RETREATING.

Japan May Send Troops To Protect Citizens—Starvation in Peking.

TIENTSIN, Dec 15. (Canadian Press). — General Li Ching Lin, Governor of Chihli, has won victories on two fronts in the vicinity of Tientsin over the Kuominchun, the National People's Army, the head of which is Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang, who controls Peking. Foreigners arriving from the eastern front confirm reports that Ching's army at Heptang, 45 miles east of Tientson, has forced back the centre of the Kuominchun army, composed of inferior divisions, while 40miles to the south of this city another of the Governor's armies has defeated the second Kuominchun army at Machang. Tientsin was beflagged yesterday in celebration of the victories.

Japan May Send Troops.

TOKIO, Dec. 15. — (Canadian Press).—Official advices from Mukden, capital of Manchuria, report that the troops of Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian dictator, are retreating from Sinminfu and Mukden, and that looting is general. Japanese residents are panic-stricken. It is understood that the War Office is planning the hurried replacement of troops if the situation becomes more serious, and that additional troops will bring the total to more than the normal quota which at present is much decreased.

Peking Cut Off.

LONDON, Dec. 15. (Canadian Press).—A despatch to the Daily Express from Peking says access to the sea from the capital still remains blocked. As a consequence, the poor are suffering, many persons dying from starvation. General Feng Yu-Hsiang's wife heads the Red Cross.

SAY 'CHIMNEY FIRE.'

Fire Chief Deplores Necessity of Taking Out All Apparatus.

Fire Chief Gimblett again finds it necessary to call the attention of the citizens to the fact that when a chimney fire occurs the person calling the fire station should tell the man on watch that it is a chimney fire, otherwise it means that the whole equipment will be sent out and results in the men off duty being called in. It also boosts the pressure on the water mains, which causes them considerable harm. In the event of a chimney fire simply call 24 or 100 and say chimney fire.

JOHN W. LOWES.

BETHANY, December 15th. — A great number of friends and acquaintances gathered at the home of Donald Lowes on Sunday afternoon, to pay their last respects to a well-known citizen of Cavan who passed away suddenly on Thursday, in the person of the late John W. Lowes.

The service was conducted by Rev. A. Poulter, who spoke very comforting words to the bereaved wife, son and daughter, besides the brothers and sisters. Many beautiful flowers bore mute testimony of the love and respect felt for the deceased.

Interment was in the 9th line cemetery, Cavan, besides the remains of his first wife, and a daughter, who predeceased her father about 6 years ago. The pall bearers were Henry Lowes, Elias Lowes, George McBain, Tom McIndoo, Herbert Preston and Joe Staples.

WILLIAM RYERSON CONES.

Died at the residence of his son, Ernest Cones, Windsor, Ont., on December 10th, in his 92nd year, William Ryerson Cones, formerly of Bridgenorth, Ont.

He is survived by four sons and two daughters: John of Peterboro, William of Brantford, Ont., Myles of Orillia, Ernest of Windsor, Ont., and Jennie Cones of Windsor and Mrs. G. N. Gage, Detroit, Mich.

J. W. FITZGERALD.

The funeral of the late J. W. Fitzgerald, O.L.S., C.E., will take place from his late residence, 206 Smith Street, at 9.00 o'clock Wednesday morning and proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery

APPELLATE DIVISION TO SETTLE NORTH HURON ELECTION DISPUTE

Mr. Justice Mowat Rules That Case Be Heard in Supreme Court on Friday.

THIRD COURT CASE.

County Judge's Decision Was Reversed By Mr. Justice Wright.

TORONTO, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press).—"I believe that the matter is so important that it should be dealt with by the Supreme Court," said Mr. Justice Mowat at Osgoode Hall yesterday, in granting George Spoton, Conservative candidate in North Huron, the right to appeal from the decision of Mr. Justice Wright.

J. W. King, Progressive candidate, would automatically have been permitted to take the seat at Ottawa next month had he been successful in blocking the right to appeal. On the first count of the ballots, the Progressive had been declared elected, but on the recount before County Judge Lewis about 300 ballots were found to have counterfoils attached and were, therefore, not counted. On this recount, the Conservative was found to be elected. The decision was appealed by King before Mr. Justice Wright, who ruled that the 300 disputed ballots be counted; again giving him a majority of the votes cast, hence his efforts to prevent an appeal to the Appelate division.

In order that the candidate finally found to have been elected should not lose the privilege of taking the seat in Parliament when it convenes at Ottawa next month, Mr. Justice Mowat laid down the condition that the appeal be proceeded with in the Appelate division on Friday.

TWO MEN BELIEVED DROWNED IN GALE

Upturned Canoe Found Near Walpole Island.

WALLACEBURG, Ont., Dec. 16. (Canadian Press).—Provincial Constable Oliver, stationed at Wallaceburg, was yesterday notified concerning the mysterious disappearance of two men, Leslie Isaacs, an Indian of Walpole Island, and Robert Sidwell, of Detroit, a white man. The report states that both these men, who were employed at the Chris Smith boatbuilding works at Algonac, were seen to leave Port Lambton about 7 p.m. in a rowboat on Saturday, December 5, and were heading for Walpole Island. A boat which is believed to correspond with the one which was used by the two men was found by Dr. Monton, of Port Lambton, and Eliot Jackson, of Walpole Island, on Sunday morning on the Channel Bank in front of Monton's residence, capsized.

Residents on Walpole state that the Saturday night in question was the roughest night, accompanied by a heavy gale, which has been known in the last four years.

BOY WAS LABORER.

Also Says He Thinks People More in Favor of Inter-Empire Trade.

LONDON, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press) — "My own boy has been working as a farm laborer in Quebec since he left Eton, three years ago. He is back here now and has obtained a good position but he tells me that he is longing to return to Canada, and I certainly shall not stand in his way."

Thus spoke Sir Burton Chadwick, M.P., head of the firm of Joseph Chadwick and Sons, ship owners, Liverpool, in an address at the Canadian Chamber of Commerce here today.

Sir Burton Chadwick declared that neither free trade nor protection was a sacrosanct policy. He said he was convinced that, in any case, a great wave of feeling was spreading over the empire in favor of the people of the empire dealing almost exclusively amongst themselves rather than with foreigners.

PROBABLE CANDIDATES FOR THE CITY COUNCIL

Every Prospect of There Being a Good Field.

In addition to the names mentioned in yesterday's Examiner as probable candidates for aldermanic honors it is understood that Gordon Grier, Gilmour street, of the Canadian General Electric Company, will allow his name to go before the citizens on election day.

Mr. Grier has been a long time resident of the city, an outstanding man in the profession, and has a grasp of municipal affairs.

Another name is that of J. E. Corkery, barrister, a life long resident, and is well thought of throughout the entire community.

Other men are being approached to get into the field, and, if elected, take on a fair share of the responsibilities in the governing of the city. It is being pointed out to a number of men that it is a duty they owe to the city, and while they may be reluctant to give the time and attention required, it is only fair that the work and responsibility should be divided, and not rest on the shoulders of a few.

James B. Brown, ex-alderman, when told that rumor was naming him as a candidate for the position of alderman, said that he had received several requests but had not yet made any definite decision.

K. OF C. MEETING.

T. J. Begley, of Lindsay, Tells of Supreme Convention at Duluth.

The regular meeting of the Knights of Columbus, held in the assembly hall last evening, was featured by a very interesting address given by District Deputy T. J. Begley of Lindsay, who spoke in humorous and characteristic fashion on the side lights of the last Supreme convention at Duluth. Mr. Begley's address, delivered with his usual witty style, was listened to with great interest.

Turks Must Wear Hats Or Else Lose Heads

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 16 (United Press)—The Angora Government is determined that the Turks shall wear hats, or die.

Carrying out the recent orders against the ancient fez headdress, the Angora Independence Tribunal today ordered eight new executions at Riseh and 48 imprisonments of persons resisting the order to wear hats.

The district has been greatly agitated at the orders, and many insurgents hitherto have declined to take kindly to the hard, soft and medium hats of Europe.

MORON BURGLAR SLAYS FAMILY

Investigators Reconstruct Crime Hypothetically and Seek Escaped Convict.

QUIETED DOG.

AURORA, Ills., Dec. 16 (Canadian Press)—A moron-burglar, familiar with farm life and able to quiet a good watchdog, killed Henry Jeske, a young bank cashier, his wife and their six year old son at their home near Batavia on Saturday night.

This was the conclusion of investigators today as they reconstructed the triple slaying hypothetically from their findings in four days. As most likely to fit into the picture they sought Herman Coppe, 26, escaped penitentiary farm honor prisoner, who twelve years ago killed Mrs. Manny Sleep, and her two young children and who was seen near Batavia shortly before the Jeske slaying.

Ejecting Friend From Car Resulted Fatally To Owner

ARCADIA, Florida, Dec. 15.—United Press. — While attempting to kick a friend off the running board of his automobile, Jasper Thimpen, 45, struck his leg against a knife in the hand of the other man, and bled to death.

A coroner's jury decided that it was an accident.

RAZOR BLADES DUTY REMAINS

Britain Fears German and Not United States' Competition.

LABOR AMENDMENT.

LONDON, Dec. 16. (Canadian Press).—The House of Commons, sitting in committee Tuesday to consider new proposals for the safeguarding of industries, rejected by a vote of 228 to 123 an amendment offered by H. B. Lees-Smith, Laborite, to exempt safety razors and safety razor blades from duty.

Mr. Lees-Smith argued that 75 per cent. of these articles used in the United Kingdom were imported from the United States, and that there was no proof that a single man was out of employment because of the importation of these United States goods. On the other hand, he said, there was much anxiety lest the imposition of a duty would throw hundreds out of work because the United States safety razor manufacturers each year bought enough Sheffield steel to make not only the 40,000,000 blades sold to Great Britain, but also for blades sold throughout the world, totalling 280,000,000.

Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, President of the Board of Trade, opposing the amendment, said the trade faced almost unlimited German competition. He said it was German, not United States competition that the Government feared.

IMMIGRANT RUSH LIKELY IN SPRING

Lowering of Rates For Passage Will Enable Many To Come.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press).—As the result of a recent agreement whereby fares for immigrants were reduced materially, a rush of prospective settlers from the Old Country is expected early in the coming spring, according to W. J. Black, Director of the Department of Colonization, Development and Agriculture, Canadian National Railways, and formerly Deputy Minister of the Department of Immigration and Colonization for the Dominion Government.

TWO BROTHERS CHARGED WITH SLAYING MANAGER OF COMPANY

Committed For Trial at Joliette, Que. — Accused of Shooting Robert Tyhurst of the St. Maurice Paper Company.

DECLINED TO MAKE STATEMENT.

JOLIETTE, Que., Dec. 16. — (Canadian Press). — Edward and Patrick McGuire, of St. Gabriel de Brandon, were yesterday committed for trial on the charge of murdering Robert Tyhurst, branch manager of the St. Maurice Paper Company, Limited, who was shot and instantly killed on the night of December 1 in the company's bungalow. The committment was made by Judge Dubeau, who presided over the preliminary hearing.

Late Tuesday afternoon the accused appeared for voluntary statement, heard the charge of murder read against them, and declared that they had no statement to make, and the Judge committed them to appear at the next session of the King's Bench, due to be held in Joliette next September.

Before the committment, A. Germain, K.C., for the defence, urged that nothing had been proved in the evidence put before the Court at the inquiry.

"Never have I seen such weak evidence put before a court in support of a criminal charge," he said.

Mysterious Woman.

"It is true we have a phantom automobile, just as we had a mysterious woman, but what has been proved?

"There has not been a single witness to show that the two accused men has ever been in St. Michel Des-Saints on the night of the murder. The nearest they had been seen to there was about midnight, when they were found a dozen miles away with a car in a ditch.

There was not enough evidence before the court to justify their being ordered to face trial on the murder charge, and he demanded their liberation. Mr. German was supported by J. J. Denis, of the defence counsel.

Phillippe Brais replied to the defence, urging that there was ample evidence to justify a committment.

Judge Dureau rendered his decision at once, that the evidence justified a committment.

SIKI'S MURDERER KNOWN TO WIFE POLICE REPORT

His Overcoat Stolen Sunday Night—He Knew Who Took It.

DECORATED IN WAR.

Senegalese Fighter Appreciated at Least By His Colored Wife.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16. (Canadian Press).—Police were combing the cafes, cabarets and upper West Side haunts of the underworld last night for the slayer of Battling Siki. The Senegalese pugilist, never one to confine his fighting to the squared circle, fought his last fight in the hours before dawn Tuesday on a "Hell's Kitchen" sidewalk.

Twelve hours after the discovery of his body, with two bullet wounds in the back, the fighting child of the jungle, former bell-hop and barroom boy, decorated world war veteran, prize fighter and participant in countless street and bar-room brawls, lay in a morgue while the police still were without an important clue to the identity of his murderer.

The authorities were working on the theory that Siki had become involved in an argument in one of the numerous night clubs near where his body was found, and that he was followed into the street and murdered.

Siki's body was found and identified by Patrolman John J. Meehan, an acquaintance. It lay face down on the sidewalk on West 41st Street, and in the gutter nearby was found a revolver with two exploded shells in the chambers.

Identified By Wife.

Formal identification of the body was made at the morgue by Siki's widow, an octaroon, formerly Lillian Werner, whom he married a little more than a year ago. She told the police that she last had seen her husband at the street door of their apartment on West 42nd Street, about seven o'clock Monday night. He told her that he was going out to talk with some of the boys." The widow said she had gone to a movie, had returned at about 11 o'clock, and finding that her husband had not returned, went to bed. She was awakened with the news of his death.

Mrs. Phal (Siki's real name was Louis Phal) told the police she believed she knew who had shot her husband. She said Siki had eaten in a restaurant in the neighborhood the night before, and his overcoat had been stolen. He had said he knew who took it, and would go back at a time when he suspected the thief would be there. This, and a story that Siki had had trouble with a neighbor over a $20 liquor debt, were the only clues the police had to work upon.

Widow's Tribute.

The widow attended the autopsy and fainted several times during the ordeal. "He was a good boy," she said of the fighter. "He was just mischievous. He would never harm anybody."

TURKS CHARGE THAT BRITAIN USED INFLUENCE

Are Indignant Over Decision of Council on

REPORTED CRUELTIES.

Turks Say British Armed Chaldean Christians Against Turks.

GENEVA, Dec. 16. (Canadian Press).—The Council of the League of Nations having "regretfully noted the failure of its attempts at mediation" in disputes over the Mosul region of Irak, between Great Britain and Turkey, has decided that the rich oil regions shall go to Irak.

Great Britain already has the mandate over Irak, and therefore the disputed territory will remain in her hands. It is asserted that the British Cabinet has sent assurances to the League Council that Great Britain will accept prolongation of the Irak mandate to 25 years. Turkey, it is reported, will receive a narrow strip of territory lying to the north of Irak.

The Turks are indignant over the decision of the Council. Tewfik Rushdi Bey, head of the Turkish delegation here, charges Great Britain with having brought influence to bear on the Council in her favor by stating that the Turks had massacred men and women and sold children into slavery.

This charge was contained in a report from the Chaldean Catholic priest and the British delegation turned it over to the Council.

Rushdi also accuses the British of arming the Assyrian Chaldeans against the Turks and of using incidents ante dating the formation of the Turkish republic to discredit Turkey.

He said that Major-General James G. Harbord, who headed a United States mission which investigated the situation in Armenia in 1919, asserted that the Turks not only were not responsible for these incidents but themselves suffered through them.

WAR CONDITIONS ARE ADVOCATED

Textile President Says Return Would Stabilize Industry.

DUTY ASKED FOR.

LONDON, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press).—A virtual return to war time trading conditions was advocated by Ben Turner, President of the Textile Workers' Union, in giving evidence before the Government committee which is inquiring into the textile trade in connection with the application of the Yorkshire manufacturers of fabrics for the imposition of a duty on worsted fabrics. Turner said that the changing prices of wool resulted in a fluctuation of employment, and he expressed the opinion that steadiness of employment in the textile industry would be ensured if the State bought its own material and regulated the prices.

Human Stomach Breaks Law Makes Four Per Cent Liquor

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. — United Press. — The human stomach is a chronic violator of the Volstead Act, if Senator Edge, of New Jersey, is correct in his physiology.

"It is asserted by medical men," Edge said in his speech for 2.75 per cent. beer, "that there is as much alcohol generated in the system from a day's ordinary diet as is contained in three pints of 3 per cent." beer.

As is well known the average capacity of the stomach is less than three pints.

GREECE DECIDES TO PAY DAMAGES

Premier Pangalos Withdraws Refusal After Visit of Ministers.

ACCEPTS AWARD.

ATHENS, Dec. 15 (United Press) —Premier Pangalos has now definitely instructed Foreign Minister Rentis to accept the League of Nations Council's punitive award against Greece in the Greco-Bulgarian frontier incident. This acceptance of the demands for about a quarter of a million dollars followed a visit to the English, French and Italian Ministers, who had heard of Pangalos' objections to acceptance.

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 16. (Canadian Press).—The Greek Government, in a note to the British Minister, says it accepts unconditionally the League of Nations award in the Greco-Bulgarian incident. It expresses the hope, however, that the sum Greece must pay will be settled equitably with the sums owing by Bulgaria for reparations.

Film Blazed and Caused Stampede in Picture House.

MANY INJURED.

MONTMAGNY, Que., Dec. 16 (Canadian Press)—Panic resulting in the death of one person and serious injury to some twenty-five others, was caused in a local moving picture house last night, when a film which was being shown caught fire. A little boy was crushed to death in the wild stampede for the door and a number of men and women of varying ages sustained more or less serious injuries. The fire did not spread and the interior of the theatre was only slightly damaged. There were some four hundred people in the theatre at the time of the occurence.

OPPOSITION TO M. DOUMER FOR FINANCE POST

Visit To Premier Was Postponed For Further Consultations.

PREMIER ANNOYED.

If Post Is Not Speedily Filled He May Resign Office.

PARIS, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press) —Opposition developed today to Premier Briand's plan to offer the Finance Ministry to Senator Paul Doumer. M. Briand, after this morning's Cabinet Council, asked Senator Doumer to call at the Quai D'Orsay immediately, but the visit was later postponed until 2 p.m., while the Premier consulted his leading ministers further. It was said in generally well informed circles that the Premier was greatly dissatisfied with opposition to his choice of Doumer, and that he might hand in the resignation of the entire cabinet this evening unless the cabinet agreed upon a successor to M Loucheur this afternoon.

Doumer Finally Named

PARIS, Dec. 16 — Senator Paul Doumer was appointed Minister of Finance today. After a conference with Premier Briand, the Senator announced that he would accept the portfolio.

MANY PESTS HAVE BEEN DESTROYED

Campaign Waged in Alberta Resulted in Slaughter of Vermin.

EDMONTON, Alta. Dec. 16. — (Canadian Press).—The anti-pest campaign waged under the direction of the Alberta Department of Agriculture has proved disastrous to approximately 300,000 crows, gophers and magpies, according to figures just released.

Nearly 1,300 contestants have taken part in the competition and about $3,000 have been distributed to successful hunters. The campaign has taken a toll of 195,525 gophers, 70,000 magpies' and crows' eggs, while 38,275 destructive birds have been killed.

School children, farmers and members of the Game Protective Association participated in the contest.

CHRISTMAS TREAT.

All Saints' Church Primary Classes Have Jolly Hour.

The annual Christmas treat for the children of the Primary Department of the Sunday School of All Saints' Church was held on Saturday afternoon, when children to the number of one hundred and sixty-five received bags of candy from a real live Santa Claus. The entertainment was held in the Parish Hall, and proved a very jolly affair.

War Improved Conduct; B. C. Jails Not Needed

VICTORIA, B.C., Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Less than half as many people are in jail now in British Columbia as was the case before the war, and only two jails are needed, compared with seven in those days, according to Attorney-General A. M. Manson.

The actual number of inmates in provincial last year was 1353, against 3363 in 1913.

Men Demand Retirement Bonus of Two Hundred Pounds Each.

HOLDING BARRACKS.

Armed Sentries Are Patrolling in Belfast, Keeping Strangers Away.

BELFAST, Dec. 16. (Canadian Press). — Approximately 1,000 people, representative of practically every district in Saskatchewan, are expected to be in Regina to-day to attend the sessions of the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Company.

In the army of visitors will be 450 accredited delegates.

Outstanding on the agenda and overshadowing all other issues is the avowed plan of the wheat pool heads to buy out the company and operate their own elevators in all districts. That issue is such that it may, possibly, extend the meeting beyond the two-day session originally planned.

The annual report will show a substantial profit. It is shown an 8 per cent. dividend has been declared on the year's operations, but the net profit will not be made public until it is announced to the delegates.

Sentries Are Armed.

Armed sentries, posted by the striking "A" special constabulary, to-day patrolled the entrances to the Prince's dock barracks, sternly warning strangers away. Strict sobriety is being maintained among the 300 men there who are seemingly taking the strike more seriously than other sections of the constabulary throughout the northern counties.

The men, angered over the decision under the London boundary agreement to disband them immediately, are demanding a bonus of 200 pounds each, free of income tax.

The Government yesterday offered two months' leave on full pay and transportation home, but the men at Prince's Dock declared it unacceptable.

The "specials" on duty at the court and jail in Belfast joined the strike and have been replaced by regulars.

SCHOONER CUT IN TWO.

Crew of Ten Men Was Rescued.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 16.— The four-masted schooner James W. Howard, practically was cut in half in collision with the Italian steamer Livenzo, last night about nine miles north of Cape Lookout. The crew of ten men were rescued and taken aboard the steamer. A radio message received here from the Livenzo telling of the accident did not indicate that anybody was injured.

REV. W. H. YOUNG GAVE ADDRESS

Spoke to Members of George Street Men's Association.

SPOKE ON SERVICE.

The monthly meeting of the George street United Church Men's Association held attractions something more than ordinary for the members, these being a special early evening supper, to be followed by an address by Rev. W. Harold Young, former pastor of the church, but now in exile in Toronto.

The President, C. B. Adair took the chair and after formal business had been transacted, the chair ruled that a couple of reports, one from the Executive, should not longer be delayed and would be expected at the following meeting.

The lunch was served by the wives of the members, with Hooper, the caterer supplying the viands, thus supplementing what the ladies had provided.

A burst of community singing was indulged in, the melodies being taken from the score sheets distributed around the tables. Twenty minutes of this exercise satisfied all who were not vocally inclined and a halt was called to listen to the speaker of the evening.

While it is only five months since Rev. Mr. Young left the city, it was in order that he should be properly introduced, which was done by Mr. Thomas Barrie, who mentioned the active work the pastor had done in bringing together the younger men of the church and creating an interest in the services and routine work amongst the congregation. All were glad, he said, to welcome Rev. Mr. Young back, if even for a temporary stay, but all knew that even on short notice the speaker could be called back, the Peterborough ties being as yet strong and impelling.

Rev. Mr. Young spoke pleasantly and cheerfully of his readiness to answer any call from Peterborough. Not that such paralelled "the cry from Macedonia," but brought him back to associations and friends that would long be a green and pleasant memory. He felt, he said, that what he had to tell them was that in making Christianity a blessing and an object for concerted effort, it should be a practical Christianity. He took for the leading thought in his address the story of the "Good Samaritan," for the parabie of the Good Samaritan teaches Christian service, as aid was given to the wounded man by the roadside. The Giver of Aid was flouting, by his act, the respectable standards of the day. His Christianity was creative, for he did that which was uncommon and unusual. The parable teaches that we should do the undone thing, to tread untrodden and unbeaten paths to make our Christianity creative.

Some say the Church is conservative, a drag on progress, but the Church has set herself to blaze the trails of progress. The Church has led; it was first to set up institutions of charity for the sick, the blind, the insane and to assist in remedial works for the benefit of men and women. In medievial times the Church failed in its leadership; it was telling people to hoard up teachings, to study old literature, that in seclusion alone could Christian life be developed.

Augmenting his theme the speaker continued by saying that we hear a great deal about brotherhood. The Church first got the conception of this, and the world has been lumbering along after. The greatest work of the Church is in the challenge of leadership. There have been periods of dormancy. Before Luther the Church had stopped its pioneering, and the Church and pew had ceased to lead the world. When the Church becomes conformed to the world it loses its power; when the Church has only platitudes to pronounce the world catches up and this means failure.

To-day, is the Church doing her best? See the practical Christianity of the Salvation Army, the Rotarians, the Kiwanians, and other organizations of kindred spirit and usefulness. They are showing the Church what service is. It is to be feared that the Church is not leading.

The pulpit is trying to measure up. In the city of Toronto, pastors are meeting in groups, studying Christ, trying to regain the power, which the speaker confesses, the Church has lost.

Limits in printed space forbids the further recount of additional matter of this interesting and inspiring address, which was listened to with marked attention, and well merited the warm vote of thanks that closed the exercises and the gathering.

REMARKABLE GROWTH OF GRAHAM BROTHERS.

September, 1925, Production was 171 per cent. of Entire 1921 Output

Production for First 9 Months This Year Shows 128 per cent. Increase over Corresponding Period Last Year and 248 per cent. Over Same Period of 1923.

Graham Brothers' production of Motor Trucks for the single month of September, 1925, according to official figures, was, 171 per cent of their production for the entire year of 1921.

With the combined output of their four large factories located at Detroit, Evansville, Stockton, California, and Toronto, Ont., Graham Brothers, a division of Dodge Brothers, Inc., and now the largest exclusive manufacturers or motor trucks,, month by month, and week by week, are shattering all their previous production records.

Graham Brothers' production for the first nine months of this year exceeded that for 1924 by 128 per cent., and exceeded the 1923 figures by 248 per cent.

This progress is not surprising to owners of Graham Brothers' trucks," says V. M. Eastwood, the local Dodge Brothers dealer, "because he knows the satisfactory service these trucks give and appreciates their unusually low cost of operation."

A GOOD CITIZEN GONE.

The death of Mr. James W. Fitzgerald, C.E., means to many Peterboro citizens the passing of a most highly esteemed friend, and to the community at large the loss of a solid, dependable citizen whose opinion on civic matters and other public issues was perhaps all the more valuable because it was not promulgated freely.

In his profession as Land Surveyor, which Mr. Fitzgerald had followed here for over forty years, his ability and integrity were always widely recognized.

As a citizen of Peterboro, while he did not seek civic preferment, Mr. Fitzgerald always took a keen interest in municipal affairs and in public movements that had as their motive the betterment of Peterboro.

Death's call has taken away from Peterboro many well-known and useful citizens during the years that is fast moving to a close, and in their passing they have left their home city the poorer.

PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

In his statement of Ontario's finance, Hon. Mr. Price has evidently endeavoured to make his presentation as reassuring as possible, but his figures, while indicating an improvement over last year and a much more businesslike showing than made by the Drury administration, contain little real comfort.

Capital expenditure has decreased by $8,000,000, but there is an increase of $1,500,000 in ordinary expenditure, the people had to pay $3,000,000 in new taxes, and still there is a deficit of close to $5,000,000.

As a matter of fact, while the deficit has dropped from $8,000,000 to $5,000,000, the better showing is almost altogether accounted for by the new levies.

The Provincial Treasurer in his statement stresses the difficulty experienced by the Government in endeavouring to exercise economy because, while the public shouts for administrations to reduce expenditure, there is at the same time a never-ceasing demand for money to be spent on a thousand and one different things.

This is a condition of affairs that has often been remarked upon by the Examiner, and it is referred to by the Ottawa Journal in an article which appears on this page today.

Until people realize that they must show that their clamor for economy is sincere by consenting to lessen expenditure on things in which they are interested, it is folly to expect material reduction of expenditure and reduced taxation.

No Government will be any more economical than the people help it to be, and if the public keeps on demanding expenditure there can be no saving.

WELL REPRESENTED.

The reports presented to the local Chamber of Commerce by Messrs. B. F. Ackerman and E. B. Fowler, who were the Peterboro delegates at the Dominion-wide conference of Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce held in Winnipeg last month, not only threw much light upon the importance of the conference itself, but indicated that this city was fortunate in its representatives, who evidently missed none of the proceedings.

"The most important non-political gathering in the history of Canada since Confederation." Thus the Chairman, Mr. S. B. Gundy, President of the Toronto Board of Trade, in his opening address, characterized the conference.

The conference was convened at a time of political chaos through economical uncertainty; its announced purpose to promote Canadian unity and Canadian development. In the gathering there were delegates (some two hundred business and professional men) with wide divergent views on the many subjects, all assembled with the end in view of a frank discussion of the economical ills of Canada, in the hope of finding some common ground on which to meet and seek to at least alleviate some of these ills.

At such an important conference it was essential that Peterboro should be fittingly represented.

That such was the case is beyond question.

In Mr. B. F. Ackerman and Mr. E. Bruce Fowler, delegates at the conference, the confidence of both the business and social public has long reposed. Keen business men, with a broad knowledge of Provincial affairs and the important economic problems of the Dominion, it would be difficult to find two better fitted to place our needs before a convention and intelligently discuss them in their relationship with those of the Dominion as a whole.

To Mr. J. Wells Fraser, far-seeing President of the Chamber of Commerce, Peterboro is indebted for the representation at the conference, as his unbounded enthusiasm for and faith in the good to emanate from such a conference perhaps influenced Mr. Ackerman and Mr. Fowler in the decision to unselfishly give their valuable time as a free-will offering towards the creation of a greater, more prosperous and consequently more tenable Canada.

THE PUBLIC TO BLAME.

It is the public that is blameworthy, says the Ottawa Journal discussing Provincial finances. As Mr. Price points out in his statement, the demand for expenditure, from here, there and everywhere, with only lip-loyalty to economy to off-set it, is the order of the hour. People will shout against taxes, boards of trade will clamor for economy. But let an economizing Minister lay hands upon some public expenditure, and a cry goes up for his blood. It is economy for the other fellow—for the neighboring parish—that most of us actually want.

The whole evil comes from wrong conception of the source of all expenditure. People talk of "public money"—there is no such thing. It is all private money, belonging to Jones and Smith. It is your money and ours—every cent that is spent. Yet the public, that almost phantom, indefinable thing, goes on demanding expenditure as though Governments extracted dollars from some magic mine; demanding ventures into which the average man would not risk a dollar of what money he has in the bank. As a consequence, there is hardly a Government, Federal, Provincial and municipal, which is not spending more money than they ought.

The consequences are necessarily bad. Canada, to begin with, has an expensive climate. The elements, the curtailment of production in basic things over long months, the widespread territories which make distribution and marketing expensive — these impose their handicaps. Hence the importance of avoiding unnecessary obstacles, of avoiding everything else that will make Canada a hard country to live in.

We have been neglecting that duty. We have brought ourselves to the position under which the vast country south of us, the greatest and richest country in the world, bordering us for 3,000 miles, has a Federal per capita tax of $26, compared to our $45. And we have done that because at a time our neighbors were rigidly retrenching we kept on spending money with the most callous abandon. Emigration, timidity of capital, curtailed production, a lessening of employment, purchasing power, railway traffic and all other essentials of prosperity, have been an inevitable result.

Thus far our resources have saved us. As Adam Smith once remarked, "there is a lot of ruin in a nation." But why invite a lot of it?

SUNDAY BATHING.

The Peterboro Ministerial Association has put itself on record as not favouring opening and maintaining the civic bathing houses on Sundays, the issue which is to be voted upon by the electors at the coming municipal election.

Against the practice of Sunday bathing the association took no stand, merely deprecating the opening of the city's beaches on Sunday, and here, in the opinion of the Examiner, the real significance of the protest caused by the Council's action last summer has been missed.

Everybody knows that there is a great deal of Sunday bathing in the summer months, at Chemong Park, Stoney Lake, down the Otonabee, at Cobourg or other points within easy motoring distance of Peterboro.

People who have summer homes at these places or have means of transportation to them on Sunday can enjoy a cooling dip with no objection apparently from the Ministerial Association or anybody else.

The families whose purse does not permit summer homes or motor cars are those who suffer from the closing of the civic bathing houses.

They are compelled to remain out of the water —or at least are deprived of dressing-room facilities and protection while swimming.

So long as other sections of the community are privileged to bathe on Sundays without a protest the Council's action in depriving many families of the same privilege has always appeared to the Examiner as smacking of class legislation, and still does so.

If the moral interests of the community are hurt by Sunday bathing—which is in itself a debatable question—it is surely a fair contention that efforts should be made to stop all classes from indulging in the practice.

The whole task of saving Peterboro's morals should not be shouldered upon a section of the citizens, apparently as a penalty for not owning a summer cottage or a motor car.

THE QUESTION OF BRITISH MIGRATION.

The Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson is one of the wisest and most trustworthy labour leaders in Britain, consequently his comments on his Canadian tour have aroused considerable interest and sympathy among those of his countrymen who are interested in the problems of British migration. Leaders of all classes in Britain today acknowledge that this is one of the vital issues in the economic and political life of Britain. Serious students of industrial conditions declare that Britain has at least one million more workers than industry can absorb in the near future under any contemplated schemes of electrical and agricultural development that are under consideration. On the whole, there are said to be more workers employed in the industries of Britain now than there were in 1914.

In view of this fact, the migration of those under 25 years of age, who are adopted to settlers on the land, to Canada and the other Dominions is admitted to be an urgent national necessity. What Labour itself thinks is a matter of prime importance. For this reason special significance is attached to what Mr. Henderson says, since he is the virtual leader of the Parliamentary Labour party. In the Observer he makes the following comment on the problem:

"Two difficulties must be overcome before migration on a large scale can be carried out successfully. Something must be done to overcome the very serious prejudice created by unfortunate propaganda, lavish promises and tempting expectations put before the would-be immigrants, which have failed to fructify. The British and Canadian Governments must tackle the problem more boldly. If possible they must arrange for a training here before the individual or family or community goes overseas, which would be much more effective than if left until the emigrants enter into their new surroundings."

In order to bring about the good-will of organized Labour Mr. Henderson suggests a joint Anglo-Canadian commission "for securing immigration on better and bolder lines than in the past." It is credibly stated that the British Government and a great body of the members of Parliament would welcome some such a co-operative scheme to obtain better results. The fact, however, remains that no scheme of immigration will be successful unless those who desire to emigrate have the courage, the enterprise, the energy and the perseverance to overcome the obstacles that are of necessity associated with new settlements. Generations of British settlers came to Canada in the nineteenth century, who received no help of any kind, either from Britain or Canada. They faced greater difficulties and privations than any existing today, and laid the foundations of this great Dominion, taking a foremost place in its citizenship and national life. After all has been done, success depends largely upon the courage, enterprise and character of those who migrate from their own lands. To all industrious and thrifty new settlers success is assured.—Brantford Expositor.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Nomination day is drawing near. Where are the candidates?

There are several issues that should be discussed by aspirants for municipal office which makes it desirable that candidates should announce their intentions a little earlier than usual.

The revenue from the sale of 4.4 beer proved about as unimportant as the beer itself.

Peace River is still trying to decide the winner in that riding on October 29th—thus having a problem similar to that which is to be decided by Parliament as to which party won throughout the country.

A THOUGHT.

IF HAROLD BELL WRIGHT MARRIED EDITH WHARTON.

By GLENN FRANK

Is the modern woman any less womanly than her grandmother?

Untold gallons of printer's ink have been spilled on this query, but it remained for Miss Martin, the creator of Tillie The Mennonite Maid, in one of her later novels, to state it with racy vividness.

A man of the old order is matching wits with a woman of the new order. He asserts, with the fanatic fervor of a dogmatic who never doubts his dogmas, that there is an eternal inequality of the sexes which we ignore at our peril, that certain things are womanly and certain things manly, and that a crystal-clear distinction between the two has existed from the beginning, exists now, and ever shall exist, world without end.

The woman of the new order is convinced that no such inequality of the sexes exists, but only the inequality of human beings, whether the fortunes of birth made them male or female. But she scorns to argue the matter, and dismisses the dicussion with this question:

If Harold Bell Wright married Edith Wharton, which of them should wash the dishes and make the beds?

Should the greater artist of the two be sentenced to the kitchen and the lesser artist be pampered in the library because the greater artist happened to be a woman?

The modern woman is challenging the ancient and iron-clad classification of things womanly and things unwomanly. Whatever the elders may think of the process, the modern woman, her lungs filled with the tonic air of a new freedom, is experimenting her way towards a new womanliness.

She may make mistakes in her experiment, but she is convinced that the experiment is no mistake.

"Who among us," asks George A. Coe, in a singularly clear little book on what ails our youth, "can say just what is in good taste in woman's new world? Two generations ago almost anybody could have told with confidence what is womanly and unwomanly, but who can do so today?" Here are a few confusing questions which Mr. Coe suggests that the new freedom of woman is raising:

Why is it manly for men to smoke and unwomanly for women?

Why is anything that is fit for the cars of a young man unfit for the ears of a young woman?

Why it is any more fitting for a woman than for a man to be economically dependent upon a person of the opposite sex?

Why is it less appropriate for a woman than for a man to be the head of the household?

Why would a woman be out of place in the seat of a bishop or on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States?

The modern woman will undoubtedly answer these questions in the light of her new freedom, not in terms of the old classifications. Will this mean lower standards of womanliness, higher standards of manliness, or simply the development of more realistic human customs? This is the moral and social riddle of our generation.

A Few Doses of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup May Stop That Cough

Mr. Frank D. Comeau, West Bathurst, N.B., writes:—"I had a very bad cold and cough that settled on my lungs, and I thought that I would never get rid of it.

One day a friend spoke to me about your wonderful remedy, so I sent and got a bottle of it, and after the first dose I took I got relief, and by the time I had finished the bottle I was completely relieved of all my trouble."

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal
Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCH.

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—The packers have received heavy direct Western shipments of butchers this week and this has made an easy market for poor quality Ontario butchers. Rogers and Maybee bought about 550 head for export Monday. Killing steers cost from $8 to $8.65 a cwt., and on these the average cost was down 10 to 15 cents a cwt. from last week.

Any but real choice baby beeves are easier, and there is immediately a surplus of those just average quality. A few sold this morning from $7 up to $10 a cwt. Choice handyweight, when available, are $7.25 to $7.50 a cwt. Fair quality butchers' heifers are $5.70 to $6.40 a cwt., and mediums $5 to $5.50 a cwt. Choice and export cows sold at $5.30 to $5.75, and one good cow at $4.75 a cwt. Bulls were steady. Exports brought up to $5.50 and bolognas $3.50 to $4.00 a cwt. One load of 600-lb. Western stockers went to Hawkestone this morning at $4.35 a cwt. The market is gradually cleaning up at slightly easier prices.

The demand keeps up for choice calves for the holiday season, and top calves are 14½ to 15 cents. Good calves are 13 to 13½ cents, mediums 9 to 11 cents, and heavies 7 to 7½ cents a pound.

The lamb market is barely steady, except for select bunches. Lambs 100 lbs. up are not wanted, except at cut prices. Trade was slow today, and packers say they are filled up for the present. The outlook promises a drop of 25 to 50 cents a cwt.

The hog market has a firm undertone, and there is a prospect of another advance of 25 cents a cwt. to $12.50 a cwt. f.o.b. today. The short run is responsible for the present strength.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices whirled upward 5 1-4c a bushel today, chiefly as a result of huge crop losses in Argentina officially confirmed by the Argentine government. Big European buying of Canadian wheat was also a factor. The Chicago wheat market closed strong at virtually the day's top figures, 3 5-8 to 5 1-4 cents net advance, new style, December 171 1-8 and May 168 3-4 to 169, with corn 3-8 to 1 cent up; oats at 5-8 to 5-8 to 3-4c gain, and provisions varying from unchanged to a rise of 35c.

Emphasizing the effect of the Argentine government crop report and of the simultaneous expansion of European demand, some authorities here asserted that the world wheat situation is stronger statistically than last year, when speculation carried prices to an almost incredible height. According to one trade leader, the world exportable surplus for 1925-1926 is 630,000,000 bushels compared with import needs of 654,000,000 bushels to 720,000,000 bushels. Under such circumstances, wheat values in Chicago were on the jump today from the outset.

EGGS AND POULTRY

OTTAWA, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—The production of eggs is on the increase and the market is inclined to be easier. Receipts of poultry are much heavier. There is keen competition among buyers more particularly for turkeys on account of the near approach of the Christmas holidays.

Toronto—Egg prices unchanged, receipts of fresh eggs are increasing but are not sufficient yet to materially effect prices. Poultry market is firm.

Montreal—Prices are being well maintained for all grades of eggs under a steady demand for supplies for immediate consumption.

Saskatchewan—Very few fresh eggs are arriving. The movement of turkeys and poultry throughout Saskatchewan is heavy and the quality of the birds generally is good.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 3-4.
Sterling cables $4.85 1-8.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 15 (Canadian Press).—There was an improved demand from United States and Canadian exporters for Manitoba wheat in the domestic market and sales of 223,00 bushels of No. 1 Northern were made at 10 1-2 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg May option, c.i.f. Buffalo, and a round lot of No. 2 Northern was sold at a c.i.f. price Bay Ports. There was also a better demand for coarse grains and a moderate trade was done. The tone of the market was firm, with sales of car lots of Ontario and Quebec No 2 white being made at 53c; No. 3 white at 51 1-2c, and No. 4 white at 50c per bushel. Canadian Western grades were steady.

Mill Feed Firmer.

A feature of the millfeed trade was the stronger feeling that developed in the market, and millers in some instances advances prices $1 per ton for all lines, while others reported the undertone very firm and made no change values.

A steady feeling prevailed in the markets for baled hay and prices were unchanged, but the demand continues of limited character owing to the fact that local buyers seem to have ample supplies on hand for the time being, and in consequence business was quiet.

Fresh Eggs Advance.

Owing to the somewhat limited supplies of strictly fresh eggs available, a stronger feeling developed in the market and prices scored an advance of 1c to 3c per dozen; the demand was steady for small lots to meet actual wants. There was no change in the market for storage eggs, but the undertone was firm with a fairly active business passing. The receipts were 586 cases as against 2,152 for the same day last week, and 921 for the corresponding day a year ago.

The demand for potatoes showed no improvement and the market was quiet owing to the fact that buyers seem to have ample supplies on hand for the time being, and until they work some of them off little activity is expected. The feeling was steady and prices were unchanged.

The butter trade in a wholesale jobbing way was also rather quiet and prices were unchanged, with finest creamery selling at 45c per lb. in solid packages, and at 46c per lb. in 1 lb. blocks.

The receipts of cheese were 1,396 boxes, as compared with 3,407 for the same day last week, and 438 for the corresponding day a year ago. There was no change in the condition of the market, business in all directions being quiet and prices on spot for current receipts were nominally quoted at 18 1-4 to 18 3-4c per lb; October make at 21 to 21 1-2c per lb, and earlier makes at 22 to 22 1-2c per lb.

$1,112,691,000 ESTIMATED VALUE CANADA'S FIELD CROPS FOR 1925 ALMOST EQUAL TO RECORD OF 1920

Dominion Crop Report Issued Tuesday Reflects Splendid Harvest.

WHEAT THE LEADER.

Saskatchewan's Soil Produces Most Wealth—Ontario Second Province.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 16 (by Canadian Press)—Canada's wheat crop this year has an estimated value of $146,485,000 in excess of the final figures for the wheat crop of 1924. The total value of the wheat crop this year as given in the crop report issued Tuesday is $466,755,000. Last year the wheat crop was valued at $320,262,000.

For the whole of Canada, the total value of the principal field crops of 1925, as now estimated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, is $1,112,691,000. This is an increase of $117,,455,100 over the 1924 final estimate of $995,235,990. In 1923, the total value of the principal field crops was $899,226,200.

Value of Other Grains

The estimated value of the Canadian oat crop for 1925 is given as $204,041,000 as compared with $200,688,000 in 1924. The barley crop this year is valued at $57,565,000 or somewhat less than 1924, when it was valued at $61,760,000. The valuation of the rye crop this year is given as $10,016,000 as compared with $13,678,700 last year. The estimate for flax seed is $18,369,000 while last year it was $18,840,300. Other grains which include peas, beans, buskwheat, mixed grains and corn for husking, have an estimated value this year of $43,063,000 as against $55,984,000.

The value of the potato crop this year is much higher than last, according to the estimate. This year, the potato crop has an estimated value of $126,560,000. Last year it was $47,956,000. The hay, clover, and alfalfa crops are valued at $180,055,000 or approximately the same as last year.

Second Largest Wheat Crop

The report issued Tuesday states that the wheat crop of 1925 was the second largest on record "and the average price of $1.11 per bushel though less than last year's final average of $1.22 remains still 44 cents per bushel above the low record of 67 cents per bushel in 1923." The total of $1,112,691,000 is the largest value assigned to the field crops of Canada since 1920, when the total was $1,455,244,050. Another feature of the report is the high value assigned to potatoes. The average value of potatoes, it is stated, is placed at $1.95 per cwt. or $1.10 more than in 1924.

For the three prairie provinces, the total values of the five principal grains are as follows, with last year's final figures in brackets; wheat, $432,520,000 ($286,801,000); Oats, $110,810,000 ($97,794,000); barley, $44,349,000 ($46,868,000); Rye, $7,841,000 ($10,919,000); Flax seed, $18,089,000 ($18,640,300.)

Ontario Second

By provinces the total values are in order as follows, the values for last year being within brackets: Saskatchewan $363,837,000 ($237,310,000); Ontario $236,991,000 ($260,534,000)); Alberta $171,912,000 ($159,759,700); Quebec $148,348,000 ($139,359,000); Manitoba $113,919,000 ($136,025,000); New Brunswick $25,586,000 ($16,080,000); Nova Scotia $19,627,000 ($16,75,800); British Columbia $17,197,000 ($17,392,000); Prince Edward Island $15,874,000 ($11,990,400). The value of the apple crop is estimated at $2,065,000 by the Department of Agriculture.

GREECE IS ORDERED TO PAY BULGARIA

Assessed $2,500,000 By the League For Frontier Incident.

GENEVA, Dec. 16.—The League of Nations Council Monday adopted the Rumboldt Commission report ordering Greece to pay Bulgaria about a quarter of a million dollars material, moral and actual damages, as a result of the recent Greco-Bulgar border hostilities.

Thereupon Bulgarian Foreign Minister Kalkoff accepted the council's verdict on behalf of his nation, while the Greek Foreign Minister Rentis merely thanked the Council.

(Rentis' "thanks" for the verdict against his nation are presumably the board held during the eyar and ed. There weer four meetings of 15 cases of cantagious disease re- to be taken as Greek acceptance of the findings, since an Athens despatch declared that the Greek government had instructed him to accept unconditionally).

Invasion Was Unjustifiable.

The Council adopted a report by Sir Austen Chamberlain of Great Britain, M. Hymans of Belgium, and Viscount Ishil of Japan. This report found Greece's invasion of Bulgaria unjustifiable, maintaining "the broad principles that, where territory is violated without sufficient cause, reparation is due, even if at the time of the occurrence it was believed by the party committing the violation that circumstances justified the action."

The report thus rejected Greeks' reference to the Corfu incident (in which Italy temporarily took possession of that island) on the ground that it was "justifiable aggression."

The Council also adopted a proposal by Sir Austen that two Swedish officers act as arbiters of border disputes between Greece and Bulgaria.

In order to eradicate causes of friction recommendation was made that persons of Greek origin living in Bulgaria be transferred to Greece.

The Chamberlain report was identical, except for minor details, with that of the commission of inquiry sent to the scene by the League Council.

NOT A COUNCIL LIKE SEYMOUR'S

Every Member a Watch Dog of the Treasury—Ne'er an Error.

FINAL MEETING.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 16.—The statutory meeting, the last session of the year, of the Seymour Township Council, was held Tuesday, with Reeve Grills presiding, and all the other members present. The usual budegt of accounts was passed, and the business of the year wound up.

The Township's Health.

The report of the Township Board of Health, which was filed, showed that during the year there had been 15 cases of contagious diseases reported and dealt with, all of them measles. The slaughter houses in Seymour were inspected twice and the water in all school wells analyzed. There were four meetings of the board held during the year and the total amount expended to safeguard the health of the community was $309.

Methodical Procedure.

There is probably not a council, rural or urban, in Ontario, in which the procedure of each session is more methodical than it is in the council of Seymour. Every member keeps an account of the monthly expenditure. Dr. G. A. Hay, the clerk, fills out the cheques, and each one makes the round of the table, the different members noting the amounts in his note book. The cheques pass under the supervision of Councillor Allan. Deputy Reave Peake, who sits at the foot of the table facing Reeve Grills, Councillor Innis and Councillor Lynn. The latter affixes to each cheque the required stamp, and then hands it to the Reeve, who after making a memorandum of the amount, signs his name.

In this way the different members of the council know just how the township stands financially and the balance that is left in the road fund after the monthly bills are paid at each session.

When the clerk read the minutes of the previous meeting the members follow him with their notebooks, on the look out for errors, but there never are any.

Thanked Reeve Grills.

Before the final adjournment yesterday Reeve Grills, on motion of Councillor Allan and Deputy Reeve Perks, was tendered a vote of thanks for the courtesy with which he presided over the meetinsg duuring the year.

SON DIED BEFORE PARENTS STARTED

Lacked Funds To Visit Demented Boy at Orillia.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—While Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cowan were tearfully leading with Mayor Frank J. Mitchell and city officials at the city hall Tuesday for transportation to Orillia, where their 15 year old son was reported to be dying, word came of the boy's death.

Walter, the only son of the Cowans, had been at the Orillia institution for five years. He was demented and a victim of the white plague. It was two years ago that the parents saw the boy, and it was believed at that time he had a fighting chance to recover.

Mr. Winters, inspector for the Children's Aid Society, was notified by Orillia authorities Monday noon of the boy's serious condition and he was asked to assist in locating the parents, who had recently moved and whose new address was unknown. A short story carried in the newspapers was seen by Mr. and Mrs. Cowan, who now live near the Walkerside Farm, Sandwich East township.

Mayor Mitchell will ask the township officials to assist the parents to make arrangements for the funeral, which it is believed will be held at Orillia.

$25 TO TORONTO FROM OLD LAND FOR IMMIGRANTS

Transportation Rates Slashed Under Empire Settlement Scheme.

IN REACH OF ALL.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press)—Details of the new empire settlement agrement which will offer to agriculturists and houseworkers from the United Kingdom transportation to destination in Canada at a lower rate than has been known for a generation, according to the Department of Immigration and Colonization, were made public last evening. That the agreement had been concluded was announced yesterday but details were meagre. A comparison between the regular rates from ports in the United Kingdom with the rates available to Empire Settlement passengers, shows remarkable reductions.

The following are given as illustrations in the statement, the rates being applicable from any port in the United Kingdom:

To Halifax, Saint John or Quebec, regular rate, £18.15; new Empire Settlement rate, £3

To Monteal, via Quebec, regular rate £18.15.5 and to Montreal, via Saint John or Halifax, regular rate £20.15, new rate £4.

To Toronto, via Quebec, regular rate £21.17.1 and to Toronto, via Saint oJhn or Halifax, regulalr rate £22.17.11, new rate £4.10.

To Winnipeg, regular rate £23.-19.2; new rate, £5.10.

To Regina, regular rate £24.14.2; Moose Jaw, regular rate £24.15.10; Saskatoon, regular rate, £25.1.8; new rate to these points £6.

To Calgary or Edmonton, regular rate £25.4.2; new rate £6.10.

To Vancouver, regular rate £28,-7.9; new rate £9.

How Cost Divided

The new rates payable by the migrant are possible through a three way sharing of the cost of transportation, according to the statement. The cost is borne by:

(a) The Canadian Government;
(b) The British Government;
(c) The steamship lines.

(Canada's share in the cost of emigrants under the Empire Settlement scheme remains unchanged regardless of the destination of the immigration, but the larger part to be contributed by the Dominion under the new agreement is in regard to the after-care of the immigrant for a period of five years, which cost is shared entirely by Canada without any tax upon the British government," it is stated.

The Department of Immigration expresses the belief that the new agreement will have the following results:

"It will virtually mean the abolition of passage loans."

"While such loans will still be available to heads of families and, under certain circumstances, to houseworkers, they will not be available to other classes."

"It will bring the cost of passage to the migrant within the reach of practically all British settlers of the classes sought and will offer a lower rate than has been available for many years."

No Overhead Debt

"It will enable the Empire Settlement passenger to land in Canada without heavy overhead debt to be paid."

"It will do away with the high cost of collection of passage loans and consequent loss in cases of failure to collect."

It is now upwards of three years since the first Empire Settlement agreement was entered into between Canada and the mother country for the purpose of encouraging British immigration. The first agreement was followed by others more favorable in the way of passage loans, but the Department, according to the statement, regards the completion of the present agreement as the most important step yet taken towards encouraging the transfer from Great Britain to Canada of British stock.

COYOTE FARM NO MORE

Stock in Trade Decided It Had Had Enough of Captivity.

GRASSY LAKE, Alta., Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—The coyote farm operated in this district for several years is no more. Tired of their domestic confinement, the animals recently bolted for freedom and took up their abode in the wilds of the neighborhood. The peace of the farmers in the surrounding territory has been greatly disturbed by the nocturnal howling of the hungry coyotes and much small stock is reported to have fallen prey to the beasts. Parties have been organized with a view to the capture or extermination of the animals.

Lumber Trade In Canada Hasn't Had Successful Year

MONTREAL, December 15.—Canadian Press. — The Eastern Canadian lumber trade has not had such a successful year as in previous years, according to a report made to the annal meeting of the Montreal Lumber Association yesterday by its president, D. H. McLennan. This was due he said to competition from the Baltic as well as to lower freight rates via the Panama Canal, which British Columbia to compete with the eastern lumbermen. There was hope, however, that the market would strengthen.

REEVE CURTIS OF HAVELOCK CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

A. S. Joyce May Be Contestant if Only Two Stand.

THREE MENTIONED.

(By a Staff Reporter).

HAVELOCK, Dec. 16.—So far the names of three residents have been mentioned in connection with the contest for the Reeveship at the approaching municipal election. Reeve Curtis will be a candidate to succeed himself, and the others are A. S. Joyce and S. Sanderson. Mr. Joyce has filled the office of Reeve in former years, and has a long record of municipal service. Mr. Sanderson has spent one year in the Village Council.

One thing is certain, there will be no three-cornered contest, for Mr. Joyce has made it clear that he will not stand if there are more than two men in the field, as he believes that the only way to secure a real expression of the will of the people is to adhere to the two-party system. It is believed that the present councillors will be candidates for re-election.

The School Board.

The three members of the School Board whose time expire this year are Dr. A. S. Thompson, D. A. Ford and James Barlow. All three, it is understood, will stand again. The members of the Board faced some serious problems during the past year, but it seems that they dealt with these to the satisfaction of the majority of taxpayers and the schools in Havelock are now well organized and making excellent progress.

The members of the Board who hold over for another year are H. W. Roche, chairman; Ed. Fennell, secretary, and John Moore.

HER DIVINE RIGHT.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—A woman inserted a public notice in an English newspaper that she no longer considered herself obliged to love and obey her husband. It said: "Having promised to love and obey my husband at a time when I had a false appreciation of his worth, I now renounce all my obligations to him."

CATTLE SERVICE WILL SOON BEGIN

Originated By H. P. Kennedy, Formerly of Peterboro.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 16.—Details of the new cattle boat service between Canada and Great Britain were given here by H. P. Kennedy, Toronto cattle man, who originated the plan, with which Albert Jensen, Danish shipowner, is associated.

Mr. Kennedy said the company in charge of the enterprise would be known as the Live Stock Steamship Company of Canada, that it would operate exclusively in the export cattle business between Canada and Great Britain. There will be four vessels to start with, he said, each with an average tonnage of 7,000. The first boat, to be named "Ontario," will sail from St. John, N.B., early in January.

"Though the ocean freight rate will remain at $20 a head for the time being," Mr. Kennedy said, "the improved conditions will, at a conservative estimate, save $5 a head in shrinkage alone, if not $10. Mr. Jensen, in fact, considers that shrinkage will be eliminated and that the cattle will gain in weight."

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore is aboard a mysterious yacht. It is past midnight and she is in the company of David Lacy, Pooch, McTish, Doc and Sweetie, none of whom she ever saw before tonight. Connemara and Sweetie have been drenched in the storm but have fashioned makeshift costumes to replace the dampened garments. Connemara had stolen away from her aunt's Connecticut home, disguised as a nun, rather than announce her engagement, as Aunt Celimena had expected her to do.

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

"So, that's it!" he exclaimed. "McTish must have installed it, and on my own boat; he has his nerve—" Then to Doc, "What have you been trying to do? Come, now, hand it out straight and cut out the trimmings."

"Do?" in a tone of puzzled innocence. "Nawthin'—just rolled over to keep me wings from goin' to sleep."

"And purely by accident found this button, I suppose."

"That's it, Cap," returned Doairily. "I found it there and tried i to see what would happen."

"Of course, you couldn't by any chance have been signaling?"

"Signalin'! Far be it from me," the big man declared. "I did see some little flashes like, comin' from that there stick" (indicating the mast with a jerk of his head sidewise) "but I didn't think they meant nothin'. Who'd I be signallin' to round here, hey?"

"Well, see you don't try to find some one," Lacy said grimly. "And get back to where you were before. Quick now!"

Under the prod of an impatica oot Doc was forced back to his old po forward, and Lacy, scowling, mad his way aft.

"I didn't see the flashes," he cplained to McTish, "but he mus have been sending off something. Hav you any idea of our bearings?"

"We're off Sea Cliff noo," McTis replied, pointing abaft; "yon's Execution Light. An' this is the mou' o Hempstead Harbor."

"We're not far from Bayville then," Lacy commented. "Now I'd suggest that we pull up anchor and head north, hugging the shore. I don't like the idea of your Swedish friend catching those signals."

The Scotchman's jaw fell in disgust. "Why, mon, that's what we want!" he exclaimed.

"Mac," the other returned, "I've a wholesome admiration for your canniness and fighting ability, but you told me yourself that 'The Swede' had a half-dozen bruisers aboard. We can't tackle them all. I hope Bob will succeed in locating them first."

"Weel, lad, I'm sorry if ye are afeared, but if ye'll just pick oot oneo' them—ye can pick on the saftest—I'll tak' care o' the ither sax." In moments of excitement McTish became very Scotch indeed. He added, as if in mollification of his charge of cowardice, "But I see what's fashin' ye. It's the lassie."

"I suppose she's one of them," assented David gloomily. "But why. "But why should she have told me about the light in that case?"

"Because she's a smar-rt lassie an' able to pu' the wool ower your eyes fine if ye gie her half a chance," McTish declared with conviction.

"No," David insisted. "She was surprised. As surprised as I was. She wasn't acting."

"Maybe," the little Scot said dryly. "But I'd not put it past her."

"We're losing time," Lacy reminded him, ignoring this thrust, "which is what you're playing for, of course. You do what I say and head north or I take back the boat. You've bagged enough now with two birds and Sweetie, to say nothing of the fifty thousand—"

"Which I see that ye keep in her pants," broke in McTish, grinning, "an' a fine crook ye are yersel'. I'll start her up, laddie, on one condeetion—that ye warn the gir-r-l as afr awa' frae that button as ye do the rest. I'm trustin' nane o' them the nicht."

To these terms Lacy consented with suspicious readiness, and after they had got under way hurried aft to Connemara.

The latter greeted him with a little smile, the gayety of which was slightly forced.

"Look here," she said, "I've been thinking. I believe I've guessed the riddle. Only you'll have to tell me when it's to be released. I'm horribly curous."

"If by 'it' you mean your friend Pooch, I should say in about twenty years—though sometimes they do get off for good behavior."

He was suddenly quite sure she was making a tremendous effort to keep her lips from trembling, but she continued to smile unconcernedly.

"This is a movie, isn't it—in thirty-seven reels? That's why I wanted to know when it was to be released, so that I could see the results. I've never taken part in one before. And here we all are, Pooch and Doc, two perfect duckies of villains, and Sweetie, the soubrette—isn't that what you'd call her, or am I going back to Aunt Celimena's days? Then there are cars being stolen and spilled all over the landscape, and messages in cipher, and flashes from mastheads and motorboats popping up out of nowhere. I'm properly thrilled, and, besides, I'm the star, I suppose. And the salaries are true, too—I never believed 'em—but whew! fifty thousand a night!"

"As long as you're casting us, would you mind telling me my role?"

A moment she studied him, slightly to his discomfiture. Then, "Let's see your profile—h'm——"

"Is it as bad as that?"

"Yes, every bit—and you're the handsome juvenile"—he bowed—"or else one of those ridiculous sheiks." Here he did not bow, but instead answered, "And I'll play opposite you—on the other side of the bars."

"You mean?"

"I'd give you one guess. It ought to be easy, for you've been awfully lucky if you haven't looked through them before."

"Something actually thrilling then; how much more thrilling, when all the time I've been looking for the camera man!" She paused dramatically. "Oh, I get it: you're not the handsome juvenile—you're the director, and trying to put me in the spirit of my role" (she looked down). "But where are the puttees?"

"You are clever!" he returned, perhaps with not as much aplomb as he would have liked, "but you're too good for this game. Why don't you try something less desperate? With your talent you could go far on the stage."

"Farther than fifty thousand?" Connemara challenged him with a laugh. "Aren't you optimistic?"

"Say," remarked a voice just behind them, its tones a trifle shrill. "I guess I wouldn't harp too much on that fifty thousand if I were you, Sister. Not in present company, anyhow."

With a queer sense of shock, Connemara and Lacy spun about to behold the pert little figure of Sweetie, seated nonchalently on the prostrate Pooch, her hands in her pockets, swaying to and fro, entirely unmoved by his protesting grunts and writhings.

"To think Sister'd tie the double cross on Poochie," she informed the night about them with an air of commiseration that made her unwilling cushion writhe afresh. "An' him lying here all nicely roped up like he was doin' some Lon Chaney stunt. An' you gotta nerve too, Mr. Klassy Klothes" (this to Lacy) "tryin' to steal poor Poochie's skirt away from him, when he can't look out for himself." She paused a moment to illustrate her pity by digging her exaggerated French heels deep in the paunch of the prostrate Pooch, then addressed him, directly this time.

BOOTHS AT BAZAAR TRIUMPHS OF ART

Proceeds of Lakefield Church Fair Broke Record.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 16.—The Ladies' Aid of the Regent St. Church held their annual bazaar in the basement of the church on Friday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, and the rooms were thronged the entire afternoon with a crowd in which the fair sex largely predominated. The various committees had spared no effort to make the room attractive and succeeded admirably. Every booth was a triumph of art and the combination gave an artistic effect rarely seen.

As one entered the door the reception committee, Mrs. S. A. Kemp, Miss Webster and Mrs. S. S. Spence, gave one the hearty welcome one is accustimed to receive from the Ladies' Aid, and one is given the freedom of the bazaar. The first booth was the candy booth, a bower of violet and white, the table being loaded with every one of the fifty-seven varieties of home-made, which found a ready sale. Those in charge were:—Mrs. S. Pearson (convenor), Mrs. Erskine, Mrs. A. E. Higgins and Mrs. Nixon.

The next booth was the "Woollen Booth" where sweaters, mits, caps, babies' knitted wear, etc., was on sale and the fact that the receipts of this booth had nearly quadrupled past records is sufficient guarantee of its success. The decorations were in the Christmas colors, red and green, and the Christmas bells suspended reminded one of the festive season so rapidly approaching. Mrs. John Charlton was the convenor, and was assisted by Mrs. Frank Darling and Mrs. Scriver.

The home cooking stall with its red and green paper festoons and miniature Christmas tree was also popular as the steady patronage which cleared the table of its dainties demonstrated. Mrs. J. Reid was convenor, and Mrs. H. J. Abbott and Mrs. J. E. Galvin her assistants.

The handkerchief booth, which was the smallest of all was a dainty bower of green and green with holly and poinsettias used freely in the decoration. Handkerchiefs of every sort, from the daintiest feminine variety to the plain linen ones for the men, were prettily displayed. This booth did a thriving trade. Mrs. D. H. Webster was convenor and Mrs. W. Sherrin her assistant.

The apron booth was a triumph of art, with its color scheme of pale mauve and white and the decorations of the most realistic morning glories made by the committee. The effect was extremely pretty and many compliments were paid those who conceived the idea and carried it out so well. Aprons, plain and fancy, were in abundance at 3 o'clock, but were scattered far and wide among the numerous customers by 6 o'clock. Mrs. Walter Hamblin and Mrs. Geo. Spence were joint convenors of this booth and were assisted by Mrs. A. Darling, Mrs. A. D. Payne, Mrs. J. H. Payne, Mrs. Purdy, and Mrs. G. A. Welbourne.

Next door to the apron stall the fancy work booth was placed, which was a triumph of scarlet and white with flaming poppies everywhere. The effect was striking and extremely attractive. This booth was the mecca of Christmas gift seekers and gifts for all ages found a ready sale. Mrs. W. H. Stabler and Mrs. E. H. Northey were joint convenors and were assisted by Miss Milburn, Mrs. J. R. Northey, Mrs. R. Simpson and Mrs. P. Spence.

Comparison between the booths was impossible as each one was a veritable triumph, each had a definite scheme of decoration, well carried out, and the combination gave a delightful effect. The tea room, with its Christmasy red and green festoons, added its quota to the general loveliness. A realistic fire place showed a friendly red glow at the end of the room and gave the home touch. Mrs. Grylls and Mrs. Nathan Payne were convenors of the tea-room committee and poured the tea; Mrs. Wagar was in the cashier's stand and the waitresses were Miss Mamie Brown, Mrs. A. C. Carveth, Mrs. H. Dunford, Mrs. Grant, Miss Grylls, Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Gordon Northey. The tea room was thronged with customers all afternoon. Mrs. Robert Bullock and Mrs. W. J. Dunford were in charge of the kitchen arrangements and kept a supply of fresh made tea to fill "the cup that cheers."

During the afternoon music was provided by Miss Jean Erskine, Miss Marion Pearson and Misses Janet and Phyllis Charlton.

The financial returns for the afternoon were $315.50, which was about $100 more than usual, a fact most gratifying to all concerned. The apron sale netted $96.50, and the fancy work $70, and about $65 from the woolen table.

This bazaar which is an annual event, is always well patronized and, this year's effort met with greater success than ever before. Rev. and Mrs. S. A. Kemp expressed great satisfaction at the manner in which the afternoon's activities were carried out.

CALLS WORLD PEACE A SHAM

Guns Bristle Behind Mask of Friendship, Says Irish Novelist.

DOUBTS LOCARNO.

DETROIT, Dec. 15.— Branding the signing of the Locarno Treaties as a farce and declaring that the nations of Europe are today deliberately planning for another great war, Shaw Desmond, Irish novelist, declared here that probably within the next 10 or 15 years Europe would be engaged in the most devastating conflict of history.

"Italy today has 1,400 poison airplanes ready for instant service," Mr. Desmond said. "Such a fleet could destroy 300,000,000 people within three hours. France is also preparing a great fleet of planes and poison gas for use when the conflict breaks.

"Representatives of France and Germany met a few days ago and shook hands, after the signing of the Locarno treaty, and pledged those two nations to perpetual peace, yet each knew perfectly well that both countries are doing their utmost to be ready for a conflict which both expect to come soon.

Repairing Army.

"A general of the French staff told me a few weeks ago that France is preparing millions of black men to be ready to serve France in the next war, and he declared that such a war was not far distant.

"The nations of Europe and the Orient are honeycombed with secret alliances and treaties, all looking to the next great conflict which they believe inevitable on account of the economic conditions pressing on the less favored nations in the world's markets. The League of Nations, the World Court and the Locarno Treaties are all superficial farces calculated to make a showing of peace and good intention while those nations are, in reality, deliberately preparing for war.

"The Christian religion, divided into its many sects—there are 78 of them in the United Staets — and ministering to national egotism in every country of the Western Hemisphere, added fuel to the fire of the last war instead of making men respect and love each other. Every flag flying over nations in the last war was blessed by priests of the Christian faith as soldiers under those flags went out to kill each other.

Race Hatreds.

"Nothing but a slow, determined educational process, teaching the people of the whole world to fraternize and respect each other as children of a common Father can avail against the race hatreds and economic competition which are driving the world into a conflict where one airplane can do more damage than 20 battleships.

If world conditions ever come to the point of a physical challenge of Asia to white civilization, Japan leading China, and the Pan-Moslem League, rapidly gaining strength and purpose to wipe out domination of the white race, would have complete domination of the world.

"Such a challenge is imminent. Nothing but the leadership of America, considered the only clean white nation in the world by China and Japan, can prevent such a calamity. To meet this situation, America and England should realize at once that the economic depression of the Orient must be lifted. Japan's 80,000,000 people, growing at the rate of approximately a million a year, must have more room.

No Choice for Japan.

"Japan has no choice in this matter, for birth control is utterly impossible in the Orient under present conditions. There are 350 Japanese to every square mile of Japanese territory, and every acre of arable land in Japan has to support 700 people. An acre in Australia supports only one and one-half people. If the Australians and the controlling minds of the British Empire had within them the first elements of real statesmanship, they would give three-fourth of Australia over to the Japanese for colonization. But of course they will not do that, and Japan must continue to force her way into outlying territory, as she has been doing for the last half-century.

"The conversion of Japan to the western idea of machine production is woorking havoc with the spirituality of Japan. That nation is rapidly becoming materialistic and atheistic, and once the anchorage of the old religions of Japan is broken that nation will become absolutely ruthless in the effort to find a place in the world for her growing millions. Today Japan has one of the strongest standing armies of the world. Her navy has never been defeated. Her schooling at the hands of the United States has given her an aptness and a readiness in the arts of war excelled by no other nation.

ANNUAL SALE HELD BY UNITED CHURCH

Large Crowd Attended During Afternoon and Evening at Madoc.

MADOC, Dec. 16.—Once more the vacant store in the Shaw block was converted into a hive humming with activity on Saturday afternoon, when the ladies of the United Church held their annual sale of fancy work. Many pieces of fine needle-work were on view, ranging in size from babies' bibs to quilts. One untique feature was a splendid Christmas tree hung with mock oranges, gleaming golden against the dark green of the branches. On closer inspection the oranges proved to be surprise packages tied up in orange crepe paper, which sold for five, ten and twenty-five cents.

A large crowd attended during the afternoon and evening; high tea being served at six o'clock.

The spirit of Christmas is abroad in Madoc these days. Evidences of its presence are plainly discernible in the stores, where the merchants have excelled themselves in decorating and displaying their wares. Charming bits of pottery, silver and brass gleam against a background of Christmas scarlet, dainty silk garments of rainbow hues, bright coloured flowers, articles of ivory and crystal sparkle under the overhanging red bells; tempting piles of candy and fruit, all beckon to the passersby and smilingly watch them leave with a lighter purse.

On Saturday morning the Christmas spirit turned the main street into a maze of rainbow colours and merry voices, when Cross & Co. entertained the children of the village.

At eleven o'clock came the grand surprise of the morning. The children were hustled out of doors just in time to see a huge red, white and blue striped balloon slowly floating out from an upper window. A merry scene ensued, when eager, laughing girls and boys pursued the baloon to the next crossing, where it was finally caught. Then out floated a whole shower of balloons of all sizes, shapes and colours. At the close of the game some lucky little chaps had captured four or five, and the unfortunate ones who had not been quick enough to secure any, were consoled by gifts of toys, while jolly old Santa Claus stood by his chimney and winked at the crowd of grown-ups who were enjoying the antics of the little ones.

OBITUARY.

JOHN HENRY ROLLO.

Campbellford, December 16.

The funeral of John Henry Rollo will be held this afternoon from his late residence on the west side to Mount Pleasant cemetery. Rev. Jas. Grier, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, will conduct religious service at the home at 2 o'clock.

The late Mr. Rollo, resided on a farm in Seymor with his brother James and an unmarried sister up to about ten years ago, when the family moved to Campbellford. The deceased who was 60 years old, was never married. One of his sisters is Mrs. R. Meiklejohn, of Rawdon Township.

ELEVATOR FIRE SECOND IN WEEK

Wm. Johnson's House Burned Tuesday Night—Farmers Lose Grain.

THRESHING ENDS.

CAVAN, —Dec. 16.—The burning of the Douglas Elevator at Frazerville on Saturday night is the second fire in a week in Cavan, Wm. Johnson's house being burned last Tuesday night. Both fires occurred on windy nights, making it impossible to extinguish the fires.

Had Mr. Douglas had a good fire brigade and engine he could have saved thousands of bushels of grain after the elevator burst. The Peterboro Fire brigade got there about dark on Sunday night.

Millbrook and Omemee brigades refused to go as their towns would be left without fire protection.

The burning of the elevator will be felt keenly by many farmers. A number had their wheat and other grain stored there, but had not had their tickets marked, so that they will be the losers.

Time for Taxes.

Hundreds of dollars are being paid in, at Millbrook, these days in taxes. They will be at par up to Dec. 15th; after that date all unpaid taxes will have an extra tax added on. Cavan taxes this year are higher, probably owing to the fact that the value of the statute labor is not deducted. It was paid for after it was done in June. The taxes on a hundred acres in Cavan, average, land and buildings, runs up over one hundred dollars. It seems almost a rent.

On one farm in Cavan, where the taxes in 1902 were $23, this year they are one hundred and two dollars and some cents.

Crows Destructive.

A short time ago an article was published in The Examiner, stating that crows are more useful than destructive. It must be so, as it was so conclusively proved; but it is hard for a farmerette to think so in spring when trying to raise a flock of chickens or a farmer when his corn is just sown or is peeping through the ground.

Threshing Nearly Finished.

Mr. Isaac Fallis has been threshing in Cavan Centre this week. The grain threshing is almost completed. Mr. Brackenridge threshed alsike for R. S. Staples last week; he had thirty-five bags of alsike. It yielded well considering the number of times it had to be turned. The wet spell just came when many had alsike cut.

Mr. R. Matchett sold a roan Durham calf to Mr. Bolen, Indian River.

Fowl are very plentiful on the market just now, so much so that the price has gone down and some are disposing of fowl at shooting matches.

CHURCH BUSINESS IS ALL CLEARED UP

Warsaw Presbyterians Have No Definite Plans for the Future.

WARSAW, Dec. 16.—The Presbyterians held a business meeting in the Church on Monday evening. The gathering was a very pleasant one. All their business affairs are properly and happily settled so that they have a clear sheet. What will be done in the future is undecided as there are no definite plans.

Women's Institute.

The regular meeting of the Warsaw Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon.

In giving her report the delegate noticed that the great stress of the convention seemed laid on music, health, physical and moral, and the home, "Back to the Home," was the slogan of one of the speakers. Young people have to go outside the home for amusements. The use of the government bulletins, and pamphlets was urged, as also the classes and demonstrations; if not these opportunities were wasted. Money is necessary, but other things, may be even more important. Helping the new-comers to be good citizens was stressed.

Hon. Mr. Martin spoke of the necessity of understanding things in agriculture. Everything that grows has an enemy, and there is great waste of combatting these enemies is not carried on intellectually.

Those who wish to send Christmas cake or other articles for the Christmas box to the Armenian boys' home in Georgetown, are asked to leave the articles at Mrs. Sargent's home, by Friday afternoon when Mrs. Sargent and Mrs. Miller will pack and ship them.

At the departmental classes to be held in February, the instruction is free. The Institute is responsible for properly heated rooms; naturally, whatever expense may be for that, will have to be collected from the students. It is desirable to have the names of those wishing to attend in time to enable them to secure a proper room, as their own are hardly large enough for work rooms.

The classes are from 10 a.m. until 3.30 p.m. There is no limit to the age. Millinery classes will be held all week-days except Saturday from Monday, Feb. 1, to Friday 12. Sewing classes the same from Monday, Feb. 15 to Friday, Feb. 26. Anyone may attend either or both of these classes. Some who have already attended in Norwood have signified their intention of doing so here.

Motoring is still very dangerous. Even with the most careful driving, and chains, cars will go where they should not.

Several have lost so many turkeys that they are going out of them and getting geese. When a large flock is reduced to less than half a dozen, the actual loss is quite heavy.

STEAL CAR RIDES.

TOKIO, Dec. 16.—Rumors that many persons were stealing free rides on street cars caused 400 officials of the company to disguise and attempt to "beat the company." The final report showed that only five of the 400 were caught by vigilant conductors.

MAYOR MEYERS HAS ANNOUNCED RETIREMENT FROM MAYORALTY

Campbellford's Chief Magistrate Whil Not Be Candidate For Re-election.

SERVED FIVE YEARS.

Is Being Mentioned For Vacancy on Water and Light Commission.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 16—Mayor A. J. Meyers authorizes the announcement that he will not be a candidate for re-election this year.

The Mayor was elected to the Town Council soon after coming here from Peterborough and at the end of his first year was promoted to the Mayoralty by acclamation without opposition altogether three times and was successful in two elections when he was opposed so that he is now completing his fifth year as Mayor. If he chose to carry on and remain in the field he could no doubt equal the record of ex-Mayor Tommy Church of Toronto.

From present indications the Mayor is not to be allowed to return to private life and his name is already mentioned in connection with a place on the Water and Light Commission to succeed E. A. Caddy whose term expires and who has removed to Peterborough. The Mayor has been a member of the Commission by virtue of his office for the past five years and is perfectly familiar with the work.

MONTREAL CUSTOMS INSPECTOR DISMISSED AFTER INVESTIGATION

Inquiry Into Administration of Office Caused His Dismissal.

FOLLOWS MOTION.

Bisaillon Was Only Officer Named By Member in Notice About Smuggling.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16. (Canadian Press).—J. E. A. Bisaillon, special inspector of Customs and Excise at Montreal, has been dismissed from the Customs service by an Order-in-Council passed on December 12. Mr. Bisaillon was relieved of his duties yesterday, and G. E. M. Hooter, of the Customs Department at Ottawa, has been placed in temporary charge of the office until such time as a competent bilingual officer can be permanently appointed.

Mr. Bisaillon is the only Customs officer mentioned in the notice of motion given by Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative member for Vancouver Centre, on December 1, 1925, for a special Parliamentary committee to investigate the administration of the Customs Department in relation to all matters affecting the prevention of smuggling. Hon. George H. Boivin, Minister of Customs and Excise, stated last night that the action taken by the Government was the result of an investigation into the administration of the affairs of the Montreal office.

C. G. Macneil, Secretary of the Great War Veterans' Association at Ottawa headquarters, who along with the other members of the staff has resigned to give a clear field for the reorganization.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S. ANNUAL MEETING

Shows Progress in All Branches.

Report of Year's Activities

The annual meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held on Tuesday afternoon and was well attended. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by responsive Bible reading led by Mrs. A. Moir, after which Miss Craw offered up a prayer.

Each officer for the year 1925 gave an annual report, showing very encouraging and satisfactory results. The secretary's yearly report was as follows:

"In presenting this report for 1925 we feel that this year has been one of many opportunities for service and that under the leadership of our able president, Mrs. John, we have been able to share in the work carried on by the great society of which we form a part.

Throughout the year we have had eleven well-attended meetings as well as ten executive meetings.

The highest attendance being 65 and an average attendance of about 40. At these meetings inspiring addresses were received from Mrs. Arthur Stevenson of the Local Council of Women; Mrs. MacKinnon of Knox Church; Mrs. Johnston of Toronto; Mrs. Jull of Lakefield, and Mrs. Waters, a returned missionary from Central India. Papers were also given by Miss Niven, Miss Best, Mrs. John, and Miss Jean Anderson. A report of the Provincial Convention in London was made by Mrs. Geo. Henderson, and of the Presbyterial meeting in Cobourg by Mrs. John. Solos by Mesdames Johnston, Parlour, Spriggs, Turner, Widdess, Byers and Miss Blanchard added much to our meetings and the service of song rendered by these ladies was much appreciated. Miss Craw also contributed her monthly review of the Messenger, in her interesting and helpful style.

Funds for the Expense Fund were raised early in the year by teas at the homes of Mrs. Robert Harstone and Mrs. J. W. Gordon. In July an outdoor meeting was held on the lawn of Mrs. Geo. Evans.

Our Thanksgiving meeting was well attended, and the offering, a generous one. Three life memberships were presented at this meeting. Mrs. Laing presented one to Mrs. Robt. McWilliams on behalf of the Home Helpers, while Mrs. Henry and Mrs. John also became Charter members of the W.M.S. of the United Church.

The executive of the Peterborough Presbyterial held a meeting in October in the Ladies' Parlor, and dinner was served to the members. Our Society is well represented on this executive, five of our members hold office—Mrs. Johns as 2nd vice president; Mrs. Gordon, 4th vice president; Mrs. MacKinnon as press secretary, and Mrs. McKone as mission band secretary.

A Women's Sunday was held on Sunday, October 25, with Mrs. Johnston of Toronto as speaker.

The bale of supplies this year was sent to Round Lake.

Though the year has been one of great change in our Church history and we miss the familiar faces of some of our valuable workers and members, yet we welcome the workers and members who have come to us from other auxiliaries, and hope that the year 1926 will find us "united" in the true sense and all laboring together in our endeavor to make come true the motto of the W.M.S.: "The World for Christ.

E. Shirley, Secretary."

The officers for the year 1926 who were elected by acclamation are as follows:

Hon. president, Mrs. Wm. Fowler; president, Mrs. D. John; vice presidents, Mesdames Kerr, Elliott, Gillespie; secretary, Mrs. E. Shirley; treasurer, Mrs. Zeihr; Strangers' secretary, Mrs. Henry; supply secretaries, Mesdames Jamieson and Eaton; Home Helpers, Mrs. McWilliams; Messenger secretary, Miss Best; library and literature secretary, Mrs. Niven; corresponding secretary, Miss Craw; Look-Out secretary, Mrs. Kerr; press secretary, Mrs. H. Tremain; Mission Band, Miss Jean Anderson; pianist, Mrs. Gordon; executive: Mesdames Waddell, Porteous, Mein, Nelson, Gillespie, MacKinnon.

A very pleasing feature of the meeting was Henry Van Dyke's beautiful story entitled "The Other Wise Man," read by Mrs. Barnes, and which was so appropriate to the Christmas Season. Miss Bertha Hill contributed a vocal solo, after which Mrs. Barnes closed the meeting with Van Dyke's Christmas Prayer.

SOCIAL EVENING AT FINAL REHEARSAL

Male Voice Choir Wound Up Year With Happy Event.

The Peterborough Male Voice Choir bade farewell to 1925 last night when the members disbanded for the holiday season. On the fifth of January practices will be resumed in preparation for a concert which will take place in the latter part of March or the first of April. For an hour a spirited attack was made on a number of the repertoire selections with splendid effect; after that time had elapsed the ladies joined their carolling mates and a festive completion was added. A splendid concert of vocal and instrumental selections with occasional dances interspersed provided what the president, Fred Gandy, was pleased to term, "the most enjoyable social evening which the Male Voice Choir has given since its inception six years ago."

The choir, under the direction of Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., and numbering more than 70 voices, went through the practise with commendable zeal and dispatch, rehearsing ten of the numbers from the new program. Some of them are: "London Town," "The Jolly Roger," "Song of the Northmen," "Swing Along," "Sweet Miss Mary," "The Big Brown Bear," "The Brownies," "The Laughing Song," "Let Their Celestial Concerts All Unite" by Handel and "The Little Old Garden." Others on the list are "I Know Two Bright Eyes," "The Pilgrims' Chorus," "I Passed by Your Window" and "The Trumpeter."

Following the practice Mr. Gandy took over the meeting and after the reading of the minutes it was resolved that the preparations for the ensuing year be left in the hands of the executive. After the brief business session, R. J. Kidd, Honorary President, acted as chairman for the entertainment. The first number called was an instrumental by the Misses MacFarlane and C. S. Thompson consisting of piano, guitar and harmonic. A vocal trio rendered a coon song in true darky harmony and as an encore number sang "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia." Albert and Thomas Williams and Sid Willis were the artists. A quadrille was the next number announced and an effort was made to get it started but whether the quadrille enthusiasts were afflicted with self consciousness or really preferred the fox trot the latter prevailed.

Thomas Stazicker presented two dramatic recitations with a musical background supplied by Mr. Chenhall Sr. Ronald Fleming then sang "Beauty's Eyes" accompanied by Mr. Chenhall with a violin obligato by Fred Chenhall. Frank Pratt, after being carried bodily to the middle of the floor presented a bass solo, "The Deep Blue Sea." The concluding number was a solo by Hugh Niven "My Rose" with a choir ensemble chorus.

Miss Agnes Logan, the choir pianist, played for the rehearsal and Charles Sedgewick for the dancing.

Mr. Gandy thanked those who had attended for their presence and extended the compliments of the season. He declared that the evening which he had enjoyed so much proved to his satisfaction that the choir was too exclusive and had missed its objective. He declared that there should be more social evenings and opportunities of meeting the public for the purpose of getting acquainted.

Mr. Gandy intimated earlier in the evning that a harpist and a dramatic soloist had been engaged to aid in the presentation of the choir concert next year.

Western Wheat Pools Paying $1.00 a Bushel

TORONTO, December 16. Canadian Press. — C. H. Burnell, president of the Manitoba wheat pool, who is in Toronto, stated this morning that the wheat pools in the west, would handle 200,000,000 bushels of western wheat crop this year.

"This year we have been making an initial payment of $1 a bushel for No. 1 Northern laid down at Fort William."

The pools, he said, now had 100 elevators of their own in the western provinces.

Mine Shares Are Lower Trade Volume Drops

TORONTO, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press)—Pre-holiday apathy led to a lowering of values on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange this morning although price fluctuations were not drastic. The trading was light, a total of 117,4378 shares changing hands.

In the gold section McIntyre and Wright Hargreaves each declined 15 cents, the former to 21.80 and the latter to 7.00. Lake Shore lost 9 at 9.00. In the silvers Nipissing was fairly active, dropping 5 cents to 6.35.

Speculators Switch To Railroad Shares

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press) — Extensive switching from industrial to railroad shares again was the outstanding feature in today's stock market. Over a score of issues broke into new high ground for the year. One of the interesting developments of the session was the huge spread in the quotation on Michigan Central stock, which was bid $720 cash a share and offered at $850, no sales being reported up to 1 p.m. Buoyancy also developed in a few specialties, Continental Insurance jumping nearly six points and American Bank Note five.

Sharp Setback In Wheat On Argentine's Good Report

CHICAGO, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press).—Wheat underwent a sharp setback in price today as the result of general selling on account of the bearish character of the complete official crop report from Argentina. This report, received overnight, was greatly at variance with the assumptions due to Government figures yesterday from only two Argentine provinces. The new report, however, was viewed skeptically by numerous traders, and there was active buying on the decline. Opening prices, 1 7-8c to 4c lower, new style, December 169 to 170, and May 165 to 166, were followed by a moderate rally, later then by fresh downturns, with December touching 168 1-2 and May 164 5-8.

Corn and oats receded with wheat. After opening, 1-2c to 1c down, May 83 to 84c, the corn market continued to sag.

Oats started, May 45c and later showed a little further drop.

Provisions were firmer, sympathizing with an upturn in hog values.

Trading Fairly Heavy With No Definite Trend

TORONTO, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press).—With no definite trend to the market, trading was moderately heavy on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Brazilian, British Columbia Fishing, and Consolidated Smelters were the active leaders.

Fishing's advance was the feature of the session, the stock being sold up to 62 at the close, a two-point gain. Smelters improved a half point, but Brazilian fluctuated very narrowly and closed the morning an eighth lower at 81 3-8. An advance of a point and an eighth in Canadian Pacific Railway at 147 1-8 was another feature, and the Canadian Canners issues, in active dealings, were strong. Common improved a quarter, and Preferred strengthened a half point. Brantford eased three-quarters, and F. N. Burt an eighth.

Chicago Board Of Trade Forming Clearing House

CHICAGO, Dec. 16. Canadian Press. — The reorganization programme of the Chicago Board of Trade is now ready to be rounded out with the establishment of a clearing house early in January. This is the last of the changes in the official supervision on grain trading which came with the passage of the grain futures act, the board's own internal house cleaning, and the suggestion of the secretary of agriculture.

The clearing house, advocated by many of the members of the board, especially those out of town, was adopted on the suggestion of the Secretary of Agriculture and the board's committee has been working out the plans for several months.

Miss Ada Shaughnessy, captain of the Pansies, holds the high score to date, of 244 for a single game, and also the record of 530 for ladies' high three games.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA CONCERT

(By Jeannette.)

The first of a series of three concerts to be presented this winter by the Peterboro Symphony Orchestra was given in the hall of the Conservatory of Music last evening. Although the crowd in attendance was not very large, it was an appreciative audience that listened to the music of the orchestra and the singing of a group of assisting artists, pupils of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park.

The orchestra under direction of Professor Gliddon, gave a splendid concert last evening, and every selection was heartily applauded. They played with the vim and enthusiasm that always characterizes this organization, every member appearing to take an individual and personal interest in getting the last bit of music out of their instruments. This quality of individuality sometimes interferes slightly with their ensemble work, but the majority of the numbers were played with a smoothness of execution, an attractive, rounded tone, and a careful attention to attack and release that, combined with a choice of attractive music, made their programme exceptionally pleasing.

A bright "Coronation March" was the opening selection, followed by a rendition of the overture, "Don Giovanni," by Mozart, the latter an impressive selection, its sustained, low-toned introduction swelling out in a volume of concerted melody that broke up later into separate movements for the strings and the brass.

"Yuletide" was a charming arrangement of Christmas music, with the "Cantique de Noel" and the "Adeste Fidelis" as prominent bits, and an effective inclusion of chiming midnight bells.

The outstanding number of the orchestral programme, and one that received repeated and enthusiastic applause, was an entirely new selection—presented for the first time last evening—and entitled "In a Persian Market." Characteristically Oriental and descriptive from the first to the last note, this was an exceptionally interesting number, and was played splendidly. It is to be hoped that it will be repeated in later programmes to larger audiences. The theme is based on the arrival in a Persian market of a Princess, who departs after a short stay, and the songs of the camel-drivers and the beggars and the arrival of the caravan, are realistically reproduced in the languorous music of the East. The reiterated smothered beating of the drum and the inclusion of a vocal chorus by the men helped to make this selection quite out of the ordinary.

The concluding number of the orchestra was a rural suite, "Woodland Pictures," its three scenes demonstrating in music the bucolic atmosphere of a rustic merry-making, the first movement having a folk-song character, with the light gayety of the lasses, and the rough merriment of the yokels in its music, the second a more romantic feeling of the onlooker, and the third a bright, dancing movement, with paramount tones in cornet and drum.

A vocal interlude was the rendition of a cycle of Old English melodies; "Flora's Holiday," sung by a quartette, Mrs. Ford Turner, contralto, Miss Helen Lamb, soprano, Mr. M. H. Park, tenor, and Mr. R. A. Browne, bass. Quartette numbers included the opening, "Come, all ye Lads and Lasses," an unaccompanied selection, and the finale, "The Commotion of Love." With excellent voice and expression, the solo numbers were given by the four members, Miss Lamb sang "Love's Greeting," Mrs. Turner, "Maidens, Beware Ye," Mr. Park, "Tell Me, Charming Creature," and Mr. R. A. Browne, "A Soft Argument." A catch, "The Peddler," was very well done. The solos of Mr. Park and Mr. Browne received extra applause from their audience, the latter being compelled to repeat a portion of his very well rendered bit, "A Sound Argument." Direction of this quartette was in the hands of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, and piano accompaniment by Miss Agnes Logan.

An interesting number, and one that received a hearty encore, resulted to by the playing of a second selection, was the cornet solo, "The Lost Chord," by Professor Gliddon, whose fine musicianship was amply demonstrated in this piece, done with soft orchestral accompaniment.

The stage last evening presented an attractive appearance. It was hung with dark green hangings, centred by a large red and green Christmas wreath, with high lights of color in the tall red candles, and the rose-shaded piano lamp.

Mr. John Crane, president of the Peterboro Symphony Orchestra announced the numbers on the programme. Accompaniments to the orchestral music were played by Miss Olga Fowler in her usual very efficient style.

Before taking down the clothesline rub a damp cloth along it, taking away the dust that has gathered while it has been hanging. That will prevent any of that dirt from getting on your clothes the next time it is used, besides being more pleasant to handle.

TOO MANY TEACHERS REPORTS INSPECTOR

Says First Year's Training Should be Period of Probation.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 16.—(By Canadian Press).—"Teachers are so plentiful that positions cannot be found for them," according to G. A. Wheable, Inspector-Administrator of this city's educational life. On his recommendation only first class certificate holders will be appointed in future on the city staff. "It is not always those most brilliant in Normal school training and examinations who make the best teachers," he said. "If a plan of probationary training for the first year at Normal School were adopted, a great deal of the difficulty would be eliminated. "The present one-year course should be only a testing period after which the prospective teacher could write an examination for entrance to the official Normal School teachers' training course."

An Attractive Group of Hats

Left-over bits from a coat or dress may easily be utilised for making some of these hats, since they make clever use of small pieces. In every instance gored sections were used for the crowns, because they fit more snugly to the head. If there is material left over from a coat it is smart as well as economical to make a hat out of the matching pieces. Often a contrast is effective, such as having the hat, collar and cuffs of matching material yet contrasting with the coat, creating the ensemble idea. No. 1278 is in sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. Size 4 years requires ⅝ yard 32 or 36 inch material for each hat, with ¼ yard additional lining for the crown. Price 20 cents.

WESTERN CLINIC FLAYS FASHIONS

"Started by Daring Actress With No Particular Character," He Said.

DESIRE SMARTNESS

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 16. —(Canadian Press).—Modern fashions are following the line of least resistance, while the fear of social ostracism compells many women to adopt foolish customs or wear clothing often immodest and vulgar, declared Rev. G. A. Wells, Warden of St. John's College, Winnipeg, in the course of a lecture.

"A new way of dressing your hair and not dressing yourself usually started by some actress with a daring reputation and no particular character, is often the origin of fashion," Mr. Wells said. It was about time he thought that someone was strong enough to stand out. There was too great a desire to be smart as the next party, and capitalizing this weakness, the designers were driving many a good man into bankruptcy, the speaker maintained. The mad craze for change in garments made women slaves. They did not use their own judgment, but depended upon designers who were often without any creative sense and too prone to emphasize extremes.

"I like pretty things," the speaker said, "but I detest with all the manhood in me the present trend of fashions." He confessed that some fashions stimulated individuality in the leaders and in some measure led to progress, but it also led to fads and crazes. "If there is anything that raises the Old Adam in me it is to see a charming lady on one end of a string and a little dog at the other," Mr. Wells added.

In a lighter vein he asked an explanation for such "irrational customs" as French heels, pierced ears, flimsy dresses in winter, spurs at receptions, rice at weddings. Why was thirteen unlucky? Why was it fashion to be late at meetings? Why long speeches?

Mr. Wells dealt with instinct and habit, intelligence, reason and will. He spoke of suggestion and branded the school of Freud as vicious. Magazines and photoplays were full of rubbish founded on this one idea, he asserted. The worst feature of suggestion, he said, was that unscrupulous persons used it to victimize and make money out of human weakness. Canada, he believed, was not paying sufficient attention to custom, which, he claimed, was a valuable aid in national development.

Colored Lights Latest For The Modern Beauty

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 16. —(Canadian Press).—Colored lights to suit the customer's temperament, to soothe her astral body, inner self or whatever it is called, are the newest discoveries in face massaging instituted by local beauty shops. Such lights are said to afford the poor weary body it inhabits a few minutes, respite from the wear and tear of its tantrums. They are also said to iron out small wrinkles. Green lights are especially soothing to people of nervous temperaments, causing relaxation, often times sleep. Blue lights are most useful in reducing infectious conditions of scalp or face, the lights being applied after cleansing the affected surface.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY DECEMBER 17.

An unusually active and prosperous day may be expected from the auspicious planetary rulership, both by lunar and mutual configurations. With the greater fortunes in dominant positions and the so-called malefics of first rank in friendly and powerful attitude, all affairs should react in substantial growth, with increases of money and expanding business. The favorable stimulus to initiative should be taken advantage of, since all new ventures and radical departures, in business, travel, employment or adventure are encouraged.

Those whose birthday it is should have an excellent year before them for launching out into new adventures and bold enterprises. There is augury of success, initiative, increased business and finances, as well as fresh opportunities in employment. A child born on this day should be steady, persevering, and enterprising and should make money and rise to good position in life.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D., Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Cold weather is a trying time for old people and babies. Rain, sleet, snow, cold winds, draughts of air and all the evils of Winter are bad for the very old and the very young.

January and February bring pneumonia and other diseases of the breathing organs. Unusual care must be exercised at this season.

Cold air is not harmful. Chilling is dangerous. If the baby is warmly covered it won't harm the child a bit to be taken out of doors every day. But if there is lack of covering, the body becomes chilled, and then there is trouble ahead.

One of the reasons why Winter is bad for baby is because the anxious mother is so afraid of the cold that she robs the child of fresh air. She cuddles the youngster, shuts him up in a corner nails the window shut and tucks rugs around it to keep the air out, and by screens of various sorts "protects" the baby from draughts and cold.

This is all wrong. It is just as important to give a baby pure air in Winter as it is in July. There can be no resistance to disease without an abundance of oxygen. There can be no proper digestion of the food without an abundance of oxygen.

Of course, good judgment must be exercised in beginning out-of-door life for the baby. A Summer or Autumn baby should be so accustomed to the open air by this time that a daily outing of an hour or so is safe and desirable.

A new baby, one born this Winter, cannot be taken out until the age of two or three months has been reached. Of course, much depends on the vigor of the infant and the kind of weather. But when conditions are favorable the fresh outside air will do lots of good.

If it seems inadvisable to take the infant out-of-doors, this is no reason why it cannot be thoroughly aired in the house. The windows of one room should be opened and the wrapped-up infant can be given a lot of oxygen this way.

It makes no difference whether the baby is awake or asleep. The airing will do him good anyway.

An infant should have just as much air space in the sleeping room as an adult has. It is a terrible mistake to overlook this necessary thing. Because the little thing is so tiny, there is a popular idea that a narrow nook anywhere will do.

It won't do at all. The baby must have an abundance of pure air if it is to thrive. Dust, smoke and irritating vapors are worse for a little child than for an adult. The atmosphere must be free from contamination and given to the baby in abundance.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silvar

BOBBY HAS A LOVELY ADVENTURE

"Oh, pshaw!" Bobby grumbled, pulling in his fishing line. "Not a bite. I'll just bet my new hat—"

"Wait - a - second, wait - a - second," laughed a merry voice and a dear little elfin poked his head out from behind a bush where he had been watching Bobby for a long time, "don't bet your new hat. You might lose it, with me so near."

"Oh Happy Giggles!" Bobby cried, jumping up and catching hold of the elfin's hand. "I didn't know you were here. Say, tell me, are there any fish in this sea? I haven't had a bite and I've been sitting here for a long time."

"Sure, this water is just full of fish of all kinds," replied the elfin. "If you doubt my word, just come along and I'll show you some fellows you wouldn't even care to catch on your line." Before Bobby could say anything, Happy Giggles caught his hand and away they rode right out upon a lovely big wave, into the very center of the shining waters.

"Hold your breath just for a second," said Happy Giggles. Then he waved his magic feather over Bobby's head and mumbled something under his breath. Slowly they began to sink. Bobby, closed his eyes for a minute and when he opened them, he was standing on the sands at the very bottom of the ocean, beside one of the queerest looking creatures he had ever seen.

"Hello there Mr. Cuttle-fish," and Happy Giggles caught hold of one of the queer creature's eight arms and shook it. "This is my little friend, Bobby."

"Hello There, Mr. Cuttle Fish!"

"Mighty glad to know you Bobby," and Mr. Cuttle-fish held out one of his other arms and shook Bobby's hand. "We Cuttle-fish are always glad to meet little boys. Have you ever seen a Cuttle-fish before? There," he cried, "such a silly thing for me to ask when I can see by your face you never have. Just have a good look and you'll know me when you see me the next time."

He was a queer looking fellow to be sure. The lower part of his body was shaped like a three-cornered bottle, running up towards his head like the neck of the bottle. On this was fastened a short neck and a funny-looking head with a great rolling eye on either side. Out from the very top of his head ra out eight little arms all covered with little suckers; then out from the two outside arms ran two great long tubes with flappers on the ends, covered with suckers.

"Funny-looking, I know it," said Mr. Cuttle-fish. "I am not only funny looking, but I am funny. You're not the only one who thinks so. Every one of my enemies think so too." With this, Mr. Cuttle-fish shook himself, and the water around Bobby became so dark he couldn't see a thing. Happy Giggles caught hold of his hand and when Bobby opened his eyes again he found himself standing on the bank.

"You see, that's the only way Mr. Cuttle-fish has of throwing off his enemies, by throwing out that ink-like fluid. From that very fluid comes the color your Daddy calls sepia. So you see, with all his funny looks, he is good for something." Then the fish added, "I must be going now, Bobby, but we'll go down again some day and see more of the water world." Then like a puff of smoke, Happy Giggles disappeared. Bobby glanced out at the dark spot in the water, gathered up his fishing tackle and hurried home, glad he lived on the Earth World rather than the Water World.

PETES MISSED MANY CHANCES

Toronto Press Say S. P. A. Semi-Final Was Anybody's Game.

ARNOTT PRAISED.

(Toronto Star.)

Amateur hockey was revived last night with all the ardor and brilliancy and the keenness and excitement that featured the heyday of a couple of years ago. Nothing as good in the way of hockey has been seen this winter to date, and nothing any better any other season—and that goes for either professional or amateur.

"Gunner" Arnott, the big centre ice player for Preston, gunned in three of his team's goal. His count that won the red-hot game came after one minute in the second half of the overtime period.

Either team might have won. As a hockey contest it had everything. Schmaltz and Joe Dwyer bordered on the sensational. The forwards raced up and down the ice with sheer recklessness. The rival defence players became jumbled into as many invasions as the forwards—and the defence men took frequent relief, so strenuous was the going.

A Great Goalkeeper.

Somebody remarked near the press box that Alfie Schmaltz would sooner swallow the puck that allow it to rest behind the Preston goal line. That was no idle chatter. What the Preston goaler didn't do to the Peterboro sharpshooters isn't on the menu.

McLeod, Parker, Bailey, Ranger, Collins, Cox and Rose were in on the Riversides' goal at least a dozen times when a goal seemed certain—Schmaltz either turned their shots aside or they nullified their own efforts by overanxiousness.

Joe Dwyer at the other end was also tasting some stinging pilis. Towards the end of the fray the Riverside puck-tossers had the big gloved hand of Dwyer waving around like a swinging tail light. Three times in as many minutes Dwyer did an acrobatic split in kicking out Preston shots—once he was in such a tangle it looked like his legs had parted from his body.

But the argument is that Peterboro tossed away many glorious chances by bad shooting or ineffectiveness around the net. Big Bert McLeod rolled in on an open net three or four times after beautiful lone-handed excursions, and then slammed the puck over the top of the net—all he had to do was to flick the rubber in to get a goal.

A Smart Team.

Preston had a smart, well rolled-out combination from beginning to end. The 1925 S.P.A. Peterboro champions didn't get working together till well on in the second period. Irvine Bailey, the wing flash, should have passed the puck many times in the initial period. The Petes took a lot out of themselves by their lone efforts to get through the Ashley-Talbot defence.

That extra experienced defence player that Preston carried with them just about was the person that enabled the Riversides to come from behind and win out in overtime. On the other hand, any time Bert McLeod or Parker benched themselves from the Beterboro defence, there was something lacking.

No one left the Arena last night disappointed at the hockey witnessed. Every one ought to be back when Preston meet Port Arthur on Friday night—with a lot of accompanying friends. From a spectacular and exciting point, few hockey games could equal the moments when Peterboro was conquered by Preston.

Last year Peterboro won the S.P.A. trophy. In their second game they defeated Preston by 3 to 2. They came from behind just the same as last night to tie up the score—but last night they didn't catch the winning goal. There was no star in the game because it would take something off the majority of players to name any particular one as the brightest in such a massed competition.

Preston scintillated with combination throughout. Arnott, Clarke, Groh, Burns, Ware and Julke passed and repassed the puck unselfishly and that was the reason they flashed in on Peterboro's goal so dangerously. The Petes had little consistency in their passing until the final period when combination made them look the stronger team.

Despite all their combination, it was surprising that Gunner Arnott scored three of Preston's four goals on individual forays. The Preston mid-area rover has a nifty habit of drawing the opposing defence to him and jumping through unscathed. Arnott scored the game's first goal, and the goal that won the torrid contest in overtime by this trick. Arnott's speed enabled him to score another goal that tied up the contest just before full time, when he bounced in his own rebound off the boards.

Bert McLeod, the backbone of the Peterboro, team played his best hockey in the first period and in the overtime. The ex-Varsity stalwart retired for breathers on three or four occasions. He got the goal that put Peterboro in front in the last period—he was in close enough a dozen other times to get notches on his blade.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Many fans will argue that the better team lost, but the general opinion is that Preston's combination and Arnott's sensational stick-handling won the game. Peterboro's defence was very weak at times. The Preston forwards found little trouble to get around McLeod and Parker, but beating Dwyer was a different matter. Despite the fact that he allowed four goals in during the game, Dwyer can only be blamed for one of them. Arnott's score in the overtime was his only error; the other three would have beaten any goalie. There were two lucky breaks in Dwyer's favor. He stopped one by accidentally raising his stick, when a flying puck from a scramble in front of the nets, hit the stick, to bounce but. A drive from Arnott hit the goal post with such a smack that it was heard all over the rink. Many fans claim the puck hit the net and glanced out to the bar. Dwyer did everything in the nets, even surprising the fans by doing a complete split to save a goal.

Bailey and Ranger.

Parker, handicapped with an injured leg, couldnt' get going till the last period, when he led two smart rushes. McLeod, with his solo work, stood out; his only fault was, and will always be, his failure to pass the rubber. Bailey stood out on the line. Ranger and Collins are demons for speed and combination. Ranger's shooting was a bit off, and what he did get on the net Schmaltz handled quite easily. Collins had his hands full trying to hold Arnott all evening. Rose was the best of the subs used, but Cox and Bogardis seemed woefully weak on their checking. Peterboro will make them all step in the Eastern O.H.A. this season, but they are not as strong for substitutes as they were last year.

The third period saw Peterboro stage a rally that almost won the game for them. They changed all their rushes to the individual style. During the last regular frame Bert McLeod led about 15 rushes on the Preston net, and actually passed the puck twice. McLeod did score with a lone effort, but he threw away a dozen chances to tally when he failed to pass the rubber to an uncovered team mate. Ranger started for Peterboro when he lifted the puck in from a face-off near the Preston net. McLeod's successful solo effort put the Petes ahead till Arnott tied the count. The pinch hitting "Gunner," with only three minutes to go, went in alone, hung on to the rubber, despite two dangerous checks, and slipped the puck past Dwyer from a side angle.

Irvin Bailey never gave up trying for the Petes last night. He got a rough handling throughout the game but he stood it all well.

Port Arthur is going to have some trouble stopping Ashley, Skelly and Talbot, the three defence stars on the Preston line-up.

The St. Patrick's Hockey Club turned out to a man to see last night's game. Tom Daly and "Hap" Day were the only ones that liked Peterboro before the overtime started.

Marmora Organizes

At a representative meeting of hockey enthusiasts convened in the St. James Hotel, Marmora, on Monday, December 14th, Mr. Fred Johnston was unanimously accorded the chair. On the proposition of Mr. Clifford Jones, Mr. M. E. Grant was elected as secretary-treasurer.

It was moved by Mr. A. T. Neal and seconded by Mr. John Jones that Mr. A. H. Connor be president. —Carried.

It was next moved by Mr. G. McWilliams and seconded by Mr. Clifford Jones that Mr. John Jones be manager.—Carried.

Mr. A. T. Neal, on the proposition of Mr. Clifford Jones, seconded by Mr. John Finnegan, was unanimously elected assistant manager.

Messrs. A. T. Neal, Edward Dunlay and Clifford Jones were appointed a committee to arrange for a box social and dance at an early date. Messrs. F. Johnston and W. D. Donnolley were appointed to look after a subscription list. The Marmora team is scheduled to play its first game at Tweed on January 5th and the locals are by no means under rating the strength of their first opponents.

The old colours are being resorted to in contesting for honours in the newly formed Hastings County League. It is hinted that Dr. A. T. Embury, M.P., will donate the cup. Possible and probable players are thinking of getting down to practice right away, a stern necessity if the team would emerge victorious at the season's end.

Satisfactory arrangements have been made between the team and Mr. John Finnegan, the rink manager on the matter of gate receipts. The rink is at present in excellent shape.

Mr. and Mrs. John Finnegan spent Saturday in Peterboro.

Mr. Ira Simmons, teller at the Dominion Bank, is at his home in Corbyville, suffering from tonsilitis.

INSIDE GOLF.

Maker of 61 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

By CHESTER HORTON

There are two ways of swinging the golf club into the ball—the hitting swing and the swinging hit.

The first named is what you want. This calls for a wrist action throw—or push—of the clubhead with the wrists, or hands, just as the clubhead nears the ball. Without this definite hand action you have merely a swinging hit. This latter may deliver a fine ball but if you add to this swing the hand-action - hit near the ball you will get more sting into the blow, more crispiness and a ball with somewhat greater distance. It should be borne in mind that the crispy hit at the ball is done entirely with the hands, or wrists. There is no body action in it at all. If you push the body forward, trying to hit, you will accomplish still more of a swinging hit. When the body acts the hands quit.

BALL PLAYER MOVES.

"Pickles" Pascoe Leaves Woodstock For St. Thomas.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 16—When the Woodstock intermediate line up on the ice for the opening game of the hockey season they will be minus the services of one of their best men in "Pickles" Pascoe, who left Tuesday to make his home in St. Thomas. In addition to being a sturdy defense man on the ice, Pascoe has been the star shortstop and relief pitcher in the Woodstock Baseball League for the last year. As a youngster he played on the Woodstock senior team when it was in the Southern Counties loop and he will be a valuable find for the St. Thomas ball team if he decides to play next summer. He has been given a position on the Michigan Central Railroad.

YANKEE FOOTBALL STARTED ON COAST

Difficulty in Playing Other Canadian Schools Responsible for Introduction.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—American football has made its debut in British Columbia, and whether it stays depends largely on the result of conferences now being held between representatives of the faculty and student body of the University of British Columbia.

The big argument used by the proponents of the American gridiron game is that this form of football presents the only opportunity here for inter-collegiate games. It is a financial impossibility for the University of British Columbia to engage in games with other Canadian colleges, while just across the border in Washington and Oregon are several colleges that have teams playing the American sport.

An American football squad has been organized at the University of B. C. and has played several games in Washington as well as here. Considerable interest has been aroused in the game among students, and the only objection to playing, it seems, to lie in the contention of some persons that, if the inter-collegiate contests are given too much emphasis, the Canadian game will be subordinated.

English rugby is the popular football game in British Columbia schools. The game as played in Eastern Canadian colleges has not been introduced so far.

HOBIE KITCHEN WAS CAMPBELLFORD BOY

Hockey Fans Follow His Play—Curling Rink Flooded.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 16.—Hobart Kitchen, the young man now playing hockey with the Montreal team, is a Campbellford boy and the residents of this town follow his career closely and take special pride in his achievements. They were especially pleased to note the good work which he did in the game with Ottawa, played in Montreal Saturday night, when he cinched victory for his team by scoring the second goal by a brilliant play.

Hobart was born here and received his early education in the local Public school. His father, C. L. Kitchen, was the first superintendent of the old Seymour power house. The family moved to Toronto about 10 years ago and last winter Hobie played hockey with the Niagara Falls team.

At the Curling Rink.

The water has been turned on in the curling rink and the ice is already about two inches thick. If the present cold weather continues it will not be long before the curling season opens.

Thomas Cole has again been appointed caretaker of the rink, a position he has held, with the exception of two sessions, since the rink was built over 20 years ago, and visiting curlers never fail to compliment him for the manner in which he discharges his duties. Mr. Cole is one of the town's oldest residents, coming here as he did 51 years ago. For 40 years he followed his trade as marble cutter, in the days when Campbellford had an establishment that furnished tombstone for the entire district.

During the war Mr. Cole spent two years in the hardware store of T. S. Tait and was unable to fill the position of caretaker of the curling rink.

CANADIENS WON OPENING GAME IN NEW YORK ARENA

Nineteen Thousand Fans Were Highly Pleased With Pro. Hockey.

VERY FAST GAME.

Flying Frenchmen Were Victorious By Score of 3 to 1.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Dec. 16.— (Canadian Press.)—Montreal Canadiens and professional hockey came into New York last night and both registered an indisputed victory. The "Flying Frenchmen" took their victory from the recently organized New York American club by the count of 3 to 1 and became holders of the Prince of Wales' trophy, while 19,000 of New York's sport followers gasping under the thrills and spills of the game. It was a colorful stage that Rickard, the new impresario of the game, set for the introduction of professional hockey to jaded New York.

The receipts of the game were dedicated by the New York Club to the aid of the New York Neurological Society and the efforts of charitable workers brought many members of New York's 400 out for the international classic.

The gaily decorated rink was honored by the presence of the society of the Dominion and New York in boxes, the Governor General's Food Guards Band from Ottawa and United States' military bands from West Point led the opposing teams in.

Strains of the Maple Leaf Forever, God Save the King, and the Star Spangled Banner resounded throughout the arena.

THE ORACLE

This day we fashion Destiny, our web of Fate we spin. —Whittier.

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute. —Milton.

Do you believe in the scientific determination of destiny?

The Examiner has secured the services of a local expert in the science of drawing from a few basic facts a great amount of information that will be helpful and interesting to you. This gentleman, who for obvious reasons desires to remain anonymous under the pen-name "The Oracle", has made a deep study of the science. It is a fascinating study, founded on facts that no one can dispute. It is one of the oldest of the sciences, revived through much reading and application to ancient tables and writings.

And the knowledge of the ages is offered to Examiner readers free of all cost.

All You Must Do

is fill in the attached form and mail it to "The Oracle", The Examiner Office, 419 George street, Peterborough. Initials only will be used in The Examiner. If you desire a more complete reading, enclose a stamped envelope.

E.M.M.—You are very deficient in discriminative power; are very slow to perceive false analogies; are inclined to think it foolish to indulge in a little harmless fun or mirth, and are therefore long-faced and have few friends. Avoid tragedy; the destiny of life is not the grave. The world may tolerate fools and dullards, but it has no use for the wet blanket. You have persisted so long in this distorted outlook that your mentality is warped and can only be redeemed by a determined effort. Your life is still comparatively young, and your health good. Start today to look on the bright side of things. Wish somebody a "Merry Christmas." Send out a card or two, and, if you can screw up the courage to go at the thing right, give some presents. Read Dickens' "Christmas Carol." Don't be a misanthrope. Besides hurting others you are missing all the fun in life. You were born on a Tuesday. Your colors are dark red and brown.

P.M.—Life has dealt harshly with you at times, yet at its prime you realize that it was good to have had your varied experiences. You have the power to feel deeply and your mind has gathered much wisdom from the passing years. Your hard work has not been in vain, and you have much on which to pride yourself. Beautiful things have a big influence upon you, and you like to be srrounded with pretties of your own fabrication. With the soul of an artist in the body of a worker, you would have had a brilliant career had you not chosen the path of home life and labor for others. You are generally quite buoyant and sanguine, but like to be on the safe side and are disinclined to venture on strange seas. You would appreciate travel, more for what it gave you than for the mere travelling. You have a good memory for important events, but are likely to forget passing phases in everyday life. You are sympathetic and kindly disposed to all the world; have few enemies and many real friends who appreciate you for your true worth. You were born on a Sunday. Your characteristics vibrate to no color, hence your keynote is black, the absence of color.

T. M.—Life holds many thrills for you, and you are well-equipped to hold your own. Highly individual, you have pronounced business ability and may rise to executive status. At the same time you have decided feminine traits; are peace-loving and gentle in manner; have great depths of affection and much personal charm of a magnetic kind. You would be successful in a career, but have also the characteristics that promise a happy home life. You probably prefer vocal to instrumental music and have a solid, though not expert, appreciation of art. If you decide on a business life, cultivate initiative; if you seek home comfort, develop efficiency and accustom yourself to thinking of routine as a means to an end. You have excellent perception of analogies, and talent for classifying, comparing and criticising and with particular knowledge of the subject could reason clearly on scientific facts up to the laws that govern them. Your color is gold-yellow. You were born on a Friday. You, mistakenly I suppose, enquire about 27th December, 1907.

M. E. K.—You are lofty-minded, dignified, self-confident and independent; do not like to take advice; may go into society, yet like to lead. You have had varying ambitions in life, and are inclined to be changeable in purpose. Your mental force is sufficient to carry you through any enterprise you may attempt, provided suitable preparation has been made. You dislike routine, and like working "on your own." You are fine-grained and sensitive to criticism; look on the bright side of things and overlook present difficulties to see the good times ahead. Art has a particular appeal to you, and you enjoy acting, singing, dancing and painting. With training, you would be a good musician. You have a fair perception of analogies and an apt way of illustrating your meanings. You would excel in teaching children. You are interested in drawing deductions and succeed more by analysis than by intuition. Your characteristics vibrate to no color, therefore your keynote is black, the absence of color. You were born on a Wednesday. The day of which you enquire is past—October 10th, 1925.

J. C. and E. L. G.—You forgot to send your addresses. The address for a private reply should be written on the envelope.

Ace—You deeply regret some event in your life, and the remorse shows itself clearly in your characteristics. Make amends and chase the spectre; get out and do something worth while that will relieve your mind, else serious consequences may develop. Your mentality was strong, but it has begun to weaken under the impact of this haunting memory. You are lacking in poise and self-assertiveness. Cultivate sympathy, in which you are sadly lacking. Others have suffered too, and in lending them a helping hand you will be doing yourself a good turn, although that is a poor kind of incentivie. You were born on a Saturday.

Bud.—Your reflective and reasoning faculties are well developed, but not highly. Your powers of synthesis, for instance, are weak. You are apt to criticize without being able to give chapter and verse for your contention. This is a lack that can be remedied by study, for your mental ability is rated high. Learn the value of symbols and figures of speech; study ethics; reason according to the laws of logic. You are reserved in manner, but able to assert yourself when occasion requires. You have social attraction, and, with good conversational power, would be somewhat of a lion at functions. You are not noted for constancy or punctuality. Your spiritual nature might be deepened with good results, and you should develop ambition. Simply wishing is not ambition, you know. Your color is pink. You were born on a Friday. You ask about a day in 1903, but since you were not very old on any day in that year I presume it is a slip of the pen.

D. F.—You have a good degree of self-respect and independence, yet are not proud; you must study to overcome self-consciousness, and avoid introspection. You are likely to secure the respect of your companions, but prefer the position of leader to that of follower. For this, your superior mentality fits you, but requires development through educational channels. You are highly developed and high-toned, with ability to face adverse circumstances, and would make a helpful and affectionate wife and mother. Permanency is indicated in your make-up. You are bold and courageous, and prepared for emergencies, but do not go seeking trouble. You have found that your intuition is not infallible, though you have the knack of helping it out by applied analogy and logic. Seek to widen your sympathies and assert yourself in company. Your colors are warm red and brown, and you were born on a Wednesday.

L. F. G.—You are changeable and uncertain in your manner and ways, but will with maturer years develop constancy in affection. You have good mental powers, with ability to carry out a given task well, but your creative talents are not highly developed. You have a good share of personal charm, but bestow your attentions too lightly. You are inclined to be self-centred but not ambitious, and you have limited vision. Your logic is good; you reason naturally and undirected by intensive education or reading. Application to good books is essential if you are to attain your full growth of mental power. You must cultivate regard for the rights and respect for the sensibilities of others. Set an aim for yourself and set your mind on reaching it. The day you name will bring you money but it is not a day on which to venture upon new seas. Your color is flame. You were born on a Sunday.

BIG BILL BY CITY LEAGUE

Eight Teams For Senior and Junior Divisions, Playing Same Night.

INT. O.H.A. TEAM.

Given a fair share of patronage the City Hockey League should be able to accomplish much this winter in the interest of the great winter game. Teams from the De Laval Co., Raybestos Co., and Brinton Carpet Co., and a fourth entry from the Crescents will make up the Senior series. From these four teams, the Intermediate O.H.A. representatives will be selected.

Teams from St. Peter's School, Raybestos and St. Andrews' Church have been entered in the Junior series, and one more entry will be accepted. The age limit is under 18 years on the 1st day of January of next year.

The rink arrangements have been practically completed. The teams in both Senior and Junior divisions will all play on the same night each week, with the Junior double-header starting at 6 o'clock and the Senior double bill at 8 o'clock. The night of each week to be used has not been definitely decided but the league executive hope to start the schedules the last week of this month.

The whole scheme looks good and should commend itself to the hockey public. The age limit for the Junior series has been questioned but the argument used in its favor is that the players may be developed who will be of service for several years on the Junior O.H.A. team.

Theatre

AT THE CAPITOL

CONAN DOYLE'S 'LOST WORLD' IS NOW MOVIE.

Famous Author's Master Novel of Prehistoric Monsters on Screen Here To-morrow.

Probably the most unusual love drama ever put on the screen is "The Lost World," which comes to the Capitol Theatre to-morrow.

The picture is an adaptation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel of the same title. Doyle admits now a vivid word picture of a lost world in the vast, unexplored regions of the upper Amazon River which Time had forgot.

There Doyle's band of adventurers found prehistoric monsters that roamed the earth 10,000,000 years ago and battled each other to the death as in the days of old.

Into the heart of this monster-infested district went this party of explorers—three men and a girl. Their mission was to rescue her father, if he still lived, and prove to the world the existence of the prehistoric beasts — the brontosaurus, bigger than ten elephants; the tyrannosaurus, most fearsome creature that ever stalked this earth; the stegosaurus, triceratops, the pterodactyl, or great flying dragon, and other gigantic species.

Earl Hudson supervised the production for Rothacker and First National, the directorial staff including O'Brien and Harry Hoyt.

NO COMMISSION PAID BY ESTATE

Judge Finds That Value of Plaintiff's Services Was Not Proven.

WANTED $22,500.

TORONTO, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press) — The action of Victor L. Gladman, of Port Hope, against the executors of the late W. T. C. Boyd of Bobcaygon and the W. T. C. Boyd Co. to recover $22,500 commission of the sale by Boyd to F. R. Pendleton in 1919 of timber limits on Vancouver Island for $700,000 has been dismissed by Mr. Justice Wright. His Lordship states that the defendant might well have remunerated the plaintiff as no doubt his services had something to do with the sale as he introduced Boyd to the purchaser but the action fails as it was not proven that Gladman's services were the real cause of the sale. No order is made as to costs.

A HAPPY XMAS AFTER ALL.

Xmas promised to be a lonely day for George Alsen this year, and no less lonely for his widowed mother back in the home town. But the office was exceptionally busy—it was impossible to get away.

Then one day an idea came to him. He'd send his mother a ticket. More, he'd send her a Canadian National Railway ticket to be sure she would receive the utmost attention and travelling comfort. They'd dine at a good hotel, take in the best show afterwards and have long chats in the cosy warmth of his room—they'd have a happy Xmas after all.

Perhaps you would like to have your beloved mother or a dear friend with you this Xmas. Any Canadian National Railway Agent will gladly make all arrangements for you.

Her body, with several wounds in the head, was found lying face down in an ash pile in the furnace room of the basement of her home.

Charles Fitzpatrick, a negro janitor, who reported the discovery of the body, is being detained. The police believe robbery was the motive for slaying.

OBITUARY

Mrs. JAMES DAVIDSON

Died in Peterboro, on Wednesday, Dec. 16, 1925, Mary Ann Shannon, wife of the late James Davidson, in her 81st year. She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, Miss Laura J. and Miss M. Ethel, of 563 Park Street, also one son, James H., of Montreal.

The funeral will take place from the family residence on Thursday, Dec. 17, 1925, at 2 p.m., and proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

Mrs. MARY O'REILLEY.

The death occurred in Toronto last evening, at the residence, 162 Cowan Avenue, of her sister, Mrs. Wm. Clancy, formerly of Peterboro, of Mrs. Mary O'Reilley, after a short illness. Mrs. O'Reilley, who has been residing with her sister for only a short time, was a former resident of Norwood, where her husband, Charles O'Reilley, predeceased her three years ago.

The funeral will take place in Hastings on Friday morning. Local relatives of the deceased are a niece and nephew, Mrs. Emmet Cronin and Mr. M. Clency.

J. W. FITZGERALD.

The funeral of the late J. W. Fitzgerald took place this morning from the family residence at 206 Smith Street, where the deceased was born, and had lived his entire life.

The respect and esteem in which he was held was shown in the number who braved the inclement weather during all day yesterday and again this morning at the funeral, to get a farewell look at one of the old residents who are all too soon passing away.

The largely attended funeral, and the attendance at the church was conspicuous by the number of life-long residents who have been pioneers in this city and who knew the deceased since boyhood.

The funeral left the homestead at 9 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral, where a guard of honor was formed by the boys of St. Peter's School, of which the deceased had been a trustee for a great many years.

The mass was sung by Rev. Father Butler, assisted by St. Peter's Boys' Choir, and the services were conducted by Rev. Father Finn.

The chief mourners were his sorrowing wife and son Gerald, his brother Edward, and Mrs. W. Fitzgerald.

The pall-bearers were: F. Fairen, J. Coughlin, J. P. Finn, W. Rudkins, W. J. Grady, and D. J. Donoghue.

ART STUDY CLUB.

Meeting Held at Home of Mrs. J. M. McCulloch Yesterday.

A meeting of the Art Study Club was held on Tuesday evening with a good attendance, at the home of Mrs. J. M. McCulloch, when an interesting paper on Michael Angelo Buonarotti was given by the president of the Women's Art Association, Mrs. Wm. Blackwell. The response to the roll call was a quotation from an Italian author.

The paper given by Mrs. Blackwell was illuminative and interesting, and gave a comprehensive review of the work and life of the great Michael Angelo. Born at Caprese, near Florence, in 1474, Michael Angelo came later to be recognized as one of the greatest painters of all time, and unsurpassed in modern art. He was gifted with a plurality of powers and excelled in sculpture and architecture as well as in painting. He had a marvellous knowledge of anatomy and displayed true sentiment in his handling of various types of art. He executed the famous Pieta in St. Peter's, his great cartoon for the fresco of the Council Chamber of Florence became, before it was destroyed, a school of anatomy for students of the world, and his wonderful frescoes in the Sistine Chapel are some of the most marvellous of their type in the world, particularly with regard to the figures of the prophets, the sybils and the athlete. His "Last Judgment" is sublime in its tremendous power, and his 'David' and 'Moses' are notable examples of his superb artistry.

The poems of Michael Angelo Buonarotti are also admirable. They have been translated in recent years by Arthur Symonds, and contain many references to the great friendship of his life, that with the beautiful Vittoria Colonna. He died in Rome in 1563, at the age of ninety years, and was buried in Santa Croce, in Florence.

The next meeting of the Club will be held on Tuesday, January 5th, at the home of Mrs. Foster, Gilmour Street, when a paper on Thorwaldsen, the Danish sculptor, will be given by Mrs. R. Gliddon.

Around The City.

According to Inspector Reid several inquiries are being made at the police station regarding stores being kept open at night. He states that there is a by-law which prevents the stores from remaining open outside of four-night period just before Christmas. The act does not cover stores which deal in novelties, the Inspector said.

There will be two markets during Christmas week, one on Wednesday, December 23, and the second on Saturday, December 26.

JUDGMENT IN REID VS. ANTHONY

The following is the text of a judgment delivered in Division Court by His Honor Judge Huycke in the case of Reid vs. Anthony. Peck, Kerr and McElderry appeared for the plaintiff, and the defendant was represented by Gordon and O'Brien.—

"The plaintiff's claim is for repair on a motor car, the charges are for work and materials supplied. The total was originally for $297.00, and on the $110.00 has been paid, leaving the balance of the claim sued for $187.

"I find this whole matter to be very unsatisfactory from both viewpoints. I do not think the parties were ever ad idem as to the extent of repairs ordered or intended, and for this misunderstanding I think they are equally blameable. The plaintiffs went on and did a lot of work, and did it properly. I have no doubt, without any proper authorization from the defendant so to do; and the plaintiff, though he allowed the car to go for repairs to this garage, had no idea such extensive repairs and expenses were being made and did not specifically authorize them.

"It must not be assumed once a car is in a garage and on merely general instructions, especially when given by a person other than the owner, that repairs can be proceeded with ad libitum. In this case the car was repaired and improved almost out of existence, and the repair bill was probably worth more than the car, and even at that a few days later the car would not go, though perhaps that was not the plaintiffs fault—I do not know.

"I find the plaintiffs were not justified in expending this very large sum, nearly $300, on an old car, without having a definite understanding and instructions; on the other hand I think that they did it in perfect good faith and undoubtedly seemed to have spent fully $150, half the amount of their claim, in actual disbursements for parts. It would be a great hardship for them to have to lose this, and also a hardship to lose their work. It is equally a hardship for the defendant to pay for what he gave only inferred or qualified instructions, and for repairs that did not benefit him nearly to the extent of the bill, if indeed he received a benefit at all. The defendant has already paid more than he thought he would have to pay; the plaintiffs are making an honest claim, and I think in one sense of the word they have earned it all, but they misconceived their position, and must suffer some penalty.

"Judgment will go for the plaintiff for $100.00, in addition to what has already been paid. No order as to costs."

ATTEMPT ABOLITION HEATHEN PRACTICES

Slavery and Human Sacrifices To Be Put Down in Upper Burma.

RANGOON, Burma, Dec. 16 (Canadian Press).—It is hoped that slavery and human sacrifice will be abolished by the British expedition now on its way to the Hukwang Valley in Burma. The owners will be offered generous prices to free all the slaves by April. In Naga, the chiefs will be impressed with the Indian Government's abhorrence of human sacrifices and of its determination to eradicate the practice by making it impossible to obtain victims.

IN MEMORIAM

SANDERSON—In loving memory of Velma M. Sanderson:

"I climb the hill; from end to end
Of all the landscape underneath
I find no place that does not breathe
Some gracious memory of my friend."

So, we all feel as we go over the scenes which were familiar to our beloved friend, Velma M. Sanderson, who passed into the Great Beyond on November 24th, 1924, at the age of twenty-one years. "To know her was to love her." Is the testimony of her many friends. "The only way to have a friend is to be one" and the large circle of friends whom she had, show that truly she was a friend in the fullest sense of the word — so eagerly alive, so tender, so elusive and so full of practical common sense, so helpful and so loving to little helpless things. By adding to these attributes all the fine personal qualities a girl could have, one gets some understanding of what Velma meant to us. Yet though we feel that hers was a life of exceptional promise cut short, we realize that, in her brief span of years, she had achieved success, for had she not "lived well, laughed often and loved much?"

She was a well-loved pupil and pal at Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Peterborough Normal School, where she was never known to fail in "playing the game." For two years she gave of her best in her teaching at School Section No. 2, Smith, where she endeared herself not only to her pupils, but to the people of the locality as well. She was a member of Springville Presbyterian Church and an earnest worker in the Sunday school, Christian Endeavor and all branches of church work.

Though only her dearest friends knew of it, she had long since decided to dedicate her life to missions and her one desire was to realize this hope. Why this was not permitted, we cannot now know but we have comfort in the thought that "God must have needed just such a beautiful personality as hers for some special work. He wished done over there, and so He called her unto Himself."

COAL STRIKE MAY END SOON

Both Parties Are Awaiting Formal Invitation From Mayors.

TO MEET NEXT WEEK.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press). — Authracite miners and operators today awaited a formal invitation from the committee of mayors and burgesses to resume wage negotiations and end the long strike, now in its sixteenth week. They will be invited to meet at Scranton next Wednesday or at any other time and place convenient to both sides to take up the discussion of wages and working conditions where it was broken off last August in Atlantic City.

The latest proposition to end the deadlock came from a meeting with Governor Pinchot in Harrisburg yesterday by approximately fifty mayors and burgesses of hard coal communities.

BITTER PROTEST FROM OBDURATE TURKS SOUNDS DISCORDANT NOTE AT CLOSING OF LEAGUE COUNCIL

Refuse to Abandon Sovereignty Over Mosul Under British Mandate.

WAR NOT FEARED.

League Hopes For Amicable Relations Between British and Turks.

GENEVA, Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Neither the League of Nations nor Great Britain envisaged war in the Near East because of the decision of the League Council in the Mosul conflict, said Colonel L. C. M. Amery, the British Dominion Secretary, commenting on the council's finding, which gives Mosul practically in its entirety to Great Britain in the form of a mandate.

This decision was announced yesterday in the assembly hall packed with people as the last act of the 37th session of the council. It was marked by 3 notable declarations. The first, solemnly read by Vittorio Scialoia, former Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, in the name of every member of the council, was deemed significant because it admitted that a state of tension had been created between Great Britain and Turkey over the possession of Mosul. Signor Scialoia urgently recommended that these two nations reach an amicable arrangement of the difficulty so as to put an end to the regrettable situation and thus solidify that peace which is essential to the aims of the League of Nations.

Britain Desires Peace.

The second was voiced by Austen Chamberlain, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs who declared that the British government did not wish to adopt a rigid and uncompromising attitude. Great Britain desired to live on terms of peace and amity with Turkey and would gladly lend itself to conversations to determine if it would be possible to improve the relations between the two countries.

The third declaration came in a documentary form from the Turks, who refused an invitation to attend the meeting. It was a vigorous protest against the councils action, as well as a warning that Turkey absolutely refused to abandon its sovereignty over Mosul "until you assent that our rights in totality in Mosul remain intact"

The council's decision is contingent on Great Britain's acceptance of a twenty-five year mandate over Irak, which includes Mosul, within six months This Great Britain has promised to do.

Problem of Kurds.

One point in the decision is the recommendation that Great Britain according the Kurds desirable local administrational rights. This Kurdish problem in Mosul is regarded as important. The Turkish spokesman said last night: "The council's decision is bad. Do not forget that if half the Kurds in Mosul favor England, the other half are strongly for Turkey."

The Mosul report was adopted unanimously by the council, which based its decision on the report of the special Mosul commission and "other information of a political and legal nature."

Canadians Are Urged To Cultivate Confidence

MONTREAL, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press).—"We have got to cultivate confidence in ourselves. I am tired of seeing Canadian opinion dominated by men of other nations. I am tired of seeing our industrial life dominated by men of other nations. I hope the time is coming when we will have such confidence in ourselves that we will take up our own problems, train our own men, do our own things, and establish our own traditions—then we shall have national development." In these words, Dr. H. M. Tory, president of the University of Alberta, summed up an address to the Canadian Club yesterday on the future of Canada.

SCOTLAND YARD HEAD ARRESTED

Sir Basil Thomson Alleged To Have Given Police Wrong Name.

WOMAN INVOLVED.

LONDON, Dec. 17 — (Canadian Press).—Sir Basil Thomson, former director of intelligence of Scotland Yard, and internationally known as a secret service operative, was arrested last week, charged with being concerned in an offence in Hyde Park. A woman was placed under arrest at the same time. At the police station he gave his name as "Hugh Thompson" and his age as 63. His real identity has just been revealed.

The woman gave the name of Felma de Lava. Both were let out on bail for appearance in court on Monday. They failed to appear, and summonses have been issued and the case will come up January 1.

Sir Basil Thomson is prominent socially and is the son of a former Archbishop of York. He has had a distinguished career, was in the charge of the secret service during the war, and had a large hand in convicting Sir Roger Casement for landing arms in Ireland in 1916. Casement was hanged in Pentonville Prison.

Sir Basil resigned from the Scotland Yard secret service in 1891. He paid visits to Canada and the United States in 1922-23. He was the guest of various noted clubs and also of the New York Police Department, and delivered lectures in various cities on the aspects of crime and the operations of Scotland Yard.

He has been extensively decorated by foreign governments and has written many books on subjects ranging from "The Story of Dartmoor Prison" to "South Sea Yarns" and "The Diversions of a Prime Minister."

PRICE OF PROGRESSIVES' SUPPORT WILL BE LEGISLATION TO ADVANCE THE WEST

No Blanket Allegiance to Any Group, Says Albertan M. P.—Believes "Ginger Group" Has Served the Purpose.

SASKATOON, Sask., Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—"Alberta Progressive members of Parliament look upon themselves as an economic unit and their support in the House will be given on a legislative basis. They will give no blanket support to any group or groups," said C. H. Spencer, M.P.-elect, for Battle River, Alta., in an interview here yesterday.

"The Progressive Party will sell its support in the best interest of the West. What Lewis Latton can secure in the interests of the West is the fundamental question that will decide his action. Both of the old parties look a[illegible] to the Progressives and the two matters of paramount interest at the present time are the Hudson Bay Railway and a rural credit system," declared Wilton N. Campbell, M.P.-elect, for Mackenzie, Sask.

Both members of the "ginger group" in the last house, expressed the opinion that "ginger group" which had functioned as a wing of the Progressive Party, had accomplished what was then required of it, and would probably not be seen as a group in th next House.

TWO ARMED BANDITS SLUGGED LIQUOR COMMISSION CASHIER MAKING ESCAPE WITH $15,000

Thomas Nuttal and Two Others Held Up in Winnipeg Street.

RESISTED ROBBERS.

Revolver Battle Ensued as Thieves Sped Away in Automobile.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press)—Slugged over the head while on his way to the bank early today, Thomas Nuttal, cashier of the Manitoba Liquor Commission warehouse, was robbed of $15,000. The hold-up was perpetrated by two armed men, who escaped in an automobile.

Accompanied by a chauffeur and an office boy, Nuttall was just about to enter the Commission's automobile en route to deposit the money at a downtown bank, when the party was confronted by two bandits.

Pointing revolvers at the cashier and his companions, the hold-up men ordered them to hand over the satchel containing the money. When this was not forthcoming quick enough, one of the bandits wrested it away from the men who held it, and the two hold-up men made a hurried get-away to their car, which was standing nearby with engine running. As the bandit car speeded off, the cashier started a revolver battle and exchanged a number of shots with the departing robbers.

In the struggle for the loot, Nuttall was hit over the head with an iron bar by one of the thugs, but was not seriously injured. City and Provincial police are now conducting a city-wide search, while the roads to the boundary are also being closely guarded.

Clerks Want Holiday On Saturday After Christmas

STRATFORD, Ont., Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—There is a strong feeling among the clerks of the city that Saturday December 26, the day after Christmas, should be given them as a holiday. It is pointed out by the clerks that there is little possibility of business to any extent being done on that day. If the holiday is given it will be possible to have a good week-end.

Although the matter has not been pushed, it is understood that some move will be made to reach an understanding with city employers. Some clerks have signified their willingness to give up the New Year's holiday if this wish is granted.

NARROW ESCAPE FOR QUEBEC MAN WHEN ICE BROKE

Napoleon Ducas Was Swept Down Stream on Small Floe.

HEROIC RESCUE.

Three Men in Small Boat Put Out Through Ice to Save Him.

QUEBEC, Dec. 17. — (Canadian Press).—Swept down the St. Lawrence River for a distance of ten miles on a cake of ice, Napoleon Ducas, of Cacouna, had a narrow escape from death Tuesday. Only the heroic struggle of three men in a boat against the ice saved him.

Ducas was gathering barrels of flour that had been swept overboard from some vessel in the channel during the storm and was absorbed in his task when the ice broke away and he was swirled out into mid-stream by the current.

He cried out for help, but was not heard until three men of a village ten miles down stream put out in a small boat. After a hard struggle, in which the craft was threatened constantly by heaving masses of ice, the trio reached Ducas just as he was about to slip into the water exhausted.

Due to his exposure, Ducas is in a serious condition.

Rubber Market Demoralized Lowest Price Since Sept. 11

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—The crude rubber market was demoralized yesterday and prices declines about ten cents a pound as a result of the nervousness of holders in London and on the continent and continued lack of support by American buyers. Smoked ribbed sheets dropped to 89 3-4 cents for spot, while January-March closed easy at 90 cents offered. Tire factories are reported to have disposed of fair-sized lots early Wednesday. Prices are the lowest since September 11.

BRITAIN TO REDUCE AIR DEFENSE PLAN

Encouraged By Peace Movement in Europe.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press).—Sir Samuel Hoare, head of the Air Ministry, announced in a speech in the Chelsea Town Hall last night that Great Britain will postpone fulfillment of her present air defence programme in view of the clearer and more peaceful European skies resulting from the Locarno agreements.

"If other nations follow this example," he said, "all the governments will be enabled to avoid in the years to come a race in armaments far more disastrous than the world has endured."

The plan for a home defence for of 52 squadrons remains intact, but the Minister said that the normal rise in air costs by thirty per cent. during 1926, making expenditures of over £20,000,000 as compared with £16,000,000 in 1925, would be materially curtailed by recommendation he has made to the Government and which he believed justified by the changed conditions in Europe.

Effort Will Be Made to Get More People Interested.

Officers of the local Boy Scouts' association met last night in the office of G. Murray Frazer, District Scoutmaster.

Following the reading of minutes a communication from Frank Irwin, Assistant Provincial Commissioner, was heard. It was in answer to a proposal for raising funds by distributing Scoutgrams and Mr. Irwin was of the opinion that at the present, funds should not be secured by that method.

The secretary was authorized to write a letter of thanks to the Peterborough Canoe Co., thanking it for a donation.

IN POLICE COURT.

When the case of Abraham Cherney came up for trial before Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning, Joseph Wearing, counsel for the prosecution, submitted that he considered it useless to offer evidence since the decision of His Honor Judge Huycke in Rex versus Dolan, following the decision of His Hono rJudge Dentotn of Toronto, in Rex versus Jolly, where it was held that where liquor was found in a lawful place the onus is on the prosecution to prove that the accused is delaing wrongfully with the liquor and that section 88 of the O.T.A. does not apply. Mr. Wearing stated that unless these conditions were changed by the Court of Appeal, the prosecution must have much stronger evidence than the mere fact that the accused has a lot of liquor on his premises. The case was then dismissed without costs. J. A. O'Brien acted for the defence.

K.K.K. DANCE.

British Empire Section Entertains More Than 200 in W.O.W. Hall.

There was a very large crowd in attendance last evening in the W. O.W. Hall, at the first dance given under the auspices of the Ku Klux Klan of the British Empire. Over two hundred people patronized the event, which was very successful. Arrangements were in the hands of a committee of ladies and gentlemen belonging to the Order. Dance music was supplied by Leslie Abraham's five-piece orchestra. A striking feature of the evening was the parading for a few minutes between dances of a member of the society, clad in the full regalia of the Klan.

Convention in Warkworth Attended By Leaders of Party.

(By a Staff Reporter).

WARKWORTH, Dec. 17. — Dr. William G. Robertson of Colborne is the new president of the Northumberland Liberal Association, having been elected unanimously to that position at a convention of the party held here Wednesday. He succeeds Acting President Clarence Massie of Morganston, who was appointed by the executive when President J. Nelson Stone of Campbellford was made returning officer for the riding. All other officers of the association, including the vice-presidents for the various municipalities, were re-elected and the executive was given power to fill any vacancies that may arise.

The New President.

Dr. Robertson is regarded as a coming man in the Liberal ranks, and the party was congratulated yesterday by Hon. Duncan Marshall and Sam. Clarke, M.L.A., both of whom know him upon his selection as head of the association. He is a young man, a good speaker and a tireless worker on behalf of Liberal principles.

A Good Attendance.

There was a good attendance at the convention, Hon. Duncan Marshall, Dominion organizer, who was the chief speaker of the day, remarking that on account of the holiday season, he did not expect to see half so many present.

Clarence Massie called the meeting to order, there being with him on the platform Mayor Meyers of Campbellford, secretary of the association; Hon. Duncan Marshall, Mrs. A. H. Beeton, president of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association; F. J. Slade, the party's candidate in the recent election, and Sam. Clarke, described by Mr. Marshall as "the hero of one hundred political fights." From the first it was understood that Mr. Massie would not be a candidate for the presidency.

Business Disposed Of.

The business of the convention was quickly disposed of. It was agreed to have only one organization in the riding for Federal and Provincial purposes, and that all the present officers, with the exception of the president, be re-elected. Then on motion of Dr. G. M. Ferris of Cobourg and C. H. Curtis of Percy, Dr. Robertson was nominated for the vacant position and elected unanimously.

In returning thanks for the honor conferred upon him, Dr. Robertson said that while he was willing to carry on for the present, he was ready to stand aside, whenever it was felt that a better man for the position of president could be secured. He was of the opinion that a live organizer should be secured to get the election machinery of the riding in proper working order.

Organization the Keynote.

Organization was the keynote of all the addresses, and Mr. Marshall gave the audience some practical advice along these lines. The lack of support of the party by the daily press was also referred to. Mr. Slade, who was the first speaker, gave as some of the reasons for the defeat of the party in the recent election the lack of organization. There were still U.F.O. and Progressive organizations in Northumberland, and these had not been unified. It was not known for a certainty whether the Progressives would have a candidate in the field until a short time before the election. Northumberland at least did as well as Durham and Peterboro in each of which a Cabinet Minister had been rejected, and in Hastings County the sitting Liberal member was defeated. There must be something wrong somewhere, and in this connection Mr. Slade mentioned the attitude taken by a Toronto morning paper, whose support the Liberals had a right to expect but which they did not get.

Advice to Women Voters.

Mrs. Beeton spoke directly to the women voters, a number of whom were in the audience, advising them to organize and to keep on organizing. The women should be given positions as officers in the party organizations. There is important work for them to-day.

The Conservatives have been in power in Ontario since 1905 with the exception of the four years of the farmer government and in all that time had had control of the educational system of the province. The young sons and daughters of immigrants are not receiving the kind of education that is calculated to keep them in Canada. They are being trained for positions that do not exist here and are obliged to go to the United States to find them. The revision of the educational system of Ontario was one of the things for which the women of today should work.

Another task with which the women should charge themselves was doing something to prevent the marriage of fickle minded persons who brought children of the same mental status as themselves into the world. Women should organize by themselves, study public questions and by so doing they could be of real assistance to the men.

Hon. Duncan Marshall

Mr. Marshall agreed with what Mrs. Beeton had said regarding the educational system of Ontario. Fifty per cent of the population of the province live on the land and yet in the universities 12 times as many are being educated for professions as are being trained in agriculture and that is the vocation which requires the most careful training of them all if those who follow it are to succeed.

Spaking of the recent election, Mr. Marshall said it resembled the one held in 1911. The urban vote had overwhelmed that cast in the rural districts. Factory employes and other wage earners had been frightened into the belief that they would lose their jobs if the Government was not defeated. It is easy to frighten people, the majority of whom do not understand political questions.

The only way to meet such a campaign as this, Mr. Marshall said, was by another long campaign of education and this should be carried on in the daily press. Campaign meetings ar not sufficient as results are not permanent.

There is nothing like defeat, or partial defeat ,the speaker said to draw people together. Since the election the Liberals have stopped complaining and are figuring on how to win. They have now the advantage of organization and the voters lists show them just who are entitled to vote in every subdivision. A committee should be appointed to keep in touch with the boys and girls who may come of age before the next election.

When the party's candidate comes to a subdivision the workers there should be in a position to tell them the people he should go to see for it is useless to waste time on hopeless cases. The candidate must meet people, especialy the women.

Mr. Marshall believes that there should be only one organization for men and women in the rural subdivision but that they should organize separate units in the towns and villages where conditions are different.

Outlook Is Brighter

In another Dominion election the Liberals will not have to go up against what they did last October. Times were just then beginning to mend, now everyone knows that they have improved with boosting the tariff. We have 160,000,000 bushels of wheat of 100,000,000 bushels of oats more than we had last year and the farmers are getting good prices for their hogs and cattle.

Will Carry On

Mr. Marshall believes that the Liberal Government will be allowed to carry on when Parliament meets. For one thing the Premier has since the election made no fatal mistake as the Conservative leader did when he reversed the policy of the party and his own record in his speech at Hamilton when he said that in the event of another European war no troops would be sent from Canada while the matter had been submitted to the people.

In the next Provincial elections the Liberals, too, will be in good shape. Leader Sinclair has always been consistent while Premier Ferguson has committed every mistake in the calendar, especially on the temperance question. Five or six seats in the Legislature are left vacant to deprive the people of a chance to pass upon the record of the government.

Mr. Marshall is satisfied that in the event of another Dominion election the Liberals would be returned to power, just as he is convinced that if an election had been held one week after the defeat of reciprocity, the Liberals would have swept the country.

Sam Clarke, M.L.A.

The veteran who has represented West Northumberland in the Legislature for the past 30 years, pointed out that 5000 persons in the riding had failed to vote in October, or about one third of the number who did cast their ballots. If even 80 per cent of these absentees had voted the result would have been different, for the speaker believed that two-thirds of them would have voted the Liberal ticket. That was one reason why the election resulted as it did, another being the lack of organization.

The Meanest Man.

Speaking of the necessity for a public man to keep in touch with his constituents at all times, Mr. Clarke said the meanest man was the one who spoke to you only when he wanted something, and did not speak when you wanted something.

The regular annual meeting of the Association will be held next spring.

TROUBLED WITH ECZEMA 3 YEARS

Scalp Inflamed. Hair Fell Out. Cuticura Heals.

"My daughter was troubled with eczema for three years. It broke out on the back of her head and her hair all fell out. The eczema scaled over and her scalp was red and inflamed. It was very painful and the irritation at night kept my daughter awake.

"A friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some and within a week there was a decided improvement. I purchased more and after using two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, together with the Cuticura Soap, she was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. John Donovan, Lewiston, Minn., June 11, 1924.

SILVER WEDDING SURPRISE PARTY

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Fallis Honored Anniversary.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 17.—A surprise party, numbering over one hundred and thirty guests, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Fallis, Fallis Line, on Monday evening, the occasion being the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day.

With their usual spirit of large-hearted hospitality, Mr. and Mrs. Fallis extended a warm welcome to the unexpected guests, and assisted by their son, Mr. Aubrey, did everything in their power to have all feel at home and enjoy the evening to the fullest extent.

The capacity of the large home did not appear at all over-taxed though so many had accepted the invitation of the committee in charge to attend the gathering, those responsible having planned the arrangements with careful attention to every detail.

When all had arrived Rev. F. H. Howard, in his capacity as chairman called the gathering to order, and invited the 'bride and groom' of a quarter of a century, to occupy seats in a central location, Mr. H. R. Armstrong reading the following address, and ex-Warden A. J. Henderson, on behalf of a large circle of relatives and friends, presenting them with a handsome cabinet of silver in the new Hampton Court pattern.

To Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Fallis, Fallis Line.

Dear Friends,

On this happy occasion, the twenty-fifth anniversary of your marriage, we are gathered here to wish you and your family continued happiness and prosperity.

Most of us present to-night have, on occasions, enjoyed visits to your hospitable home, and we are all glad to have the privilege of being present tonight, and of having the pleasure of joining with you in the celebration of your silver wedding-day.

Signed on behalf of your friends, E. R. Armstrong, T. H. Bradley, P. I. Bentley, A. J. Henderson.

The surprise of the occasion, and the emotion always incident to such a time, made it difficult for Mr. Fallis to reply, but in a few well-chosen words, and on behalf of his wife as well as himself, he expressed their gratitude for the beautiful gift, and their appreciation of the spirit of true friendship which had prompted the kindly remembrance.

Previous to the formal program which immediately followed the presentation, the chairman called upon Mr. P. I. Bentley who read quite a long list of names of friends living at a distance who had sent letters regretting their inability to be present, and expresssing their personal good wishes for the continued health and happiness of the popular "bride and groom."

The telegrams, which likewise contained regrets and best wishes, purporting to have come from England and signed by Royalty, were a surprise feature which created a hearty laugh as the joke became evident.

The chairman, in his brief remarks, noted the fact that "Mr. and Mrs. Fallis evidently possess a large measure that best of all gifts of being rich in esteem and confidence of their friends."

The following items comprised the programme:

Piano solo, Miss G. Clarry; address, Rev. Francis Johnston, Lindsay; duet, 'Life's Dream is O'er', by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston; address, Mr. B. McLean, Lindsay; reading, "In the Usual Way," by Miss Pearl Burnham; cornet solo, Mr. G. E. Burnham; address, A. J. Fallis, M.P.P.; solo "The Veteran's Song", by Mr. H. W. Coombe; address, Warden Jas. L. McCamus; mouth organ solo, Mr. C. C. Garside; address, Captain J. N. McGill.

All of the speakers referred, in terms of genuine appreciation, to the generous and warm-hearted hospitality which has always been an outstanding characteristic of the home over which Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fallis preside.

Miss Gussie Clarry, who with Miss May Duncan, had been the accompanists of the evening, played a number of piano solos during the time when games, dancing and social intercourse provided entertainment for the company, a bountiful supper being served about 11 p.m.

The guests, many of whom lived at a considerable distance, were evidently loath to depart, and it was long past the midnight hour when final good-byes were said, and the last car and sleigh-load had started on the homeward road.

CHEAP TRANSPORTATION.

The new Empire settlement agreement, providing for exceptionally low transportation rates for British farmers, farm labourers and domestic workers, should undoubtedly bring to Canada a rush of new citizens.

When it is realized that the cost of transportation from any port in the United Kingdom to Peterboro, for example, under the new rate will be, roughly, about $22, while the regular rate is about $112, the extension of the concession made under the new agreement can be appreciated.

The cost of passage will be brought within the reach of practically every immigrant of the classes desired in Canada, and it will practically do away with the system of passage loans, although these will still be available to heads of families and under certain conditions to domestic workers.

The advantages of the new plan are apparent, and the opinion of the Canadian Immigration Department that this is the most important step yet taken toward encouraging the immigration into Canada of people of British origin that has yet been taken will be generally shared.

PLAYING SANTA CLAUS.

Many Peterboro organizations have completed their plans for bringing Christmas cheer into the homes of families where, because of unemployment, the illness of the breadwinner or other causes, little of the Yuletide happiness can be expected unless Santa Claus is assisted.

These organizations will take care of the larger number of such cases, but it is possible that there may be families whose circumstances have not become known to the organizations.

It is also the case that there are citizens who would like to play Santa Claus for the benefit of some family in need of assistance, but who do not happen to know of such families.

The Examiner would suggest to these good fellows who want to help that they get into touch with City Relief Officer Miller, who knows his Peterboro like the proverbial book, and who is in a position to accurately designate households where assistance is urgently needed.

Citizens desiring to act in a Santa Claus role will assuredly be advised by Mr. Miller as to the best and most satisfactory manner to proceed.

THE FASTEST GAME IN THE WORLD.

Canadians interested in hockey—and there are few people in this country who are not at least to some degree—have read with a good deal of satisfaction of the successful introduction of professional hockey in New York City, where on Tuesday night the largest crowd that ever saw a hockey game—19,000 people—packed the new Madison Square arena to watch the New York team and the Montreal Canadiens do battle.

Tex Rickard, a master showman, launched the professional game with characteristic ceremonies that helped to intrigue the New Yorkers, but Canadians are satisfied that the game offers sufficient fascination to stand on its own merits, and are confident that the people across the border, fond as they are of quick-moving contests, will respond to the thrill of the fastest game in the world.

It is perhaps diverging from the truthful to say that Tuesday's match was the introduction of hockey into New York; as a matter of fact, hockey was played there years ago by amateur teams composed principally of expatriated Canadians.

But Rickard's methods, resulting in an attendance of 19,000 people, brought the game to the attention of thousands who never saw an exhibition of hockey before—and the majority of Canadians feel that nothing more was necessary and that the game itself will do the rest.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.

The Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission in detailing engineers to address school staffs and pupils on the subject of electrical hazards has taken a step that will meet with popular approval.

Peterboro's schools have been visited by a Hydro representative this week, who gave some very valuable advice as to the need of following safety first principles in the matter of electrical appliances, power wires, etc.

With the use of electricity continually on the increase, it becomes more and more necessary that the public should understand that there is an element of danger always present and should know how that danger can easily be avoided.

It is undoubtedly true that the school programme today contains about all that can be crowded into it, but no one will object to a lecture now and then on safety first principles when the number of fatal accidents published in the newspapers from day to day gives tragic emphasis to the need of such instruction.

Advice as to how to avoid electrical hazards comes with more impressive effect from an expert than from the school staffs, and the policy adopted by the Hydro Commission, when it has been carried out throughout the Province, should do much to reduce the list of accidents caused by carelessness in regard to electric appliances, handling of power wires and climbing power poles.

"SHOPPING" IN LAW.

If a prospective client wants legal services, consults a solicitor and decides not to engage him but to employ someone else, he need not pay for his preliminary consultation, according to a decision handed down [illegible] in Vancouver, denying a law [illegible] the Border Cities Star. His [illegible] I took several hours of his time, that each party to the [illegible] can now get a full night's [illegible] from his own point of view. It is inconvenient, for it may take as much of their time to hear the preliminary information as it would to formulate their legal advice. But in this they can rely on the sympathy of many others in the same position, who are continually giving service for nothing. The telephone girl calls three times as often for a "no answer" as she would for a response, but she returns your nickel. The merchant and his clerks spend hours every day showing goods and instructing prospective customers, who leave without buying. The newspaper man may dig for a hundred stories and get one. The realtor drives land-seekers for miles and sees them go on to someone else.

Whether it is just to all concerned or not, the public has grown accustomed to "window-shopping" and would be astonished if its right to do so were questioned. That is the problem confronting the solicitor, just the same as it confronts the shoe clerk.

AN EXPURGATED PRESS.

Editing a newspaper is popularly supposed to be one of the things which anybody can do infinitely better than it is done. Nearly every reader who scans the columns of his favorite journal has his own ideas about it. One would abolish the editorial page either because he does not agree with the views expressed therein, or because he does not read it. Another thinks that too much space is devoted to sport; a third, that there is not enough. Still another would cut out what he chooses to call the "uplift stuff," to which the more godly type of reader would, of course, give greater prominence; and so on, each having his own conception not only of what is news, but of how it should be apportioned or displayed.

Recently, it has occurred to a number of good people on the other side of the line that there is room for vast improvement on the part of the newspapers in the selection and display of news relating to crime. In fact, so strongly do they feel about it, that there has been quite an agitation in favor of the total suppression of that kind of matter, the ground taken being that it has a pernicious influence upon the minds of readers generally, and is apt to incite to violation of the law. To give these reformers an opportunity to demonstrate what they know, or thought they knew, about editing, the proprietors of newspapers in several Western and Middle Western cities turned them over for a day, allowing the amateurs to air their views and exercise their taste and discrimination in the choice of matter for publication.

The results, we are told, were not impressive. "The reforms effected," it is said, "were largely or wholly negative—that is, what is called criminal news was left out altogether, or cut down to the bare bones." Except that it may have revealed to the would-be editors some of the difficulties connected with the running of a newspaper, the experiment, of course, proved nothing, unless it were, perhaps, that with a continuation of the reformers in the editorial chair, there would soon have been no further need either for their services, or for those of the regular occupants, for the simple reason that the newspapers so censored would in all probability have died a natural death—sudden too had competition been started.

What constitutes news is a vexed question which not even the trained journalist can always determine with certainty, though, obviously, he is in an infinitely better position to gauge its value and importance than the inexperienced outsider. It is a question of judgment and taste governed primarily by a knowledge of what best appeals to the reading public and qualified by a sense of the responsibility which attaches to the conduct of a respectable journal. "Human interest" is a term somewhat hackneyed in its application to the contents of a newspaper, but it defines better than any other the element in news that is essential. And that there is a very wide and potent human appeal in stories of crime is proved not only by the experience of every newspaper editor, but by the public demand for other forms of reading in which the life and lawless actions of the underworld are revealed.

But it is not altogether a matter of catering to a taste which the "unco guid" may regard as vicious and depraved. Desirable as the suppression of criminal news might seem to a certain class of moral reformers, it would be even more welcome to the criminals themselves, for then they would escape a form of punishment in the exposure of their deeds which only the hopelessly hardened do not fear and feel. Left unexposed, the detection and punishment of crime would lose half their terrors. The agitation in favor of the suppression of so-called criminal news is based on a false view of human nature and journalistic responsibility. An expurgated press might have its virtues, but a general and legitimate appeal to human interest would not be one of them.—Ottawa Journal.

MRS. JAS. BYERS RECEIVES GIFT

South Monaghan Friends Bid Her Farewell—A.Y.P.A. Sale.

MILLBROOK NEWS.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 17.—A very pleasant social evening was recently spent at the home of Mrs. Jas Byers, South Monaghan, when a number of friends gathered to bid her farewell before her departure for Schumacher, N.Y., where she is going to keep house for her son, Dr. R. Byers.

The time passed pleasantly with music and social converse, and when suitable opportunity presented itself, Mrs. T. A. Skitch, district president of the Women's Institute, read the following address, and Mrs. J. W. Whyte, on behalf of the many friends of the hostess, presented her with a set of breakfast dishes in attractive pattern of blue and gold.

Mrs. James Byers,
South Monaghan.

Dear Mrs. Byers—It is with mingled feelings of regret and pleasure that we, your old friends assembled here this evening to bid you adieu before your departure from our midst. Regret because you are about to leave us; and pleasure, because this opportunity is afforded us of expressing our feelings toward you.

During you life-long residence among us, you have by your unfailing courtesy and generous good-will shown you are a good citizen and a kind-hearted friend, never failing to lend a helping hand in time of need. However, what we lose in your departure will be some others gain.

In expressing our respects to you, we kindly ask you to please accept this breakfast set as a slight token showing in part the high esteem in which you are held. And our sincere wish is that you may find among those to whom you go the staunch friends we would wish you to find.

Also wishing you every happiness with your son, Dr. R. Byers, in your new home at Schumacher, and while enjoying your morning repast, may you have many kind recollections of your friends at Bailieboro.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Mrs. Levi Byers,
Mrs. J. W. Whyte.
Mrs. T. A. Skitch.

Taken completely by surprise, Mrs Byers found reply difficult, but in a few brief, but sincere, words expressed her appreciation of the not only beautiful and useful gift, but also of the kind words which accompanied it.

Later in the evening a dainty lunch was served, the guests lingering for some time afterward before final good-byes were spoken and departure made for the various homes.

Sale of Cooking.

The sale of home-made cooking, candy, and fancy work held under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A. of St. Thomas' Church on Saturday afternoon in Mr. C. C. Garside's store was quite successful, everything being disposed of by the closing hour.

The Christmas atmosphere was emphasized by the decorations of red and green, and the daintily laid afternoon tea tables were well patronized. A much larger stock of the wares attractively displayed on the different counters could have been readily sold.

Among those assisting were: Mrs Thos. Harkness, Mrs. Russell Smith, Mrs. Walter Harkness, Mrs. W. Hilton, and Miss M. Christie. Miss Muriel Smith was convenor of the tea committee, her helpers being Misses A. Attwoolll, L. Shaw, and Muriel Lang.

L.O.L. Officers.

The following are the officers of L.O.L. No. 79, Millbrook, for 1925: W.M., D. Patton; D.M., R. J. McKnight; Captain, W. T. A. Deyell; Assistant Chaplain, R. A. Hunter; R.S., R. McDonald; Treasurer, J. L. Byam; Director of Ceremonies, W. Francey; Lesturers, W. Wood, Chas. Lunn. Committeemen, W. Bingham, I. M. Nattrass, T. H. Harkness, S. Fisher, J. Guthrie, Tyler, J. Guthrie.

Mrs. F. McCorry wishes to thank the many friends who so kindly remembered her during her recent serious illness.

Rev. R. S. Hosking, B.A., of Toronto, will be the preacher for the anniversary services in connection with the Sunday School of the United Church on Sunday, December 27. Mr. Hosking is chief probation officer of the Juvenile Court, Toronto, and was the speaker who gained such favor locally when he gave an address at the men's banquet here last spring.

Mr. J. Miltz spent the week-end with his wife and family in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Clarry, and two children, Nora and Jack, of Calgary, are guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Clarry. Mr. Clarry was injured in an automobile accident before coming east and has not yet recovered from the injury sustained.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

APPROVES CANDIDATURE

c-o The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Reading in your paper the name of J. O. Fife for Mayor candidate I as well as a big number of citizens were pleased, as Mr. Fife is the man deserving of the seat. Mr. J. O. Fife since he has been an Alderman has given most of his time to the city's interest; and since his appointment as chairman of the Board of Works he has been working day and night for the improvements of the city. And he is a man who won't let the people's money be spent unnecessarily. He is a man that every citizen should vote for.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 16.—The small supply of cattle today left room for a clean-up and in the first two hours practically all the butchers stuff was disposed of at steady prices. There were a lot of bulls on sale, and the exporters bought a little lower, from $4.50 to $5.75 a cwt. Bologna and poor butchers' bulls cost $3.25 to $4 a cwt. Two cars of springer cows were made up today from $85 to $105 each, and these prices were firm. These go to Quebec. A renewed demand for canner cows is in effect, and few were had today at $2.25 a cwt. One load of 900-lb. Western feeders sold at $5.85 a cwt. Two loads of butchers' selected from this week's purchases were sold from $7 to $8.25 a cwt.

The demand is fully equal if not in excess of the supply in calves, and sellers are in control of prices. Choice calves sold at 14 to 14½ cents and bunches of light calves at 12 to 12½ cents a pound. Medium calves were 9 to 11½ cents.

Packers with a good supply of lambs have been protecting the market, but on Tuesday they stood from under, and as a deck of fair quality lambs under 90 lbs. was bought at 13½ cents a pound. A clean-up of a lot of poor quality lambs was made this morning from 12½ to 13 cents and a few brought 13½ cents a pound.

Some kind of a compromise is being made in the hog market. All Tuesday's hogs were turned over without the tickets being marked, but it is doubtful whether this will be below $12.50 a cwt. f.o.b. Not many hogs are expected in until after the New Year, and this encourages a firm market.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 16 (Canadian Press) — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows:

Sterling demand—$4.84 3-4
Sterling Cables—$4.85 1-8.

EGGS AND POULTRY

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 16 (Canadian Press)—A further rise in turkey prices at Montreal and Toronto are the chief feature of conditions today. Egg markets remain generally firm with increased receipts in British Columbia bringing rather unsettled conditions there.

Toronto, eggs unchanged; turkeys firm to higher and are 40c to 45c wholesale.

Montreal — Limited supplies of fresh eggs have resulted in a cent increase; storage market unchanged. The dressed poultry trade showed considerable strength with an advance of 3c to 4c reported. It is reported that turkey sales of choice lots hae been made at as high as 45 cents.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press)—In an excited market today, wheat prices swung rapidly over a big range, closing strong at a material advance after a sharp early break. The fluctuations hinged altogether on swift changes in view regarding a crop report from the Argentine government which to the trade in general appeared extraordinarily optimistic compared with Argentine official figures issued the day previous.

A maximum upturn of 7 1-4c a bushel in prices left the wheat market in the end 5-8 to 3 5-8c net higher, new style, December 175 to 175 1-2 and May 170 3-8 to 170 1-2 with corn 1-8c off to 1-8c up, oats at 1-8c to 1-4 at 3-8c gain, and provisions varying from 12c decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Something akin to a general rush to sell wheat took place as soon as the wheat market opened. A complete official crop report from the Argentine government has been received overnight estimating the total yield of wheat in Argentina this season as 215,000,000 bushels. This total would suggest an exportable surplus of 140,000,000 bushels, whereas recent unofficial estimates of surplus pointed to as little as 43,000,000 bushels, surprise over the complete report was intensified by the fact that Argentine government figures yesterday for two provinces indicated a reduction of 47,000,000 bushels from last year's harvest in the district referred to.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 16 (Canadian Press) — Trading on the Montreal grain market today was almost at a standstill, the wide fluctuations in Winnipeg precluding much change for foreign transactions. In the market for coarse grains prices secured a firmer tendency, although the amount of business done was of an extremely light nature. Car lots of Quebec and Ontario No. 1 white oats sold at 53c, No. 3 at 51 1-2c and No. 4 at 50c per bushel, ex-track. Canadian western grades were advanced one cent per bushel.

The market for white corn flour is quiet at $6.80 to $7 per barrel in jute bags, delivered to the trade.

Finest creamery butter is quoted at 45 cents per pound in solid packages and 46 cents per pound in one pound blocks.

Cheese receipts here amounted to 580 boxes, as compared with 1418 boxes on the same day of last week and 221 boxes on the corresponding day of last year. Business in this commodity is quiet, but prices are steady.

Receipts of eggs totalled 677 cases, as compared with 172 cases on the same day of last week and 1204 cases on the corresponding day of last year. A fairly good business is being done but the demand is not quite as brisk as had been expected for this time of the year; prices are firm.

NO REBATE FOR BOWLING CLUB

Annual Charges Against Electric Line Explained By Engineer.

POLLING OFFICERS.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 17.—A delegation from the Lawn Bowling Club waited on the town council some time ago and asked the members of that body to use their influence to induce the Water and Light Commission to allow the club a reduction in their electric light bill. The position taken by the club was that when the system was installed on the green the commission was at considerable expense in extending the line to that part of the town but as these transmission lines had been continued to other plants the club members were of the opinion that the granting of a rebate would be in order.

At a meeting of the council Tuesday night a report was received from R. W. Scott, engineer of the Commission, who after giving a detailed statement of the cost of the primary line from Saskatoon avenue to the bowling green, the total outlay being $274, proceeds as follows:

"In the maintenance and operation of a line such as this, there are three general items of expense to be taken into account, namely, interest on capital invested, depreciation and maintenance. At 12 per cent. per annum for the general items the writer feels that he is putting quite a low figure. Twelve per cent. on $274 works out at $32.88. On this basis the line is costing the Water and Light Commission $32.88 before one watt of energy is taken. It will be noted also that the transformer and the cost of its installation has not been taken into consideration.

"If I add to the above the cost of the power consumed at the bowling green it will be to the disadvantage of the bowling club, and I am not writing a report on this phase until requested to do so.

"I shall be glad to have the above estimate published and referred to any competent engineer or construction man."

A THOUGHT.

A LAUGH.

A laugh is just like sunshine,
It freshens all the day,
It tips the peaks of life with light,
And drives the clouds away.
And the thing that goes the farthest
Toward making life worth while
That costs the least and does the most,
Is just a friendly smile.

Miss Greta Carlisle, 23 Leonard St., Brantford, Ont., writes:—"A short while ago, my face was completely covered with large red pimples, and it seemed that it was almost impossible for me to get rid of them, as nothing I took seemed to do me any good.

One day I noticed an advertisement of and I will never regret the day I bought it, as, now, my face is entirely cleared up of blotches and pimples of every kind."

"Cheap?" says Grandpa. "It's a gift!"

"I've figured it out. Kruschen at a half a cent a dose is from 4 to 16 times cheaper than any of those fizzy drinks that protest so noisily.

"And then think what you get for your half-cent. Not just a single salt. Kruschen is a perfect blend of those six natural salts which are vital to your bodily well-being. Every day you must have these salts, or things go wrong inside you.

"The analysis is on the bottle. There are sodium and magnesium to clear away the waste matter that clogs your system and poisons your blood. Besides, they increase the flow of the fluids that stimulate the organs of elimination. To feed your tissues, there's the tonic potassium."

You will do well to listen to Grandpa. So long as you get the right proportion of these salts each day, your blood is pure and virile, your system is kept clean, your tissues have their proper allowance of oxygen. But once the supply fails, when your system is overtaxed through lack of fresh air and exercise, errors of diet, and a sendentary occupation, then you become a prey to all the little ills that make life just not worth while.

As much as will cover a ten cent piece every morning, tasteless in your breakfast cup of coffee or tea, makes good every deficiency. It sends clear, vigorous blood pounding gloriously through every vein, priming you with a tingling vitality that you have never known before — that "Kruschen feeling" of which you've heard so much.

A 75c bottle contains 160 morning "pinches." Get a bottle at once and start to-morrow. You'll feel many years younger before you're many days older.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

A 75c bottle of Kruschen Salts contains 160 doses—nearly enough for six months—which means bounding health for less than half a cent a day. The dose prescribed for daily use for adults is "as much as will lie on a 10 cent piece," taken in your breakfast cup of coffee or tea. Every druggist sells Kruschen. Get a 75c bottle to-day.

AIRPLANE MISSING SIX YEARS, SINCE AVIATOR DISAPPEARED, FOUND IN MASSACHUSETTS WOODS

Wreckage Overgrown With Moss and Stripling Bushes May Solve Mystery.

SEARCHING TO-DAY.

Lost Hunter Did Not Realize Significance of Find—Canadian Flier.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press). — The moss-grown wreckage of a plane found by a hunter in a thicket in a lonely section of the town of Tyringham may solve a mystery of more than six years—the unexplained disappearance of Captain Mansell R. James, a Canadian aviator, in the early summer of 1919. A searching party left here to-day to find and examine the plane and to beat the woods for the body of the lost flier.

Members of a party which went into the Tyringham woods some days ago in quest of deer yesterday reported that Warren Campbell, of Brooklyn, N.Y., one of their number, became lost and wandered on the plane wreckage miles away from a human habitant. He paid little attention to his discovery, believing that others had found it before him. It was only when the news was brought here that the wreck was linked up with the loss of Captain James. Campbell had gone on to his home in Brooklyn, but Eugene Chague, of Lenox, one of his hunting companions, volunteered to head the search party.

Won Boston Trophy.

The Canadian aviator, who had served in the World War with the Royal Air Force, won late in May, 1919, a competitive flight from Atlantic City to Boston for a cup offered by the Boston Globe and a purse of $1,000. He left Boston on June 1 to return to Atlantic City, followed the wrong railroad line and lost his bearings in the western part of Massachusetts. He came down at Tyringham, and next morning set out in ideal weather and wind conditions to resume the flight. Persons at the Tyringham Field saw him fly southward and then turn suddenly west as if to return, but he passed from view. He never was seen or heard of again.

His uncle, Dr. J. F. James, of Sarnia, Ont., offered a reward of $500 for his discovery and the search was carried on for months. Many clues were followed and dropped, and finally the quest was abandoned as hopeless. One theory was that the aviator had fallen into a lake or the ocean.

Overgrown With Bushes.

Campbell, the hunter, stumbled on the plane as he wandered about looking for his companions. It lay in a thicket of bushes in a remote section at least four miles from a house or highway. The tail and wings of the machine appeared to be intact, but bushes had grown up about the fusilage, partially concealing it. A tree, partially rotted, lay nearby, and there was every indication that years had passed since the plane fell. Because he failed to grasp the significance of his find, Campbell did not mark the spot, and Chague, who is to lead the searching party, expressed some doubt as to whether he would be able to find the wreckage.

The plane in which Captain James made his flight was a Sopwith biplane, a small, fast machine. The members of the hunting party were unable to tell what type of plane was found in the Tyringham Woods.

PARIS, Dec. 17. — (Canadian Press).—Paul Doumer, former president of the chamber of deputies and chairman of the finance committee of the Senate, accepted last evening the weighty responsibility of the finance ministry in the cabinet of Premier Briand.

M. Doumer was the premier's first choice to succeed Lois Loucheur, forced out because of the rejection of his financial measures, but he was not the candidate of the leaders of the parliamentary majority on which M. Briand depends for the support of his government, hence, difficulties arose which during the better part of the day seemed likely to prevent the premier from putting the man he wanted in this important position.

Socialist Demands.

Delegations of the Radical-Socialist coalition which were in conference when M. Doumer called on the Premier at the Quai D'Orsay to receive the definite offer of the portfolio showed a disposition to propose impossible conditions to their approval of his nomination. This was sufficient to explain the deep sigh with which the new minister of finance said when he left M. Briand: "Alas! Yet I have accepted the task and will do my best."

The fact that the premier forestalled final action by the left coalition by nominating M. Doumer over their objections is taken as indicating that he finally has determined to accept no further dictation and has decided to go ahead with a safe man, who, though generally recognized as possessing no remarkable competence in financial matters, is expected to resolutely push sane measures prepared by capable technical authorities for the restoration of the nation's finances

Indirect Taxation.

M. Doumer's plans for the solution of France's financial difficulties are based principally on increases in indirect taxation rather than on any form of capital levy or increases in the income taxes.

FROWNING ROW OF OPPOSITION IN NEXT HOUSE

Gaps in Conservative Front Rank Filled For New Session.

STALWARTS BACK.

"Bob" Rogers, Dr. Edwards, Sir George Perley With Hon. Mr. Meighen.

OTTAWA, Dec. 17. (Canadian Press).—The 15th Parliament which will convene next month will witness a chance in the location of the seats in the House of the Prime Minister and Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader. The seat for the Prime Minister will be located two seats nearer the centre of the Chamber, with Mr. Meighen occupying a corresponding seat on the Opposition side.

This arrangement was agreed to at a conference Wednesday between W. A. Boys, Chief Conservative Whip, P. F. Casgrain, acting Chief Liberal Whip, and Lt.-Col. H. W. Bowie, Sergeant-at-Arms. The change in the seating accommodations for the Government and the Opposition leaders will permti all the members in the Chamber to hear them in future to better advantage.

The Progressives, in all probability, will sit on the Government side of the House, further removed from the Speaker's chair.

To date, no intimation in respect to the location desired by the "Ginger Group" has been received; but there appears some likelihood that they may sit near their former seats on the Opposition side.

Conservative Front Line.

The return to Parliament of a number of former Conservative Cabinet Ministers is being recognized by the Conservative party by placing them in the front benches on that side of the Chamber. Conservative Parliamentarians, who will occupy front seats on the Opposition side with their leader will include Hon. R. J. Manion, Hon. Dr. Tolmie, Hon. R. B. Bennett, Sir Henry Drayton, Hon. Robert Rogers, Sir George Perley, Hon. H. H. Stevens, Hon. Edmund Bristol, Hon. Hugh Guthrie, General Mewburn and Hon. J. W. Edwards. Chief Conservative Whip W. A. Boys, Sam. Charters, assistant Chief Whip; J. D. Chaplin, M.P.; R. B. Ryckman, M.P., and a number of others will occupy seats directly behind and in close proximity to their leader.

The Ministerial benches will, of course, be occupied by the Ministers of the various Government departments.

SHIP AGROUND PILOT BLAMED

Dominion Wreck Commissioner Hears Evidence, Reserves Judgment.

PILOT DROWNED.

QUEBEC, Que., Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Captain L. A. Demers, Dominion Wreck Commissioner, closed his inquiry yesterday into the grounding of the Steamer Airedale at Ileaux Coudres on December 5 when her pilot, Jules Lachance, disappeared.

"I do not want to keep the boat in Quebec," said Captain Demers, "and to allow her to leave before the ice is too thick, I shall render judgment on Saturday. In the meantime, I will hold Captain Butcher and second officer Hunter's certificates until judgment is rendered."

The morning session of the inquiry was taken with the evidence and in the afternoon, in less than an hour, the advocates made their pleas.

A. R. Holden, K.C., acting for the Airedale, contended that the evidence showed Pilot Lachance responsible for the accident.

On Wrong Direction

"Many times," said Mr. Holden, "the boat went on wrong direction." The pilot claimed that the compass was not in good form but the captain of the ship swore to the contrary. When the Airedale was grounded, Pilot Lachance said that she was on the south shore while she was on the north. The unfortunate pilot is dead and there is no reason to blame any other man for the accident."

Cecil Thompson, the captain's advocate, who also represented second officer Hunter, pleaded that both had done their duty.

"But why did he leave the bridge?" questioned Capt. Demers.

"He was only absent for a few minutes," answered Mr. Thompson.

"The duty of a captain whose ship has been in trouble many times is to stay at his post," declared the Commissioner.

Emile Parent, who represented the family of Jules Lachance, spoke in exoneration of the unfortunate man.

VOLSTEAD LAW IS DENOUNCED

U. S. Senators Declare It Breeds Hypocrisy and Crime.

DEFENDED, TOO.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Not since the days when the proposition to submit the Eighteenth amendment to the States was under debate in the Senate, has that chamber staged a wet and dry duel such as featured the final three hours of Tuesday's session. The Volstead law was denounced as a breeder of crime, as an hypocricy, and as a curse to the citizenship by Senators Bruce of Maryland, Edge of New Jersey, and King of Utah, while Senators Willis of Ohio, Sheppard of Texas, and McKellar of Tennessee were on the firing line for the drys.

Prohibition, said Senator Bruce, was the most efficient incubator of crime in the United States, while Senator Edge declared that no statute ever enacted in the history of the world had been more generally violated or more generally condemned than had the Volstead law.

On the other Senator Sheppard, author of the Eighteent amendment, insisted that prohibition was a success and that the agitation for a more strict enforcement was only beginning. Senator Willis cited the city of Washington as an example of the efficiency of prohibition enforcement, and Senator McKellar made the wets smile when he exclaimed that in his opinion there was not one fiftieth as much drinking going on in Tennessee as was the case before the country went dry.

Denouncing the existing prohibition situation as it has seldom been denounced from the floor of either house of Congress, Senator Bruce, facing Senator Sheppard, reminded him that "law is like an individual, and if it is to be respected it must be a respectable law."

Referring to Brig. Gen. Butler of the Marines, who went to Philadelphia to dry up that city, Senator Bruce said he went in with a fanfare of trumpets and waving of plumes, and came out realizing that it was a herculean job to enforce "an absolutely unenforceable thing." As did Senator Edge, Senator Bruce charged that today for the first time in history the worst elements of society were in alliance with some of the best of the elements, the elements in mind being the bootleggers in the lower strata and the bone drys in the higher strata of society.

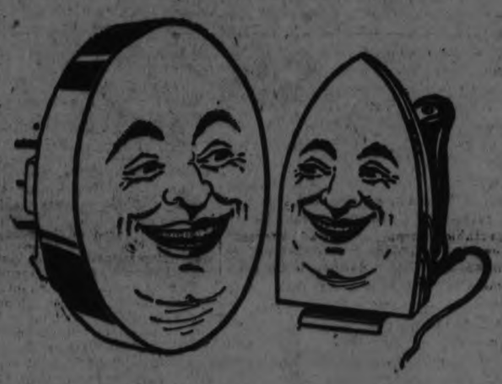
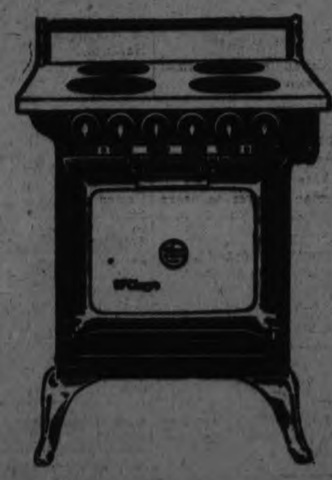
The New Element SPEEDIRON PAT'D and REG'D. 1925

Makes Electric Range Operation Simple and Trouble Proof



"Hello, Speediron, so you are making the Electric Range as simple to operate as I am"



McCLARY'S, always in the lead in improving the Electric Range, have now eliminated the last Elemental weakness in the Electric Range. McClary's Electric Range, with their new Element, Speediron, is as simple and trouble-proof as an Electric Iron.

McClary's Speediron Element cannot be damaged by spills or knocks. Pots or pans cannot damage it. Forks or spoons cannot touch and short circuit the coils. Boiled over liquids cannot break the hot porcelain nor cause the coils to burn out. Nothing gets into the Speediron Element. Nothing can happen to the coils except to burn out, and sooner or later that happens to all coils, just as it happens to bulbs or fuses.

When a Coil Burns Out

When a coil burns out you simply lift out McClary's Speediron Element. With little effort and expense you replace the coil, then drop the element back into place. It is just as easy and simple to replace the unit as it is to plug in your iron or toaster.

Quite different from any other type element. When a coil burns out in any other element you have to send for a service electrician. If the element is one of the open type the porcelain will probably be so badly cracked and broken that an expensive repair is necessary. If it is a solid iron or porcelain element with embedded coil, the whole unit is a total loss of several dollars, because the burnt out coil cannot be replaced.

Come and See It

If you have an Electric Range you will want to see this new, splendid improvement, because you know all about Electric Range troubles now. If you are going to buy an Electric Range you should see the Speediron Element in McClary's Electric Range—the trouble-proof Element.

The new Speediron Elements are now on view at all leading dealers. Come and see it—today.

To Start Articles.

The ORACLE will, at an early date, start a series of articles on how to gain success, pointing out the way in which the advice given in these columns may be applied.

So many requests have come for readings that the original plan of answering every day's on the following day has been abandoned. There is room for only a few every day, and they are being published as quickly as possible. Watch every day so that yours will not be missed. The answers are appearing in order as received. If yours has not been sent in yet, do not delay. Have it in readiness to read in connection with the articles.

W. F.—Yours is a really great personality, starting with high mentality, developed by apt assimilation of the lessons of life and added to by a distinctive grace of manner. Your achievements will not be great in a material way, but you will gain success in the truest sense of the word in spiritual and mental superiority. You desire to know the truth about everything that comes under your notice, and probably demand too much of your associates of lesser mentality than yourself. Your health is not so well preserved, and attention should be paid to it. Undertake no new ventures on the day you mention, and be especially on your guard. Avoid argument and excitement. Your color is canary. You were born on a Tuesday.

Slim.—You are not very steadfast in your manner and your characteristics indicate uncertainty. You have a brain capable of much power, and with perception well developed and concentration will gain high standing in the work of your choice. You have a good, fibrous constitution and are physically efficient. You have a good capacity for tracing effects to their sources, but your ability to reason depends upon the influence of the larger faculties. Study sciences of an abstract nature. You have a lively sense of humor, and make a happy companion. Your sympathies are quickly aroused. You can love cordially and faithfully a person of the opposite sex, and appreciate a married rather than a single life. If love be interrupted, you can change and love another person well, if the subject be suitable. You will attain business success only through hard work. The day of which you enquire is not an auspicious one on which to enter new social relations. In fact, your reading clearly and definitely states: "Do not marry on this day." Your color is opal. You were born on a Friday.

Billy-boy.—You have a fair average mentality, but will not rise very high in the world. You shine at social functions and can make yourself agreeable in any function. Life is mostly frills to you, and you should get down to solid ground while youth is yet young. You have great physical power and would shine in sports, but are not aggressive. There is a streak of laziness in your makeup, which you should take pains to eradicate. You should settle down before thinking of marrying. Your color is mauve. You were born on a Sunday.

S. J.—Cultivate diplomacy. You are apt to be aggressive and sometimes your nature leads you to give offence where none is intended. You should study to avoid hurting others' feelings. Your mentality is average, but is more highly developed in mathematics than in other ways. You could with little effort broaden your intellect by judicious reading and your excellent memory for facts and figures should be used to good advantage. You are still on the threshold of life, and the next few years will be important ones. A young lady of prepossessing nature will enter your life soon; prove worthy of her. Cultivate a liking for music, a charm that lightens many loads. Your color is gas-blue. You were born on a Saturday.

C. S. J. F.—You should associate yourself carefully with others in most enterprises, realizing that in union there is strength. You have considerable poise and self-satisfaction; you are careful and conservative, seeking more solid comfort than glory and renown. You are witty, and, if necessary, apt at turning various things into ridicule. You possess a good share of perception of analogies, and are successful in drawing deductions. You can generally judge correctly of the lapse of time, yet may not be so precise as could be desired; with practice (other things being equal) can keep good time in music. You are a practical observer of men and things; have keen insight; like to individualize everything. The day of which you enquire is past. Your color is steel. You were born on a Wednesday.

J. W. J.—You are in the wrong business. Success will come to you only when you are working for yourself in some enterprise that gives room for the exercise of your engineering skill. You excel in mathematical exactness and should concentrate on this and on your drawing ability. There is an indication of dissipation in your reading, which it would be well for you to correct before it goes too far. Live a clean life or your mental powers will be speedily impaired. Develop your spiritual nature and look more on the light side of life. A little nonsense is good now and then. Your color is tan. You were born on a Tuesday.

T. H. W.—If I told you all I see in your reading even your pen-name would not shield you from the ridicule which would follow publication. You know what is wrong—correct it. You are adept at excusing yourself—like the man who said the O.T.A. drove him to drink—but you are on the down-grade. If you want me to particularize, send a stamped envelope.

C. M.—"Joy" is the keynote of your life, and although you have suffered, your naturally buoyant spirit has lifted you above the tragedies and sorrows. You are inefficient in managing your home, but happy in it, and your deep affection endears you to your family. That in itself is a great achievement, one upon which you may pride yourself. You are appreciated in Church or whatever social activities interest you, and succeed in doing a great deal of good for others. Your color is white. You were born on a Sunday. The day of which you enquire would be a good one on which to start a journey. In business matters you should take competent advice before plunging.

W. J. S.—You are retiring in manner and reserved, with an inclination to let others take the lead. Your introspection may lead you toward the occult. The influence of art is marked in your reading; you appreciate art in any of its forms—acting, writing, singing, dancing, painting. With concentration you should excel in a business career, but cultivation of initiative would be necessary before you would reach an executive position. You are dexterous and creative in fancy work. You have excellent perception of relative size; are annoyed by seeing things out of place; like harmony of proportion. You have a good share of ability to copy and take pattern from what you see done, but are not inclined to imitate others when you see a better way to proceed. You are amiable and kindly disposed to all, and should make many friends. Assert yourself; take your proper place in society; do not hide your light. Do not enter controversy on the day you name. It is a good day on which to complete a task. You were born on a Tuesday. Your characteristics vibrate to no color, hence your keynote is black, the absence of color.

Tommy.—You forgot to send your birth date.

E. D.—How would it be to ask the young lady? This is not a matrimonial bureau.

U.S. NOT INTERESTED IN MOSUL DECISION

Chester Concession Is No Longer American Owned.

WASHINGTON, December 17.—(Canadian Press).—It is the understanding in official circles here that Admiral Colby M. Chester's holdings in the Chester oil concession in Mesopotamia, have been taken over by British interests.

In answer to questions on this subject the state department has indicated that it has lost interest in the Chester concession, on the ground that it no longer has any reason to believe the concession is American-owned. It is understood that British and Canadian interests have taken over the Chester holdings, either in whole or in a major part.

Accordingly it is said American interests are not affected by the League decision that the territory in which the Chester concession is located is a part of Iraq.

BRITISH INTERESTS ARE SAFEGUARDED

Under Secretary Says Government Is Watching Mexican Petroleum Bill.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (Canadian Press).—Godfrey Locker Lampson, undersecretary for home affairs, announced in the House of Commons last evening that the British Government had taken all steps that seemed desirable to safeguard British interests affected by the Petroleum bill in the Mexican Congress.

SCHOLARS LEARN ABOUT ELECTRICITY

Hazards of Live Wires and Other Apparatus Are Explained.

Mr Mulligan, a Hydro-Electric engineer of Toronto, visited the Peterboro public schools on Tuesday last and gave valuable information to the teachers and pupils on electrical hazards.

Some of the points explained were:

A person touching a wire carrying electricity or any electrical appliance which has become defective and its at the same time standing on the ground or any other conductive substance, or being in contact with piping such as water or gas piping or radiators, may receive a shock. As one never knows when electrical apparatus may be faulty, precautions must be taken especially when in basements or bathrooms.

Some of the wires one sees on the poles are covered with a black looking substance known as weatherproofing. This weatherproofing should never be considered as insulation and any wire so covered should be considered as a bare wire.

If a fallen wire should be dicovered lying on the street or hanging from the trees or poles, it should not be touched or handled but the electric light company should immediately be communicated with, and if possible, the wire should be guarded to prevent some irresponsible person coming in contact with it.

An appeal was made to the children to refrain from climbing poles, flying kites or stringing aerials near electric lines, and the hazards involved were pointed out. Full details advising what should be avoided when erecting aerials may be obtained from the Inspection Department of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

A demonstration on the prone pressure method of resuscitation was given. The method is the one in which all Hydro-Electric Power Commission employees are trained. Wonderful success has been obtained from this training. During the past nine months, five men have been resuscitated from electrical shock. This same methods is equally applicable in cases of drowning, or gas poisoning. Pulmotors and lungmotors are forbidden in the Hydro-Electric Power Commission and were discarded eight years ago.

HOPEFUL VIEW OF SITUATION IN BRITISH CIRCLES

No Wish to Stifle Turkey, and Negotiations Are Expected.

RELATIONS THE SAME.

Turks Feel, However, That People of Mosul Won't Accept Decision.

LONDON, Dec. 17. — (Canadian Press). — A most hopeful view taken here regarding the situation growing out of the endorsement by the League of Nations of Great Britain's position regarding the Mosul boundary in the kingdom of Irak is that an opportunity now is to be given the negotiators to attempt to arrange a friendly understanding between Turkey and Great Britain. Hostilities between Turkey and Great Britain over the latter having secured the mandate for the rich oil and agricultural region are not considered probable, either in London or in League of Nations circles in Geneva.

In some quarters in London the Government's attitude toward Turkey is said to embrace a desire to see Turkey live and not be stifled or paralyzed. It is reported that reassuring communications regarding Mosul already have passed between London and Angora, and it is expected that Premier Baldwin will make a statement to Parliament on the situation at an early date. Until he does so, the line the Government purposes to take is likely to remain pure guess work.

"Mosul Won't Accept."

GENEVA, Dec. 17. — (United Press).—"Turkey's relations with Great Britain will remain as heretofore, but the Mosul population, I am convinced, will never accept the League Council's Mosul decision," declared Turkish Foreign Minister Tewfik Bey to-day before departing for Paris. This declaration (perhaps significant for the absence of any real "war" threat) supplemented the statements of Tewfik's colleague, Rouschid Bey, yesterday, to the effect that the whole question of the Mosul award to Britain now rested with the Angora Assembly.

Assembly to Consider.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 17. — (United Press).—The Turkish Government will submit to the Angora Assembly the whole question of the unfavorable League Council decision, whereby Great Britain obtains control of Mosul as part of an extended Irak mandate. The unfavorable decision was not unexpected, since advices in advance had indicated such an outcome.
